ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

All the professional catchers are supplied by me, and one letter given below proves that my goods are far and away the best on the market. "Gedney, Holbeach, Lines, Dec. 16th, 1910. Sir,—Please excuse delay in acknowledging receipt of come and go net. It is very cheap indeed, and unlike most cheap things it is very good. How you can do them at the money I cannot make out. You are easily first man for any sort of nets. Thanks for sending net with extra strong gearing; it's just how I wanted it. I shall send for the 20-yard pair of clap nets, and also several more single nets in a week or so.—Yours, Charlie Cubley." Please note this letter is from the well-known Lincolnshire bird catcher, who catches more birds in one day than the average man sees in a lifetime. I offer £50 sterling to anyone who can prove this letter is not entirely unsolicited and genuine.

GREAT DISPERSAL SALE OF C. PRIOR'S COLLECTION OF BRITISH FINCHES, the finest collection in existence; probably the finest ever got together.

I regret to announce that I am compelled to part with the whole of my collection of choice British birds. What is an unfortunate circumstance from my point of view, however, is a stroke of real good fortune to all readers of "Cage Birds," who wish to become possessed of birds of exceptional quality, either for exhibition or breeding purposes, upon unprecedented terms.

I invite everybody who reads this to write stating their requirements, and naming the price they wish to pay, not forgetting to enclose stamp for reply.

The collection, totalling upwards of 250 birds, mainly consists of the following, viz.:—

GOLDFINCHES, BULLFINCHES,

LINNETS, TWITES,

REDPOLLS, SISKINS (cocks and hens),

BRAMBLEFINCHES, CHAFFINCHES,

GREENFINCHES, YELLOWHAMMERS, etc.

Also my winning Song Thrush and Blackbirds, and all other winners not yet sold.

I wish to draw special attention to the following which place this collection far above all others.

Firstly, my facilities for obtaining, and my experience in selecting specimens "in the rough," are such that I have been able for ten years past to bring out teams of fresh winners each year, without purchasing a single ready-made winner.

Secondly, the birds I have exhibited myself during this time have won more prizes than I can remember, and those I have supplied to other exhibitors an even greater number. Many winning mules and hybrids have also been bred from them.

Finally, a very large proportion of the All-England are undoubtedly in this collection at the present moment, for I have never possessed birds of finer quality. I just want applicants to bear these facts in mind when naming their prices. This doesn't mean that I ask ridiculous fancy figures for them. I cannot afford to exactly give them away, but I promise to comply with every request that is not entirely unreasonable.

All my show cages, stock cages, flights, and various utensils, etc., are also for sale, cheap.

Silk's Champion Norwich.

Do not buy cheap, so-called champion strains; take advice from a Norwich specialist. I keep no other variety. My aviaries have some of the most choice specimens of Norwich in the British Isles. Blood tells despite what you hear to the contrary. I have a genuine life experience in this most popular variety. Being, as all the cage bird Fancy knows, an expert on this variety, and one of the largest breeders (please note breeder), I can supply pairs or single birds: the finest value obtainable. Pairs from 20/- to 60/-; single birds from 10/- to 40/- each. I keep no 10/6 pairs, which are a waste of time and money. Fanciers requiring something which will breed really high-class specimens should send to the fountain-head. Refuse other so called just as good strains. Kindly state what price you are prepared to pay, to save unnecessary correspondence. I will guarantee for satisfaction, or return cash in full; all birds on three days' approval.

I KNOW IT'S RUDE

to point, but I must point out to you the exceptionally good value I offer in Roller Canaries. I care not how good other advertisers say their birds are, I distinctly say mine are better, and to prove this I want you to have a Roller from elsewhere and a Leipzig Roller from me; test them side by side for a week, and if mine is not far the best return it, and I will refund every penny of your money. I am the only importer in England of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and now have a grand lot all in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, piccolo trills, soft roulades, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, harp, gong, and flute notes, etc., and guaranteed entirely free from any harsh or objectable notes whatever, price 7/6 and 8/6 each; special handmasters, which excel in the hollow and bass rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. I also have a magnificent collection of pure Seifert contest Rollers, in glorious song, price 15/-, 20/-, and 30/- each. These are of real Seifert blood, and have hollow, hollow bell, bass, schockel, and glucke notes to perfection. Leipzig Roller hens, 2/6 each, 4/- couple. Special Roller singing cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. For those who like loud noisy songsters, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks, in full, vigorous song, price 5/6 each; Hartz hens, 2/- each, 3/- couple. All sent on full week's trial at my risk, either on receipt of cash or "Cage Birds" deposit system, and money returned in full if every satisfaction not given. I care not how hard a man is to please, I guarantee to do so if humanly possible, as the following letters will show:—"8, South Eaton Place, London, Dec. 28.—Sir,—Rollers have turned out a treat, and want a lot of beating at price. I am very well satisfied. — Yours, A. Frederick." "1, Leicester-st., Phibsborough, Dublin, Dec. 26th.—Sir,—I am well pleased with Hartz cock you sent. It soon started singing. Thanks for satisfactory business.—Yours, Wm. Wynne." "2, Brachead Place, Saltcoals, Dec. 24th.—Sir,—Leipzig Roller arrived safe, and I am well pleased. It sings lovely. Also the first one you sent is a grand bird. I would not sell it for double the amount.—Yours, J. Taylor." SPECIAL TO AMATEURS AND NOVICES!

Try my special Matched Pairs of prize-bred Norwich Plainheads at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-. Crested ditto, 15/-, 20/-, 25/- and 30/-. Yorkshires, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Border Fancies, 10/6, 12/6. These are the best value ever offered.

I also offer, suitable for above pairs, a good, serviceable breeding cage, fitted complete, price 3/6; ditto, fitted with sand trays, and sanitary utensils, 5/-.

Remember that I personally match these up myself, and exercise the same care as if they cost pounds, and just as I would do if I were pairing for myself. In fact, I always make it a rule to thoroughly satisfy in selection—then I am sure I shall satisfy my customer, i.e., if satisfaction is possible. Now, this may not sound like anything very particular, at the same time it is of the utmost importance to the purchaser, as everything depends upon this matching as to what results are likely to be; hence, you want it done by someone who not only knows what is right and what is wrong, but also someone who takes an interest in doing so, to get the only best results possible from the class of birds purchased.

Wild-Bird Life.

Notes on the Wild Duck.

With the coming of severe weather we shall get an influx of Wild Fowl into the estuaries, tidal rivers and marshy streams of the South. Since the days of the decoy, much wild land and marshy tracts have been reclaimed for agricultural purposes. Farms and smiling corn fields have taken the place of lakes and bogs. A few old decoys remind one of the former abundance of Wild Fowl, particularly the Wild Duck. This bird has deserted many of its old, familiar haunts, and the naturalist and sportsman are possibly the only people who regret the change. Marsh and mire have disappeared, and with their drainage the Wild Fowl have departed to even wilder and more secluded spots. But, although the Wild Duck is undoubtedly less common than in former times, it is far from being rare.

This hardy bird is a constant resident on our shores, but its numbers are considerably increased in the early months of autumn. At this time they spread about all over the marsh land, and small rivers, and one may frequently disturb a pair from a small pool. Their hurried flight and flap-flap on the water as they rise is quite as startling to the wanderer as his presence is to the birds. If one can occasionally watch a colony quietly feeding or resting on the water, they are apparently quite oblivious to any danger, yet the slightest alarm sends them instantly on the wing; or, should the sheet of water be a large one, they will quietly swim to the centre, where they feel secure from any interference from anyone on shore. Where a few domesticated Duck are kept upon an inland lake, they are frequently visited by their wilder brethren during the winter months, especially if the water be at all sheltered so that it does not become transformed into a sheet of ice. The wilder, more exposed resorts of Wild Fowl soon become useless to the bird, and they are obliged to seek food and water elsewhere. In such times they generally fly inland, usually following the course of some tidal river, so that a lake just off the waterway becomes at once an attraction, especially if a few ornamental birds are kept there. The wild ones are at first exceedingly shy and suspicious, but after a time, if unmolested, they get accustomed to the sight of certain individuals, and will occasionally stay the remainder of the winter, contented and happy, and possibly when the spring arrives a pair or two may remain to nest.

Gannets Feeding.

One of our naturalists says "Observe how the bird poises itself for a moment, then, like a piece of brilliant white marble, it dashes downwards into the ocean, disappearing from view, and leaving a mass of foam to mark the place of descent. In a few moments the Gannet appears on the surface, and flies upwards into the air again to prepare for another plunge."

Herring Gulls in Winter.

Like the Common Gull, the Herring Gull frequently flies inland during the winter months, and will linger for days round a lake or upon some recently ploughed land. One can sometimes see them flying at a great height, when they are passing overland from one coast to another.

Woodlark's Winter Habits.

The Woodlark is a local species frequenting mostly the West of England, but during the winter months it becomes to an extent migratory, and may sometimes be seen in quite unaccustomed places, consorting with ordinary Larks of the fields and meadows. It may be recognised by its smaller size and shorter tail.

Song of the Skylark.

A Scotsman gives the following rendering of the song of the Skylark: "Up in the lift go we, te-hee, te-hee, te-hee. There's no a cobbler on the airth can mak' a shoe to me, to me! Why so? Why so? Because my heel is as long as my toe."

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

The fourth annual concert and prize distribution were a fitting termination to another year's hard work, and the members can congratulate themselves upon the musical portion of the programme, for it was far and away the best yet arranged for this event. A very good number assembled, especially taking into consideration it was only the third day in the New Year. Mr. E. Suddards, the respected president, officiated as chairman. Each of the artistes in turn was deservedly applauded. Mrs. A. E. Rainbow (soprano), Miss V. Barrow (contralto), Mr. F. Hird (tenor), Mr. W. Smith (bass), Miss D. Cruise (elocutionist), Mr. A. Jowett (humorist), with Miss A. M. Cruise as accompanist, provided the programme. Mr. A. Jowett, who is only in his teens, bids fair to become a capital humorist. During the interval Mrs. E. Suddards kindly presented the prizes to the successful members. These have been won by competing at a series of six shows throughout the year. Prize-winners: Messrs. W. Stables, W. Cruise, J. Northrop, W. Laycock, G. White, J. Farrar, B. Hill, Riley Bros., C. Walker, J. Tattersall, S. Midgley, Wilkinson Bros., G. Fielding, W. Walker, Myers and Lightowler, F. Cruise, G. R. Rushworth; these were recipients of beautiful prizes from the hands of Mrs. Suddards, who was heartily thanked for her services. The secretary gave his annual report, showing that everything had been satisfactory, from a progressive standpoint, and from a financial point of view as well. The membership was keeping up well; the meetings and the members' shows had been well supported; and the third annual show had proved a decided success. The secretary then congratulated the successful members on their achievements, and hoped that still greater successes awaited their efforts in the future. A vote of thanks to the artistes was proposed by Mr. J. Fielding, seconded by Mr. R. G. Rushworth, and carried with great enthusiasm. The proceedings terminated by the singing of the National Anthem.

Training & Managing a Parrot.

By M. T. Goldsborough.

This same bird soon learned the advantage of a policy of non-resistence. Her mistress, to amuse herself, would push Polly's head down, expecting her, of course, to immediately raise it—which the bird did at first. But Polly soon saw the wisdom of not resisting this little action, and when her head was lowered, she kept it in that position for a time. Her owner, therefore, lost the pleasure of teasing her in this way.

Polly's devotion to her mistress was beyond bounds, but she has had some disturbing conditions in her life. Her mistress once left Polly in the care of a friend who resembled her quite strikingly in personal appearance. Polly made no objection to her new keeper, but upon the return of her mistress her mind was greatly confused. At first she hesitated about accepting the caresses of rel real owner; but, after a time, the truth dawned upon her, and her old devotion returned. But the next day, when the friend approached the cage, Polly flew at her angrily, uttering a shrill cry. She would not let the seeming imposter come near her. She felt that she had been the victim of a base deception, and now that her eyes were opened she would permit of it no longer.

The feeling of jealously was most strong in this little bird. Not only did she begrudge visitors the privilege of conversation with her mistress, but her feeling extended to animals as well. Her special aversion centred in innocent Puss, upon whom she was always looking for a chance to wreak vengeance.

One day Puss took a nap beside Polly's cage. Her head drooped, and drooped as the sweet all-absorbing sleep that cats enjoy stole gently upon her. Finally, her head fell softly against the cage, the tip of one ear protruding between the wires. Polly went to the opposite side of her home, descended the wires quietly so as not to disturb Puss in dreamland, and gave the offending felino ear a vigorous bite. Flying quickly to the top perch, she "ha-haed" fit to kill herself, while Puss disappeared like a streak of lightning. Ever after that Puss kept her distance from Polly.

I wish to thank all fanciers who have replied to my advt. in "CAGE BIRDS" re Crests. I have had so many applications that I cannot reply to them individually. It is surprising what a wide circulation "CAGE BIRDS" has; I have had replies from the extreme North of Scotland, and so far south as Kent.—J. NICHOLSON (Skipton).

TO SECRETARIES.—Just send stamp for a novel competition at your next mule feather show. Special prizes offered, value £100.—Edgar Broadbent, The Millhouse, Lime Street, Sheffield.—Advt.

Under the White Rose.

BOTH the shows held under the Yorkshire Union rules since the Christmas holidays have been failures, and the thoughts now uppermost in the minds of those who have the interests of their societies at heart is how this is to be avoided. Nearly all think that if at all possible the shows should come to a finish the Saturday before Christmas, as it is very rare that those after are able to avoid a big loss on their venture. In my opinion, the most feasible way is for those districts where the societies are pretty close together to come to some understanding, and either amalgamate or take turns in having an open show. If only half a dozen of the Y.U. societies took this matter up, it could easily be arranged, and would be better for all concerned.

ON looking up in the Y.U. handbook, the page apportioned to "Secretaries' Memoranda for Meetings," I find that the time is nearly due when all nominations for officers and alterations of rules should be sent in to the Y.U. secretary, the stipulated time being February 1st. So members and officials must get their heads together and look over the old rule book and see if all regulations are to their liking. Also novices who are not satisfied with their lot must have their say on the matters most important to them, i.e., limit of price, etc. As the annual ballot takes place in the first fortnight in March, society secretaries will greatly assist the Y.U. secretary if they get their matter sent in for the correct time. It is a very big job, and must be done to time, or all the machinery gets out of order, to the disadvantage of the Fancy generally.

THE Annual Amalgamated Prize Distribution is, I hear, likely to take place again. The wheels of motion are already going their rounds, and as these gatherings have proved so satisfactory to all concerned, it will doubtless please all to hear that the affair is likely to take place again. One of the most trying problems the committee have to solve is how to cater for the great number of people who are likely to attend the gathering. The room at the Market Tavern is a really good one for the purpose, but last year was taxed to its utmost capacity, and the officials find it difficult to get another room, that is, without going to a big expense

OUR NINTH BIRTHDAY.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS OF THE DAY TO ALL READERS OF "CAGE BIRDS."

Old Father Time is looking over our shoulder as we pen these lines. We can detect a grin on his cheeks as one by one he plucks from our brows the hairs of our youth. It seems only the other day that, with the ominous future all before us, we settled down in a poky third floor back room to the production of No. 1, Vol. I. of CAGE BIRDS, the first paper to be solely devoted to the cult of cage birds. We run over "in the mind's eye" nine years of work—comprising as they inevitably must do, much gnashing of teeth and wailing, brightened by periodical draughts of encouragement and ultimate success—nine years of constant unremitting endeavour by our staff inside the office and out of it; nine years of progressive effort culminating in the issue that makes its appearance to-day in celebration of our birthday. And the recollection of those nine years and their struggles, their achievements, and their failures, fills us with deep thankfulness for the past, determination for the present and hope for the future. The history of CAGE BIRDS, when it comes to be written, will provide one of the most interesting stories of modern journalism. The trials of a new journal are seldom few or trivial in character—those of CAGE BIRDS will fully sustain the reputed difficulty of establishing an organ of the press, and the greater difficulty of maintaining its position when once established. That CAGE BIRDS has lost none of its original popularity, and on the contrary is continually adding to the number of its friends, is due not so much to the intrinsic merit of the paper itself as to the affection and fervent loyalty with which it is regarded by its hosts of readers and patrons.

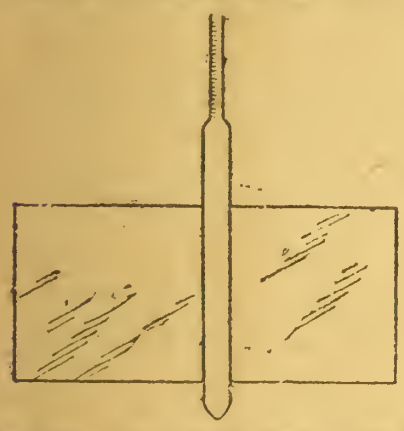
In addition to the regular staff of helpers on "C.B.," every cage bird man of any consequence has always been eager and willing to help on its career. For that assistance we have been profoundly thankful, and in tendering our annual thanks for past benefits, we include all casual labourers in the vineyard as well as those constant and regular hands who have served us so well.

The bird Fancy has suffered considerably during the past year from the attacks of sentimental fanatics. These people have only the merit of sincerity to commend their attitude. It is, as our readers know, a thoroughly wrong-headed and misconceived one, based upon an illiberal prejudice, and the attributing of imagination to the mental equipment of birds. If birds had the brains of human beings, there would be something to say for the view of the persons who object to caging them, but as the cultivation of feathered pets by man involves their protection from the rude and merciless onslaughts of Nature—the most unkind mother of all—their complete relegation to the winter's cold and the predatory instincts of other animals and birds by sentimentalists, is, to say the least of it, mistaken kindness.

It is the mission of the bird-keeper to carefully tend, feed and guard his little pet in feathers, to diligently study its habits and minister to its requirements; and the average bird-keeper does more good to bird life in a week than the faddist or sentimentalist will do in a decade. It is the mission of CAGE BIRDS to inform bird-keepers of the way to practise that doctrine, and to hold aloft the light of knowledge as gathered from experience and study.

We ask all our friends to pass such a copy as this round to their friends, and to enlist recruits wherever possible for the bird-keeping cult. A hobby that can be, and is, practised with equal success and happiness by royalty as by the "horny handed son of toil" cannot be such a bad one.

We should like to say that the collection of small advertisements in this week's "C.B." was secured without any postal "whip up" of private advertisers, and represents, therefore, a splendid unsolicited tribute to the now acknowledged merits of our columns as a medium for sales and exchanges.



Illustrated Ideas

No. 474.

To Cut Glass for Seed Hoppers, etc.

Sent by Mr. F. Myles, 123, Town Lane, near Manchester.

Here is an idea that may be a help to your readers. It is of a way to cut glass without a glass-cutter. You place the glass on a flat surface; then get a poker hot and lay it across the glass, first slightly notching the glass on each edge where you want to break it. The glass will break without any other assistance. I find the method very handy for breaking glass for seed hopper fronts and various other things.—F. MYLES.

No. 475.

Food-jar holding Device.

Sent by Mr. H. Renouf, 11, Beresford Street, St. Helier, Jersey.

I have just fitted two Thrush cages with the following device for holding food jars, and find that it answers admirably, as birds cannot move jars. It also prevents the food and water from getting fouled. It is necessary to measure the jar, so that the fitting is compact. Potted-meat jars are most suitable for the purpose. Proceed as follows:—Take a piece of hard wood ⅜ of an inch thick, and cut as in Fig. 1. File down the corners A, into which boro holes for inserting wire. A piece of wire bent as in Fig. 2 completes the article. The fixing to the cage is best done from the outside, with screws (see B for position of screws). —H. RENOUF.

Kindly thank all who replied to my recent advertisement in CAGE BIRDS. I received so many letters that it was only possible to reply to those gentlemen who enclosed a stamp.—J. H. Barnett (Walsall).

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

*A Clever Blackcap.

I once found a Blackcap's nest, on which the hen was sitting, in a gooseberry bush. The cock, who was in a tree above, flew down and, pretending to have a broken wing, tried to draw me away. I followed out of curiosity, and when he had drawn me some 20 yards from the nest he flew back. Each time I approached he repeated this.—Sent by Doris Lycett (13), Apedale View, Chesterton, Staffs.

*Released by a Dog.

Recently a Flycatcher strayed into the kitchen of Coppenhall Rectory, but could not find its way out. A Yorkshire toy terrier at once caught the bird in its mouth, carried it out into the yard, and there released it, barking as the bird flew away, apparently unhurt.—Sent by James Elks (aged 10), 99, Cemetery Road, Crewe.

Cunning Crows.

One day I went round the golf links and the Crows took not a bit of notice of the golf players with the sticks, and let them get quite close to them. But when the farmer was coming across another field they all flew away as if they could tell that he was their enemy. I wonder if they really could tell?—Miss E. Clarke (12), 12, Windmill Lane, Smethwick.

A Brave Blue-tit.

A friend of mine had a tool shed in which there were several empty boxes. One day as he was going in, he saw a Blue Tit fly out; he then went away, and returning after, saw the same Tit coming out of a hole in a box. As soon as it saw him it ruffled up its feathers and hissed worse than a goose. On stepping nearer it flew in his face, and its mate coming, he left. Afterwards he left the door just open, and was rewarded by their becoming tame and rearing seven young.—F. E. Keep (13), 58, Park Hill, Moseley, Birmingham.

Kindly thank through your columns all who answered my advt. in the Exchange Column of CAGE BIRDS, as they are too numerous for me to answer by post.—A. Trevallion (Tottenham, N.).

NOTTINGHAM

NOV. 11th & 13th, 1911.

I have been a reader of CAGE BIRDS for nearly six years. I have always been a lover of birds, and I consider CAGE BIRDS a great boon to all bird lovers. Also I appreciate your "Nutshell" series. I may add that I have a Goldfinch which has been singing all through his moult, through his being treated as advised in your "Nutshell" book on the Goldfinch. If all bird fanciers would take in your valuable paper, and read your "Nutshell" series of booklets there would be no need to ask the question: Is it cruel to keep birds in cages? Wish "C.B." every success.—T. TIPTON (Wellington, Salop).

Sedge and Reed Birds.

The graceful but somewhat sombre-coloured Reed Warbler is much less generally distributed than the Sedge Warbler; but there appears to be no reason why this should be so. Both birds are almost identical in their habits and modes of living, and nest in practically the same localities—one among the reeds, and the other in low bushes and coarse herbage growing round reed beds and osiers.

Birds in Richmond Park.

Richmond Park, near London, is quite a paradise of wild birds. Nearly every species common to the South of England can be heard, or seen, there. The rare Nightjar whose loud "churring" in the summer evening is so astonishing to the novice, can be annually located. In the sweet month of April, when the buds begin to burst, the call of the Wryneck is not at all uncommon. Many rare birds stop to rest here while on migration in the early spring months.

Kindness to Birds Rewarded.

The Minister for Agriculture in France has decorated M. Henry Pol with the coveted medal for his kindness to bird in the Tuileries. For years he has regularly fed them every morning, and the birds know him so well that they perch on his shoulders, hat, and hands. He has a wonderful power over them, and has given the majority of them names, which they know, coming to him when called.

Bittern Habits.

It is stated upon good authority that the Bittern can produce its remarkable cry or "boom" equally as well when on the wing as when resting or standing on the ground, although it is produced more frequently from the latter position. Another curious habit of this strange bird is that it will fly to a great height in a series of spiral gyrations, emitting at the same time a weird noise quite different, however, from its customary booming.

Mr. J. A. Turnbull, secretary of the Leadgate and District C.B.S. writes: I have removed from Garden-terrace, Leadgate, to No. 1, Percy-terrace, Consett.

The Coventry Godiva C.B.S.'s next open show will be held on October 14th, we having decided to adhere to our old date, writes Mr. H. Bray, the sec. We have decided to give CAGE BIRDS the "guarantee" again.

May I be permitted to compliment your artist, Mr. H. Goodchild, on his beautiful and life-like sketch of my Hawfinch? Had the bird been photographed the likeness could not have been better.—P. H. HARRIS (London, W.C.).

We are extending time of entries closing to Sunday, January 15th (first post), writes Mr. D. John, secretary of the Llanelly and Dis. C.B.S. show on January 17th. At the time of writing entries are very slow in coming in.

The address of Messrs. Fred Bax and Son, the well-known and old-established firm of seed merchants, etc., is now 180, Bishopsgate. This change is consequent upon the re-numbering of the thoroughfare by the authorities; it is not a removal.

The beautiful cup presented by the Countess of Winchelsea and Nottingham, for the best British bird at the recent Harlech show, was won by Mr. R. Hughes (Pen-y-groes), with his well-known Goldfinch, writes Mr. E. J. Jones, the secretary.

Kindly let members know that we are going to try and have the meetings started punctually to time stated, and have the rules strictly carried out, writes Mr. A. J. Notley, Sec. Hetton-le-Hole and Dist. C.B.S. I wish CAGE BIRDS and staff every success.

In our report of the Scottish National cage bird show our printers inadvertently dropped a line from the Yorkshire section. The Uneven marked yellow Yorkshire cock class should be followed by: "Buff (5): 1, 4, Towers, 1st Cinnamon-marked, nice type, tight as wax," etc.

Our first annual meeting and election of officers for 1911 will take place on January 18th, writes Mr. H. W. Jones, the hon. secretary and treasurer. Any fancier wishing to join us may do so by sending me his name and address, together with the entrance fee of one shilling.

We have received from the Postal authorities a small label addressed "F. Carl, 154, Fleet-street, London, E.C.," and bearing the Woolwich postmark, but it is not attached to anything, the parcel or package having evidently been lost in the post in some way. Will the sender please communicate with us?

Will fanciers please note that I have been elected secretary of the Oxford and District C.B.S., Mr. Holliday having to relinquish that office owing to ill-health? writes Mr. A. F. Fifield, 6, Buckingham-street, Oxford. All communications with regard to the above society should in future be addressed to me.

A meeting of the Greenwich and Deptford C.B.S. will be held on January 19th, at the Cecil Rooms, Woolwich-road, E. Greenwich, S.E., writes Mr. H. R. Hearn, the hon. secretary, with a view to finding means as to the disposal of the various effects of the society. I may add that at the last meeting, it was decided to wind up the society.

Will the junior and other fanciers in the district kindly note that the Ormskirk C.B.S., writes Mr. T. H. Tiffen, the hon. sec., has removed its headquarters to more accommodating and comfortable premises, viz., the Church House, near the Old Parish Church. In taking this step, the Society, it is understood, will receive increased support, both financially and otherwise.

I am sending you a photo of my aviaries (see page 20). A copy of your valuable CAGE BIRDS some five years ago started me in this branch of the Fancy. I began with a couple of pairs in the small house, but the stock has increased so, I have had to rebuild and extend until I have about now reached the limit of encroachment on the garden. The path, with bowers of fruit trees, leads to the aviaries. You will notice I have utilised some of your coloured plates in the decorations.—A. Berrett (Bristol).

Mr. Law, secretary of the London and Provincial O.S., writes: Will all members who are unable to attend the dinner kindly return their tickets by first post on Monday, January 16th. All tickets not returned by then will be considered sold, as the management of the "Horse Shoe Hotel" must have a guarantee as to numbers. I am pleased to say that the number at this year's dinner promises to beat all records, and the L. and P.O.S. will welcome any friends who care to join them on this occasion. Tickets (4s. each) may be had from C. W. Law, 9, Oak-villas, Archway-road Highgate. The L. and P.O.S. autumn show will be held on November 1st and 2nd.

I am sending you a photograph taken at our annual outing at Bothal Haugh (see page 20), writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, hon. secretary Newcastle-on-Tyne C.B.S. Bothal Haugh is the seat of the Rev. W. Ellis. The people (left to right) are: Mrs. Crawhall, Mr. J. Curry, Mr. M. C. Potts (holding Miss Mackenzie), Messrs. Petterson, J. Bertram, W. Smith, Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Mackenzie, Mr. Lackey.

At the end of another highly successful season, the City and Suburban A.C.B. finds itself with a record membership of 110 (fully paid-up) and a cash balance of £17 7s. 1d., with an additional £5 12s. 11d. in the Benefit Fund established to assist members in time of need. The total assets of the society (including 11 cups, one shield, staging, etc.) amounts to the fine sum of £85 18s. 6d. We think it will be conceded that this is a result upon which the popular hon. secretary and treasurer, Mr. V. Wynn, and his officers are to be heartily congratulated.

The Reading and District C.B.C. and its officers are to be complimented upon the excellent balance-sheet for the year ended December 31st, 1910, which shows a credit balance of no less than £12 19s. 9½d., being over £7 more than was brought into the accounts from the previous year. In sending us a copy of the balance-sheet, the secretary, Mr. W. H. Pyke, writes: "It has been a satisfactory year in every way. The committee wish me, he adds, to thank CAGE BIRDS for the many kind actions you have done for us; it is appreciated by all our members.

Many thanks for the excellent report of our show in last issue of CAGE BIRDS, also for the nice words about myself and Mr. Hireson, but I would like it made known that I also received valuable assistance from Mr. Burrows and from Mr. Fletcher in helping to pack up the birds, writes Mr. Geo. Jeffery, show manager of the Southall and Dist. F.S. I am sorry to say that a travelling case has gone astray; it is an ordinary wooden case for holding two large British bird show cages, and has (or had) the name of—Wm. K. Baseley, Preston Bagot, Henley-in-Arden, Birmingham inside the lid, and a buckled strap round.

We are holding our first table show of the season of January 17th, writes Mr. W. Cottingham, secretary of the Hyson Green (Nottingham) C.B.S. Members and friends are invited. We are the strongest society in the district, and have a good balance in hand. We shall run an open show this year. We have three silver cups to be competed for. Novices will do well to join us, as we are going to add novice classes to the three shows.

Messrs. Spratts, Ltd., have issued, in accordance with their usual custom, a very beautiful calendar for 1911. There is a large coloured picture, accompanied by notes on same, for each month. Canaries and other species of cage birds figure among the plates and cage bird fanciers will do well to apply to the proprietors at 24 and 25 Fenchurch Street, London, E.C., for a copy, but application must be made at once. Endeavour has obviously been made to make the almanack, as on previous occasions, a standard work of reference, which it undoubtedly is.

Mr. B. Hollins, the well-known bird specialist of "The Zoo," George-street, Hull, has issued a comprehensive price list, which we recommend our readers to write for. The prices of the various seeds, foods, cages, medicines, etc., as well as of the birds supplied by Mr. Hollins, are very reasonable, and the quality of the goods retailed by him is of the best. A special purchase of birds (including rare Waterfowl, Pheasants, etc.), has just been made by Mr. Hollins from Zoological Gardens on the Continent.

A lecture is to be given on January 20th, under the auspices of the Carnegie Dunfermline Trust, by Mr. Richard Kearton, F.Z.S., entitled "Wild Birds and Beasts at Home," writes Mr. R. T. Campbell, secretary of the Dunfermline and Dis. C.B.S. This lecture will be illustrated by cineanatograph. I beg all lovers of birds and of Nature will avail themselves at that time of hearing so able a man in this branch of our hobby, and seeing through the cinematograph what can really be done under circumstances which we can hardly credit. The prices are threepence and sixpence. We hope to see local men present in large numbers.

R. A. Newley, of 24, Stockwell Green, S.W., is entrusted with the disposal of stock of three well-known breeders of Norwich Plainheads, consisting of Buffs, Yellows, Clears, and Variegated ditto, prices 20s., 30s., and 40s. a pair, or pairs can be separated. All birds are from winners, and carry good blood, and those commencing a stud or wishing to infuse new blood should write at once stating requirements. Also some good songsters, 8s. 6d. and 10s. 6d. each. R. A. Newley requires talking Parrot, tame, grey preferred. Send particulars and price asked to 24, Stockwell-green, London, S.W.—Advt.

The Rochdale Good Intent C.B.S., and the Heywood C.B.S. are holding two inter-club shows, the first at the Temperance Club, Toadlane, Rochdale, on January 14th, and the second at Heywood, on January 21st, at the Rechabites' Hall, Pine-street, W., writes Mr. Wm. Adams (secretary of the former society). The shows will be held at 3 p.m., and on the point system, each society showing 48 selected birds. Competition will be keen, as some of the most prominent winners in the country are being staged by both societies, and the services of Mr. H. Thomas (Middleton), for the first show, and Mr. Barnass (Rochdale) for the second have been secured. We hope to see a good attendance of fanciers, as nothing but the best of birds are to be on view.

RESULT OF OUR XMAS COMPETITIONS.

The Coloured Frontispiece.

A very large number of efforts have been sent us in connection with our competition for the best coloured front page. Some of the paintings are really excellent, and the birds in the majority of instances were rightly identified and skilfully coloured.

The prize of one guinea goes to:—

Mr. Richard Sebright,
230, Bath Road,
Worcester.

This gentleman's painting is exquisitely soft in colouring, and artistic in its general effect. Altogether it is a beautiful picture and deservedly carries off the prize.

The next best is the painting of Mr. James Palmer (Edinburgh), which, for neatness, precision, and attention to detail, is the equal of the winning effort, to which, however, it loses in the beauty and chasteness of the general colour scheme.

Following hard after are the efforts of Mrs. Edwards (Liverpool), Miss Alice Blaydon Richards (Margate), Miss Kate Cox (Birmingham), Miss E. Palmer (Herne Bay), Messrs. W. Lawrence (Halstead), G. Williams, sen. (Stoke-upon-Trent), C. P. Leggett (Sudbury), Chas. Dunn (Partick), Chas. Hill (Leeds), and Percy Jowett (Bradford).

Special mention must be made of the following competitors, who sent in very creditable efforts, and whom we congratulate on possessing not a little artistic skill: Miss Alfreda B. Smyth (London, S.E.), Miss W. F. Bevan (Blackpool), Miss Sheila MacEwen (Forres), Miss Spooner (Bideford), Miss Emily A. Paramore (Porlock), Miss Emily Hare (Leytonstone, E.), Miss Ivy D. Manson (Shelfield), Miss A. V. Telfer (Herne Bay), Miss V. I. Balls (London, S.W.), Miss L. Crewe (Etwall), Messrs. James Cairns (Edinburgh), J. Bowerman (Portsmouth), J. T. Bates (Hounslow), Reg. Collins (Plymouth), R. H. Dixon (Pendlebury), F. G. Meekley (Carlisle), Harold Charlesworth (Congleton), C. E. Isaac (Exeter), Will Anderson (South Shields), Chas. J. Clark (Galashiels), Fred A. Wills (Willington Quay-upon-Tyne), L. Parry (Barrow-in-Furness), Fred Marwood (Thornaby-on-Tees), L. R. Templer (Exeter), Geo. Paterson (Edinburgh), Jas. B. Cooper (Edinburgh), Hugh Forster (Romford), W. Atkins (Leicester), J. Percival Speight (Colne), John Raeside (Stranraer), and W. E. Marriott (Chesterfield).

The Picture Puzzle.

An Amusing Competition.

In our Christmas Number we published a novel picture puzzle. Competitors were asked to decide what birds six pictures represented. We received a very large number of solutions indeed, some of which, we must own, made us smile. On the whole, however, the efforts of competitors were very good.

The correct solutions to the six problems are as follows:—

(1) Nightingale; (2) Border Fancy; (3) Lovebirds; (4) Dutch Frill; (5) Linnet; (6) Lancashire Plainhead.

Mrs. Watts (Surbiton, Surrey); Messrs. R. N. S. Tebb (Epsom), P. H. Harris (London, W.C.), Percy C. Ackling (Abingdon), H. Standring (Manchester), Thos. Andrews, (Birmingham), John Fysh (Swaffham), Edgar Minns (Swaffham), A. P. Bunby (Hull), these nine competitors all succeeded in correctly naming the birds represented. In accordance with rule No. 5, their names were written on slips of paper, and one slip drawn by an independent person, when the fortunate winner proved to be:—

Mr. Edgar Minns,
Rose Cottage, Lyon Street,
Swaffham, Norfolk,

to whom a cheque for one guinea will be sent in due course.

Among the various solutions to the first puzzle-picture (representing a gale in the night-time—by which the Nightingale was indicated) were the following: Scotch Fancy, Skylark, Bramblefinch, Lizard Canary, Snow Bunting, Crest, Owl (did this competitor mean "Howl"?), Fork-tailed Kite, Storm Petrel, Storm-King, Yorkshire Canary, Lancashire Coppy, Storm-Thrush, Nightjar, Fieldfare, Stormcock, Ring Ousel, Mountain Roller (a rare one, we should think), Cinnamon, Mountain Twite, Ruff (this is rather neat), Robin, Goldfinch, Wood Warbler, Stormfinch, Windhover, and the Tree Sparrow.

Picture No. 2 (representing the border to a garden path, and a fan with a letter C on it—indicating the Border Fancy Canary) drew forth a bigger variety of solutions, among them being the Goldfinch, Scotch Fancy, Fan-tailed pigeon, Canary, Cuckoo or Chaffinch (why not add, "or some other bird?"), Robin, Budgerigar, Sparrow, Crow, Oyster-catcher, Thistle Finch, Swallow, Crossbill, Goldfinch-Canary Mule, Rhode Island Red cockerel, Crimson-crested Cardinal, Garden Warbler, and Bird of Paradise.

Picture No. 3 proved somewhat of a stumbling block. A large number of competitors were misled by the mistletoe into giving Mistle Thrush as the answer. Among other solutions were: Blackheaded Lovebirds, pair of Turtle Doves, Blackcaps, Diamond Doves, Budgerigars, Lark (under the mistletoe, of course), Waxbills, Cockatoo, Toucan (and three can't, very well), Crossbills, Blind Dark-crested Norwich, Peach-faced Lovebirds, Uneven-marked Borders, Colour-fed Canaries, Cuckoo, Dutch Frills, Black Redstart, Cinnamous, Black-headed Kistrel (instead of Kestrel), Mannikins, etc.

The correct solution to No. 4 is Dutch Frille (the picture showing a Dutch cheese dressed with a fancy cloth having a frill to it. The vast majority of competitors guessed this one correctly. Among other birds whose names figured for this were the Bunting, Border Fancy, Crestbred, Magpie, Snow Bunting, Hooded Crow, Cushat, Pied Wagtail, Hybrid, Chaffinch, Blackbird, Cutthroat, Nuthatch, Budgerigar, Swallow, Nightjar, Yellowhammer, Puffin, Blackbird, Hartz Mountain Roller, Broken-cap Lizard, Buzzard, Ring Dove, Spice Bird, Sugar Bird, and Butcher Bird.

Picture No. 5 depicted a portion of Norfolk from which one of the principal town (namely Lynn) would be found on reference to the map to be missing; also a bill on which "no discount" was allowed. This picture represented Linnet, which comparatively few guessed correctly. Among the attempts to get this solution right were: Magpie, Norwich, Schoolmaster Canary, Waxbill, Crossbill, Water Ousel, Wagtail, Ticked Norwich, Silverbill, Cuckoo, Pheasant, Kingfisher, Devonshire Woodlark, London Fancy, Seagull, Shorelark, Hedge Accentor, Broadbill, Landbill, Landrail, Plover, Eagle, Boatbill, White Java Sparrow, Spoonbill, Tbree-barred Crossbill.

No. 6 proved a "teaser" to some. The factory chimneys denoted Lancashire, and the man's head a Plainhead—Lancashire Plainhead. Here are a few of the attempts sent in: Plainhead Norwich, Crest, Crow, Firecrest, House Sparrow, Starling, Norwich Cropper, Blackcap, Lesser Redpoll, Greypate, Mocking Bird, Ring Ousel, Coot, Blackbird, Jackdaw, German Roller, Chimney Martin, Heron, Bald Wall-creeper, Cole Head, Wryneck, Sooty Tern, Twite, etc.

All prize money and specials won at Paisley show, also monies for birds sold, have been paid; if anyone has been omitted, will they kindly write me at once, writes Mr. A. M. Baird, the Cage Bird secretary. They are also requested to cash their cheques at once so as to enable us to get settled up as soon as possible. Permit me to thank you for the very full and good report you gave of our show.

A Note to Leading Breeders.

Our Annual—that most popular of all our publications—is now urgently appealing for all the advertisements of leading breeders in the country. Every prominent fancier owes it to himself and to us to be represented in CAGE BIRDS Annual. His name and address will stand there for permanent reference, and in the years to come when breeders of that day are overlooking their files of the Annual, the names of the famous old breeders will stand out in golden letters as those of men who made history in the year 1910. The charges are most reasonable, and may be referred to upon Page 25 in this issue.

A Presentation to a Glasgow Fancier.

A meeting of fanciers was held on Tuesday last in the Ingram Bar, Glasgow, for the purpose of presenting Mr. Andrew Malcolmson with a purse of gold on the occasion of his leaving Scotland to fill an important position in New Zealand. Mr. A. McFarlane occupied the chair, and in a few well-chosen remarks wished Mr. Malcolmson God-speed. He called upon Mr. George Marlin (Hamilton) to make the presentation. Mr. Malcolmson suitably replied, thanking his many friends and fanciers for their great kindness and handsome gift, and also for their good wishes, which he appreciated very much. The vocal part of the evening was then entered into, the following gentlemen taking part, their efforts meeting with much acceptance. Mr. A. Muir and Mr. R. Young (songs); Mr. W. Shearer (a reading, "The Broken Bowl"), Mr. A. McFarlane, Mr. F. Bowman, and Mr. A. Muir (songs). We then sang "Auld Lang Syne," and "He's a jolly good fellow." Many of those present were at the station on the Wednesday to bid "Andrew" farewell, he sailing on Jan. 5th. There is no doubt that, as a judge and fancier, his presence at most of our principal Scottish shows will be greatly missed. The whole of his stock has been sold at a good figure, his well-known light Goldfinch Mule, "Prince Charlie," being so'd to an English exhibitor for £12 10s.—"SCOTCH FANCY."

A Grand Issue of "The Poultry World."

This week's issue of the POULTRY WORLD is a really grand one, a most artistic Coloured Plate being given away gratis with every copy. This Plate, representing Mr. Wippell's art at its best, depicts an ideal pair of Rhode Island Reds—the breed that has been the topic of late, both at the classic shows and in every poultry circle. An article on the mating and rearing of the Rhode Island Red is also included in the issue, as are several other seasonable articles, by the leading experts of poultrydom. The letters from correspondents are numerous, and all of a most interesting nature, giving fanciers' views on all the up-to-date topics. The utility poultry-keeper is carefully studied in this week's issue, the reading matter being well proportioned between utility and exhibition poultry keepers. The "Timely Hints," specially contributed by readers of "P.W.," make very practical and helpful reading. The number—48 pages in all—contains numerous photographic illustrations and sketches, and may be had of all newsagents, price 1d.

Canary's Curious Hiding-place.

A correspondent writes to the "Edinburgh Evening Dispatch":—The other evening a Canary which had escaped from captivity, made its appearance on a Border golf course. Efforts were made to secure the bird, one young lady, carrying her sailor hat in her hand, taking part in the chase; but the Canary suddenly disappeared from view, and was given up as lost. The young lady put on her hat, and shortly afterwards left the course. On the way to the town she felt something moving on her head, and on reaching home and removing her hat she was surprised and startled to see the Canary fluttering to the floor, none the worse for its voluntary imprisonment. It had evidently, while being pursued, made a sudden dart into the crown of the hat, and slipped inside the lining, which happened to be partly unfastened. Fortunately the long, sharp pins with which most ladies' hats are nowadays attached to their hair had missed the bird's strange hiding-place.

ONE OF OUR EARLIEST SPRING MIGRANTS

From a Painting] [by H. Norman

MALE AND FEMALE WHEATEARS (Saxicola œnanthe)

THE Wheatear is one of our earliest spring visitors. The winter months it spends in the regions from Persia to the Himalayas and in the northern and eastern parts of Africa, etc. Its breeding haunts extend from the British Isles far to the North, even into the polar regions, and it is a curious fact that the Wheatears which breed in Greenland are very considerably larger than those which rear their young more to the South. These large Wheatears are, needless to say, the kind sought after by keepers of British birds desirous of exhibiting this species at the shows—they pass through England on migration at certain well-defined periods of the year. A first-class specimen always stands an excellent chance of getting into the prize-list.

Wheatears, like other members of the Chat family, are birds which prefer open country—wild, rocky, unfrequented—to cultivated parts, though they may often be noticed on pasture land, and when on migration have been frequently observed in even our London parks. This species is very beneficial, subsisting practically entirely on worms, small snails, and insect life generally. Its nest is not easy to find, being built under clods of earth, in holes in the ground (rabbit burrows sometimes) and in walls and similar spots. The structure itself is generally placed some little distance from the opening through which the old birds enter. The eggs number from four to seven, and are of a pale greenish-blue or greenish-white colour, occasionally (but very infrequently) faintly spotted. Two clutches are laid in a season.

The plumage of the old male may be described as delicate and chaste in its colour scheme—grey and pale fawn, with a black face patch and wings. The white rump and white root to the short black tail are very conspicuous when the bird is in flight. The female is a brown-coloured bird, lacking the white eye-streak and black face patch of her mate. The young have dusky (blackish) edgings to their feathers, giving them a mottled appearance; after the autumn moult they resemble the adult female. The old male, too, when in winter plumage, is much duller and "sandy" looking than when in nuptial garb.

Wheatears are extremely graceful birds, with something of the sprightliness of the Robin. On their long, stilty black legs they hop very quickly, and have a quaint habit of "bowing" and flirting the wings and tail, thus displaying the white rump. As a cage-bird this species has many traits to recommend it. The male is something of a songster, though his music is not of a very pretentious order. The call note, "clack, clack," very much resembles the sound produced by the knocking together of two stones.

A Devonshire Haunt of the Nightingale.

"Now every man hath almost a several Phansie, some make Choice of one Bird, some of another; but in my Choice and Opinion the Nightingal hath the Superiority above all others, and, almost according to the Judgment and Consent of everyone, she singeth with so much variety the sweetest and melodiest of all."—From "The Bird-Fancyer's Delight" (printed in 1711).

ONE feels that one cannot write about the Nightingale as one would about any other bird. That which is first is first: that which is second, third or fourth may be good, but a great gulf divides these positions from that which is first. Let us, then, realise that in the Nightingale we have something really unique, for it is the verdict of the centuries that "she singeth the sweetest and melodiest of all." But can we not go a little further than that? I expect we have all had our dark days when we have said to ourselves that Nature's laws are often so cruelly harsh and many of her processes so revolting that it is impossible that a beneficent Providence can control this wonderful world of ours. Then—perhaps in our darkest hour—we come across something of surpassing beauty, such as the song of the Nightingale, and at once we realise that pervading the whole Universe there is progress, there is a scheme, and that the ugly facts of Nature are but "stepping stones to higher things." So let us accept the Song of the Nightingale as something to be treasured, and, without troubling our heads as to whether the song was written and composed for the enjoyment of mankind, or whether the Nightingale himself evolved it for the gratification of himself and of his mate, let us hear all we can of it whilst we have the opportunity, for, alas, how short a time it lasts:

"A note, a strain, a rapture, then once more
A silence—and the song is o'er, is o'er."

Apart from his song, we must admit that there is nothing very remarkable about our friend the Nightingale. Let us note that he is not a Warbler but a small Thrush, as shown, for instance, by the fact that his young are spotted. We speak of him as a species, but that we may also dismiss from our minds, because there are no such things really as hard and fast species. We recognise certain types of birds, but these insensibly grade into one another, and it is usually impossible to say exactly where one begins and another ends. So it is with the Nightingale (D. luscinia), the Eastern Nightingale (D. golzii), called in Arabic and by the poets the Bulbul, and the Sprosser of Central and N. Europe (D. philomela): the three races are one type, though the Sprosser has certainly something distinctive in the small bastard primary, as pointed out by Howard Saunders.

NEST AND EGGS OF THE NIGHTINGALE.

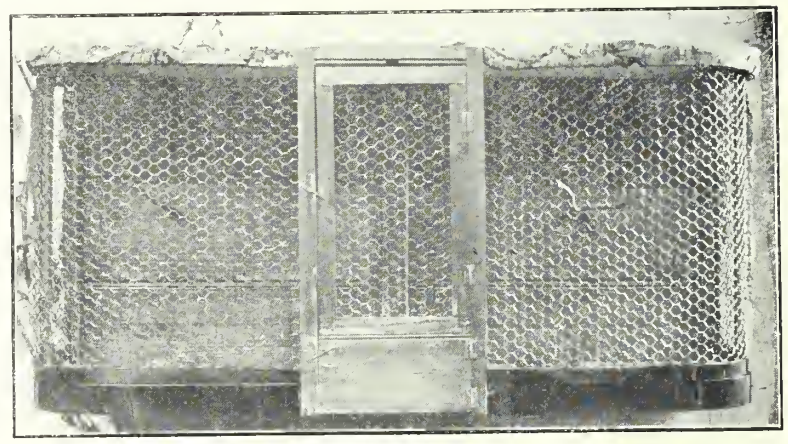
Equally difficult is it to separate them geographically, owing to their respective areas overlapping, and I gave up the attempt to draw a map illustrating these areas. Nevertheless, I thought a map, showing the range of our (Western) Nightingale might be interesting, and I have accordingly endeavoured to supply one. The white line is supposed to show the division between its summer, or breeding, area and its winter quarters, but it is, of course, only approximately correct. In accordance with the well-known principle that species which migrate furthest north in summer travel furthest south in winter, we find that the range of the Nightingale does not extend so far to the south as does that of the Garden-Warbler and Willow Wren, which reach Damaraland, or of the Red-backed Shrike, which is seen at Bloemfontein, or of the Swallow, which wings its way even as far as to Cape Town itself.

We may note also that this species leaves some of the more westerly areas of its geographical range severely alone as, for instance, Brittany, North Wales, and Ireland. It nests in the near neighbourhood of Hamburg, and this is possibly its most northerly nesting-station in Europe, its place in Scandinavia being taken by its more robust relative, the Sprosser. In our own country, however, it nests as far north as Ripon in Yorkshire and has even been occasionally heard in Northumberland, and has recently extended its range as far west as Cardiff.

I noticed that the author of a recent series of articles in a contemporary stated that the Nightingale was not found in Devonshire. This is distinctly unkind to my own county, which is not too well off in the matter of interesting species and cannot, therefore, afford to lose the credit of those which it does shelter. As a matter of fact Philomel is found throughout the whole length of Devon from its eastern boundary to the River Tamar on the west, which separates it from Cornwall. It is nowhere numerous with us, but, for all that, when Mr. T. H. Nelson (author of "The Birds of Yorkshire") paid me a visit a couple of years since and told me that he had never had an opportunity of hearing the song, I was able to take him to a locality where we heard four, or perhaps five, Nightingales singing at one and the same time, and that in the middle of the afternoon.

It is just possible that some of our readers may wish to know exactly where they can hear our songster in Devonshire, and, if that be so, I recommend them to make their way to Trusham Station, which is some three miles from Chudleigh. Our heading gives us a view of the River Teign, flowing under Trusham Bridge, and at this spot you will be nearly sure to hear what you want, or, if not, you need only walk a mile further up the Valley of the Teign in the direction of Ashton.



IN THE MERRIE MONTH OF MAY.

In order to bring before you some of the habits of the Nightingale in the nesting-season, I do not think I can do better than describe what I saw during the few days I was able to spend in one of its haunts during the spring of last year. This particular locality is a very quiet spot where, I think, in days long since past, men whose names have long ago been forgotten must have dug for a certain mineral. In any case extensive pits have been formed all over it, and these have become overgrown with a dense tangle of briars and sloes and rushes. It is well wooded, many of the trees, such as the elders, standing in stagnant pools of inky water. Here our songster is quite unmolested, partly because the ground is not cultivated and partly because the thickets are so dense and the subsoil so treacherous that no one but an ornithologist would be tempted to explore its remote labyrinths.

I will now ask you to forget that we are in chilly winter and to imagine that this is May Day. The Nightingale, for some reason best known to itself, arrives first upon our south-eastern coast, and for this reason our Devonshire Nightingales are always a little late in putting in an appearance. Besides this, last spring the weather was so cold and wet in April that all our migrants were about a week later than usual, and the Swift nearly a fortnight behind time. It was not, therefore, till May 1st—a fine warm day, though cloudy, and the wind in the east—that I first heard the familiar notes. I was sitting on a fallen tree in "Nightingale-land" watching a solitary Willow-Wren building a trial-nest single-handed, when from the same venerable oak as last year and the year before came the well-remembered "tio-tio; tick-tick-tick-tick; jug-jug; tee-tee-tee-tee-tee."

We will call this bird "No. 1," and I will ask you to note that he pitched his camp in exactly the same spot as the first arrival did last year and the year before. I must explain that "Nightingale-land" has certain natural divisions; each swampy pit forms a separate oasis, and these are divided from one another by dry land, and in some cases by paths. Each pair of Nightingales keeps to its own territory, which they evidently regard as their absolute property. Apparently it is a case of "first come, first served," and this particular swamp must be regarded as the pick of the basket.

On the 4th May "No. 2" turned up. It was blowing very hard from the north, with occasional heavy showers, so that he must have had a particularly hard time of it during the last lap of his long journey. Nevertheless he was singing lustily and apparently as fresh as paint. "No. 2" pitched his tent quite 150 yards from "No. 1," and on the same spot as the second arrival the previous year.

MR. TESCHEMAKER'S NIGHTINGALE CAGE.
(Dimensions: 3 feet long, 18 inches high, 14 inches wide.)

There is a natural boundary between these two territories in the form of an old grass-grown road with high hawthorn hedges. When I came across them the two vocalists were within a few yards of one another, one in each hedge, and in the intervals of their song I heard a lot of "churring"; probably they were exchanging notes on the incidents of their home-coming, but, unfortunately, I could not gather even the general drift of their conversation. I saw no fighting; in fact, they seemed the best of friends.

The 11th May was a day of great events in "Nightingale-land." In the first place "No. 3" turned up, and camped out on a spot which I had not known occupied in former years. But something much more interesting was going on in the big oak tree. I heard a lot of "churring," and after a time could easily distinguish two distinct voices. After some careful investigation I made a great discovery: it was "No. 1's" wedding day! With swelling throat and a torrent of deep bass notes he was pouring forth his heart's devotion, while the blushing bride seemed quite overwhelmed by his attentions, and kept dodging away into the thickest part of the covert. Meantime "No. 2" was looking on from the hawthorn hedge and in a state of great excitement, but he dared not cross the boundary! I cannot help thinking that this must have been "No. 1's" partner of former years, because, although she arrived with "No. 3" she apparently took no notice of that somewhat belated traveller. When one comes to think of it, the arrival of the first hen of the season must be a very trying time for the lady! One would think that she must be almost torn to pieces by her numerous admirers. Picture to yourself the advent of a young and eligible maiden, after a long and dusty journey, in a roaring mining camp in the wild west of America, and you will have a fair idea of the intensity of the situation. The weather report in my note book says, "Grand day; S.E., fresh."

A DAY WITH A BIRD-CATCHER

By E. W. TAYLOR.

MOST of us have at least a visual acquaintance with the bird-catcher. We have seen him in the earlier hours of the morning tramping along country lanes and hedgerows in order to arrive at some favourite haunt before the sun is high in the heavens, and before some other member of this fairly numerous fraternity has appropriated it for the day. He can readily be recognised by the nets and cases which always accompany him, for call and brace birds, store cages, sockets, twigs, nets, poles and pegs are only a few of the more important requisites which help to make up his outfit, and by means of which he is enabled to ply his craft.

Having arrived at what his experience tells him to be a suitable locality, he selects a hedge which should be neither too thick nor too high, and commences to unload, all the time noticing what species of birds are in the neighbourhood, and what food appears to attract them the most. Soon all sorts of odds and ends are unearthed from their allotted corners, and are arranged out on the grass so that they may be found immediately as required.

He now takes the sockets, short lengths of hazel or willow split at the bottom and hollowed out; these he fixes along the top of the hedge until they are numerous enough to make it impossible for any bird to alight on the hedge without coming into contact with one or more of the twigs, one being placed slantingly in each socket. The twigs are often cut from maple, though some prefer stiff blades of grass. He will have them worked in the lime the previous evening, taking a bunch in his hands at a time, and working them about until each has a thin coating of lime for the last few inches of its length, afterwards removing it from his hands with paraffin.

If the day is very bright the lime will shine, and will warn birds from settling, when they will hover suspiciously for a few seconds before finally flying away. If, on the other hand, the day is very wet, the lime wil be rendered useless, and he will be obliged to use a new set of twigs after each heavy shower.

When he has inserted all the limed twigs, he takes the call birds and hides them at the bottom, or halfway up the hedge, placing a handful of straw behind each cage if the day is windy in order to protect the birds from draughts, which are very harmful. If he desires to catch Linnets, the call birds will be cock Linnets. Trouble may also be caused by the wind blowing the twigs out of the sockets.

The "set," as it is called, is now completed, and he retires some distance to await events.

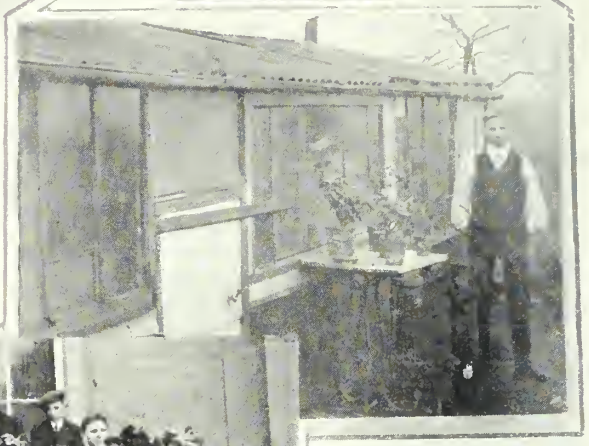
Soon, perhaps, a flock of Greenfinches will fly over and be attracted by the song of the call-birds, when they will possibly hesitate and alight on the prepared position of the hedge. This is the signal for our friend to race off as fast as he can, observing as he runs where the limed birds fall. If Greenfinches are no use to him, he may merely select one or two of the best and liberate the rest. If the birds are wanted, he will clean them with a piece of cloth dipped in paraffin, a small bottle of which finds a place on his person. The birds are then placed in the store-cage.

Any empty sockets are now refilled with fresh twigs, and he once more retires to await events.

After half-an-hour or so a flock of Linnets, which he has been watching and in the hopes of catching which he chose this particular hedgerow, settle on the same hedge, but a hundred yards or so on the far side of the "set." After waiting a few minutes he makes up his mind that they will have to be driven towards the prepared portion, as they are out of hearing of the call-birds, and may take flight in a wrong direction at any moment. Without exposing himself more than is necessary, he commences to work round the remaining three sides of the field until he is a hundred yards or so from the Linnets, when, by cautiously showing himself and moving slowly down the hedge, he is fortunate enough to cause them to take flight, and, attracted by the call-birds, they settle on the limed twigs. Once more he is obliged to indulge in a sharp sprint and several Linnets are captured, cleaned and placed in the store cages.

The hen Linnets can be told from the cocks by certain slight differences well known to his practised eye. The hens are of comparatively slight value, but the cocks may eventually take a place in many singing contests.

Starlings, Sparrows and several other species are sometimes accidently caught, but are of no use to the bird-catcher whose chief ambitions he in the direction of cock Linnets.



Bullfinches are often caught by means of dockings, a bunch of which are tied to a sharpened stake which is driven into the ground in a neighbourhood where Bull-

TRAINING & MANAGING A PARROT

By M. T. GOLDSBOROUGH (U.S.A.)

"POLL" perched upon his mistress's finger and cocked his head saucily. "Pretty Poll," I said, falling into the Parrot vernacular; but Poll blinked his eyes, ruffled his grey feathers and looked at me disdainfully.

"Romeo scorns the name of Poll," said his mistress, in explanation of her pet's attitude. "He never would even learn the word, and he has a feeling of distrust for anyone who presumes to call him by that belittling appellation. Call him 'Romeo,' and observe his change of manner."

"Romeo," I then repeated, with all the suavity I could command; and immediately he became more friendly. "Romeo is here," he said. "Romeo can sing."

"Here's to Good Old Ale," he began, and ended with "Dickory Dock," "One, Two, Buckle My Shoe," and a part of "The Holy City." Such a wide range of "talk" I had never known in a Parrot. He was certainly a remarkable bird.

"Romeo is the most interesting bird I have ever taught," said the proud owner of this bird prodigy. "You know, the African grey birds are slower to learn than the Amazons, but once they have acquired a word or phrase they never forget it. They are also gentler, and are generally considered the best talkers. I was nine months teaching Romeo his name. I gave him four lessons a day at fixed intervals, and also repeated 'Romeo' every time I went near his cage. He made all sorts of ridiculous efforts to repeat the word, and when he did not succeed I rapped him gently on the toes—not enough to hurt him, dear knows—but just enough to remind him that he must try again. I kept a slender stick near his cage for this purpose. I never reward Parrots with sweets. It ruins their digestion. The pride they feel in the accomplishment of the task is their best and greatest reward. It is a delight to see their happiness when they learn a new word. They love to talk and to hear people talk. With the acquisition of his name—you see I am telling you the whole story—the mystery was unlocked for Romeo, and from this time he learned to repeat almost anything I said to him. I have trained him for three years."

A SCENE IN "PARROT-LAND."

A month after my first visit to the Parrot trainer I had occasion to pay her another call. As I entered the little shop she sat behind the small counter surrounded by birds of many species, whose chirping and chattering made a lively din. She has the love of animals in her face, and with her gentle, complacent eyes and halo of soft, snowy hair, she looks the true friend of all living creatures. But I detected a sadness that was not present at our first meeting.

"Well, how are the Parrots?" I began. "Romeo is dead!" she said abruptly, with a sob in her voice. "Oh!" was all that I could say in the presence of her real sorrow. "Yes, I sold him the day after you were here, and he lived only three weeks. He took pneumonia and died. His owners probably left him in a draught. Parrots cannot stand draughts, you know. They are very sensitive. Poor Romeo! If I had only kept him! I feel as if I am really his murderer."

"But you are not responsible for the care of birds after they have left your hands," I said consolingly. "No; but he was different from the others," she lamented. "He was my favourite child. He appreciated everything I did for him, and was so happy with me."

THE WHITE-WINGED BLACK TERN

This species (Hydrochelidon leucoptera) is an occasional visitor to our shores from Southern Europe, etc. These graceful, swift-flying, powerful-winged sea-birds, the Terns, are familiarly termed "Sea-Swallows."

I saw that her grief would not be appeased, and decided to change the subject. "What special methods do you employ in teaching Parrots?" I asked irrelevantly. "Repetition is the only method," she replied promptly, "and this means saying things over and over till you feel as if you are crazy, and have no brains yourself. Of course, I love my birds, but training many at a time for the trade is like many another attractive occupation, in that it becomes a pretty hard grind when engaged in for the purpose of earning a living.

"First, one must obtain the bird's attention and affection, and these are based entirely upon the love of the owner for his pets. Parrots are affectionate and intelligent, and are regular peacocks for pride. They are anxious to talk, delight in the power when it is once acquired, and express a keen appreciation for their instruction. Then, having gained my bird's attention, I begin the process of repetition, being careful to enunciate clearly and to have my words and phrases fit the circumstances and time. That's all there is to it—but it sometimes means a very long course of training. Some Parrots learn quickly, others slowly, and often when you have given a bird up as a hopeless impossibility he will surprise you with a 'Good morning.' There is no way to judge of their capability until you try them, and even then you cannot really know without long-continued effort. Their attitudes, droll efforts, and queer tones are ample reward for your trouble.

"Parrots are expensive birds to keep, and are more or less—usually more—untidy in their habits. Unless they can talk there is therefore no demand for them. For this reason I feel compelled to train them in order that they may be saleable; it is hard to even give one away that does not talk. I charge a dollar a week for the instruction, but people are usually unwilling to pay this amount to have their birds taught. They prefer to buy those whose powers of speech are already guaranteed.

"Some trainers suggest covering a bird, or talking behind a mirror in front of which the bird is placed, but I have never used these methods. I simply repeat and repeat. And I find that occasionally a good talker will add to his vocabulary by picking up something not intended for his ears, but overheard in my conversation with people.

"Many people lose their birds because there is not enough attention given to the varying of their food, to its quality, and to cleanliness. The cage must be kept clean, with plenty of gravel. Clean water must always be given, and the perch must be frequently scrubbed. The food should consist of a mixture of white maize, sunflower, hemp, canary, and millet seeds, with Chili or large whole peppers once a week, and watercress, celery, or lettuce. Hard-boiled egg, rice, biscuits, various nuts, a little sponge cake, and fruit in season are among the desirable articles of food for occasional use. Orange peel furnishes good entertainment for these mischievous birds, for they enjoy picking things to pieces. They are born whittlers, and tear a stick of firewood into shreds in a few hours."

From all this it is plain to see that success in the training of Parrots (like that of children) depends largely upon the personal influence of the teacher. If he has inculcated a feeling of trust and confidence in his bird pupil, the range of possibility in the way of teaching his pet words, phrases, and little tricks is almost unlimited.

This point was well illustrated to me by a friend who owned a bird of unusual affection and intelligence. So implicitly did this bird trust her mistress that at her solicitation she would lie perfectly limp in her hands and allow herself to be tossed in the air and caught, in ball-playing fashion. She could also be swung around in a circle while clinging by her beak to her mistress' finger!

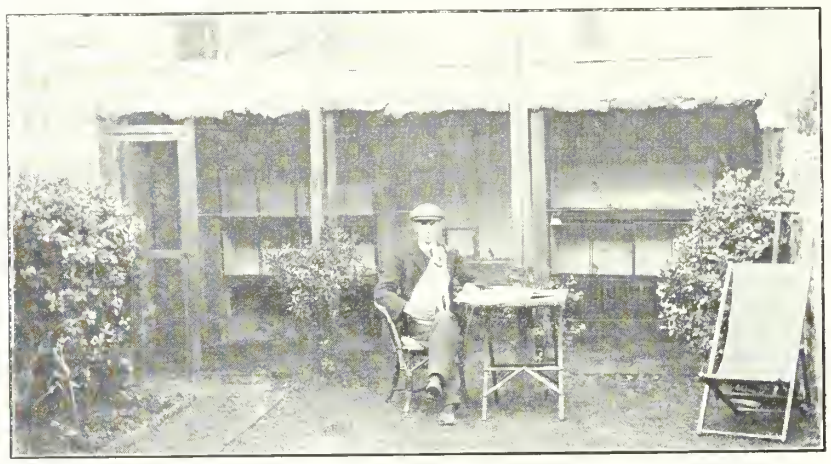
HYBRID BREEDING:

ITS PLEASURES & DIFFICULTIES.



By E. COLLINS (Barnstaple).

This is the article which was awarded First Prize in "Cage Birds" Essay Competition in the Hybrid Section.

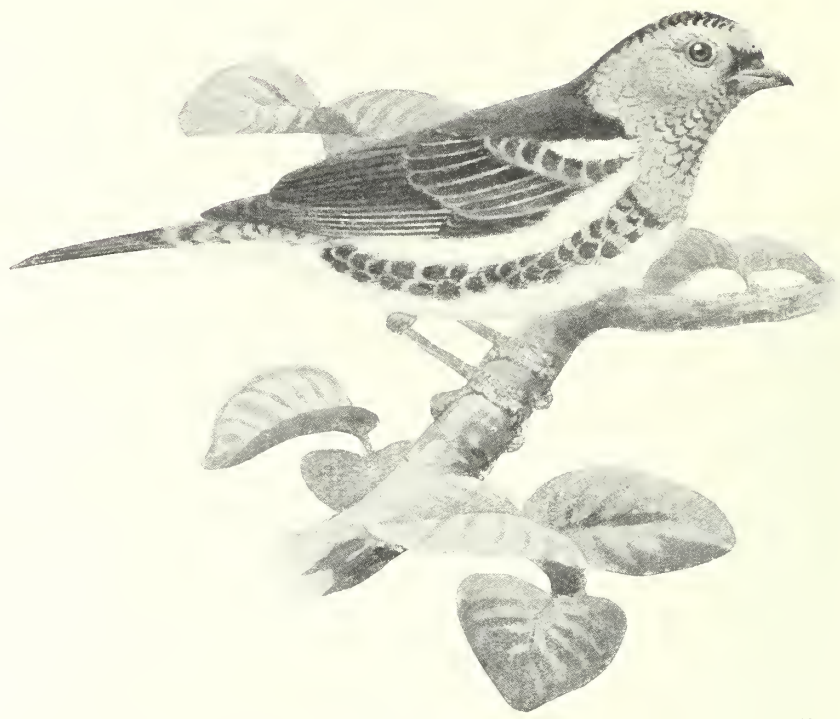
SO much has already been written on the subject of hybridism that one is almost bound to tread on ground which has been trodden before. But we must not forget that it is upon this interchange of ideas and opinions on any subject that progress is based, a statement which is proved by the wonderful strides which have been made in all branches of aviculture since the advent of our weekly and our monthly papers. I do not propose here to go into the theories of hybridism, which open up a wide field for discussion, but those interested in this wonderful subject would do well to study the writings of Darwin, Mendel and other scientists on this fascinating subject. I choose, rather, to treat the matter from the breeder's point of view.

The hybrid is the offspring of a fertile cross between two distinct species. As a general rule, species when intercrossed are sterile, and the living hybrid is but the exception which proves the rule. This exceptional state of things is not confined to bird-life, but is present throughout the animal and vegetable kingdoms, and the laws governing the production of hybrid forms are nearly identical in the two kingdoms.

The word "hybrid" is derived from the Greek word "hubris," meaning "an outrage," and naturally suggests to our minds a happening which is contrary to the laws of Nature. This reminds me of a conversation which I overheard at a show several years ago, between two fanciers who were not too well acquainted with the subject of hybridism, and to whom the word "hybrid" was somewhat of a puzzle. After a careful inspection of my birds, one of the two put the following question to his friend: "I say, Jim, why de 'em call these birds 'highbreeds,' for I see nothing more in 'em than in any other breed?" His friend, not wishing to be thought altogether ignorant in such matters, replied, "Well, Bob, you see, it is because they are the hardest of all birds to breed."

MR. COLLINS' OUTDOOR AVIARY.

At the back are to he seen the breeding cages used for the hybrid pairs.



Although "hybrid" may mean the offspring of a fertile cross between any two animals or plants of distinct species, it must in this article be understood to mean the offspring of a fertile cross between two British birds of distinct species.

SUPREMELY DIFFICULT, BUT FASCINATING AND POPULAR.

There is a tradition to the effect that the British Army does not know when it is beaten, returning to the attack with renewed energy after each reverse. This same tenacity of purpose and perseverance is required by those whose aim it is to produce hybrids between British birds, for surely in no branch of the interesting hobby of bird-keeping and bird-rearing are so many difficulties to be met with as in the breeding of hybrids. The would-be hybrid breeder must enter upon his task with determination and grit, for he will meet with difficulties and disappointments from the commencement.

By a careful study of our birds themselves, as well as of their foods and habits, some of these difficulties may be removed, but, with all our care and attention, disappointments will come, sometimes fast and furious, spoiling our chances and wrecking our hopes. Birds we have carefully selected will not mate; or just as everything seems to be going on well, and our hopes are running high, eggs are dropped from the perches, or, if laid in the nest, are either discovered broken or have totally disappeared. Again, supposing we have at last succeeded in procuring a clutch of eggs, there is the difficulty of finding a hen Canary to place them under, for somehow these hens will not go off to nest at the right time. This difficulty over, there follows that anxious time of waiting, which in the vast majority of cases ends in the sad discovery that all the eggs are clear. But if lucky enough to get fertile eggs, which are in due time hatched, there may still be trouble ahead, for young hybrids are not so easily reared and moulted as young Canaries, as most of us have found to our sorrow.

Yet, notwithstanding its many difficulties and disappointments, this hobby is finding favour among fanciers throughout the country. And this is not to be wondered at, for it is just this glorious uncertainty attending every step in the production of the hybrid which makes the hobby the most interesting, the most attractive and the most fascinating in the whole world of bird-keeping. Perhaps at no time in its history has the breeding of hybrids been so popular as during the past five or six years, with the result that some very rare and beautiful specimens have been placed upon the exhibition benches. No doubt it is the stimulus arising from competition which has done so much to deepen and widen this interest; but apart from all, the hobby is one which is full of interest and value from an educational point of view, for in the pursuit of it there is always something to observe, something to note down, to verify, or to compare.

A HEAVY TASK UNDERTAKEN.

It was in November, 1904, that I was first attracted to this fascinating hobby through a visit to the Barnstaple Great Show. Among the exhibits was a very fine team of mules and hybrids put down by Messrs. Browning & Williams, of Plymouth, and many were the questions I put to various breeders as to what the crosses were and the manner in which they had been obtained; with the result that I left the show with a fixed determination to enlist in the ranks of would-be hybrid breeders.

At this time I had never bred even a common Canary, so my readers can imagine what a heavy task I had set myself to perform. However, I set to work, and by the following April had six pairs of Britishers and five pairs of Canaries matched for breeding. The less said about this season's work the better, for it was a year of catastrophies. And yet, by the end of the season, I had gained an experience which proved of great service to me in the following year. I obtained about forty eggs from my Britishers. Many of these eggs were broken from various causes, while of those saved and tested under Canaries exactly 100 per cent. proved to be clear.

But though the season was unproductive as far as actual hybrids is concerned, it was not without its pleasing incidents. I have pleasant recollections of a hen Linnet which built her nest in a wicker basket placed on the floor of the cage. She deposited five eggs. She sat closely for sixteen days, leaving the nest only to feed; and she even refused to come off the nest when I lifted it to examine the eggs—a very unusual occurrence with a hen Linnet, for as a rule they are the most restless, nervous birds in captivity. On the fourteenth morning I moved her cage from its usual place to a position near the window for the purpose of getting a photograph of her upon the nest, and though the wire front was removed and the camera placed within ten inches of her, she never flinched; but unluckily she turned her head to examine the camera at the critical moment, and so the photograph was spoilt. Unfortunately, the eggs were clear, so I had no opportunity of knowing whether she would have successfully reared the young. I became very much attached to this hen, and also to a cock Siskin, which would leave his cage and perch on my finger every time I entered the room.

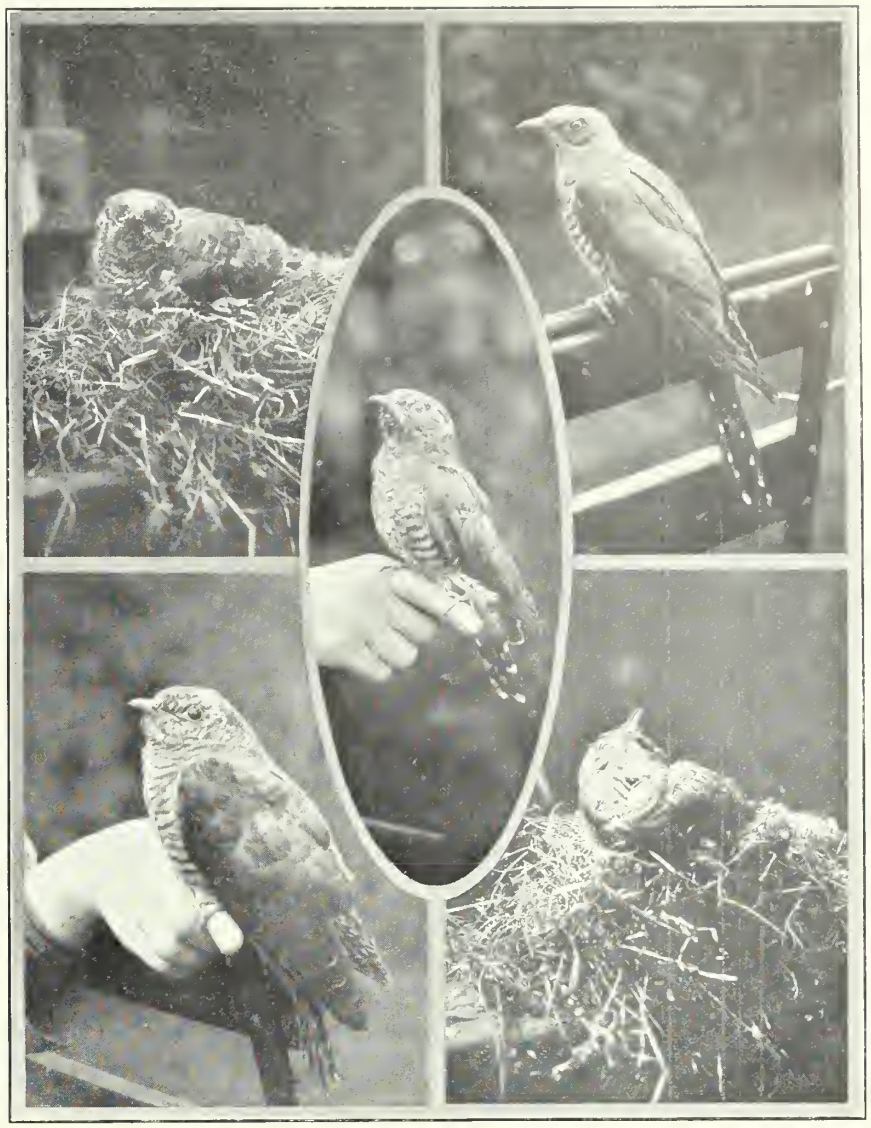
An amusing incident was provided by a Redpoll-Bullfinch pair (?). The Bullfinch hen soon commenced building operations to my great delight, for by this time I had learned of the rarity of this cross, and great were my expectations. Imagine my surprise a week or so later to discover that the Redpoll also had built a nest in the sawdust, which was carefully lined and in which she had deposited her tiny blue egg. Of course, I quickly removed the Bullfinch and introduced a cock Goldfinch; but though the birds were soon on the best of terms, nothing resulted but the usual batch of clear eggs.



This season's work was carried out in an indoor room, and as soon as the breeding season was over I turned all my Britishers out of doors to moult, the cocks in one large flight and the hens in another. I kept all the hens which had shown an inclination to breed, and secured two more Bullfinch hens, one fresh-caught and the other house-moulted.

UNDAUNTED EFFORTS.

Nothing daunted by my previous failures, I was soon busy preparing for further experiments, and by the next season had the following pairs matched for breeding:—Greenfinch-Bullfinch (two pairs); Linnet-Bullfinch (two pairs); Goldfinch-Redpoll; and Goldfinch-Siskin. These birds were all in the pink of condition (and herein lies one of the secrets of successful hybrid-breeding). Most of the hens commenced nesting operations very early and my hopes ran high. The realisation of these hopes came later. for by the end of the season I had bred six Goldfinch-Redpoll hybrids, three of which were successfully reared and moulted, and a Linnet-Bullfinch, which also I successfully piloted through a very tedious moult. There was also one fertile egg from a Greenfinch-Bullfinch pair, but it went wrong when partly formed, as so many hybrid eggs are apt to do.

I think my readers will agree with me that this was not a bad year's work, and I must confess I felt very proud of my team. With a little more luck it might easily have been eight instead of four. I lost three Goldfinch-Redpoll hybrids through a bad feeding hen, after rearing them to four or five days old. Unfortunately I had no other hen to place them under. The hen entrusted with the incubation of the Linnet-Bullfinch eggs put a claw through one of the eggs on the twelfth day. This egg contained a fully-formed chick, which soon died, however. On the following morning I discovered the second egg broken. This time the shell had been forced inwardly, producing a wheel-shaped fracture with a small hole in the centre. I quickly covered the broken part with a small piece of stamp-paper, and, fearing to trust the hen further with such important business, I carried the egg to the house of a friend who was then breeding mules, and was lucky enough to find a nest of mules just hatching. The egg was carefully placed in the nest, and left to its fate. On the following morning my friend arrived with beaming face and breathless with excitement, and I knew all was well. We decided to leave the hybrid with the young mules, thinking it would stand a better chance of being reared, so from that time all the credit of bringing the bird on to the perches belongs to my friend. It was reared on the usual diet supplied for young mules or Canaries, viz.:—Canary seed, crushed hemp, soaked rape, and egg food, with lettuce as a green food. The Goldfinch-Redpoll hybrids were reared on egg food, hemp, Canary and soaked rape seeds, ripe dandelion and groundsel.

My next season's efforts were not attended by such unqualified success, for though the early part of the season gave promise of even greater things, yet when the end of the breeding season came, I had failed to rear a single hybrid as the result of the season's work. No less than four hybrids were hatched from the same parents, two from each pair, which were reared to ages varying from three to twelve days, but not one of the four left the nest alive. I can in no way account for their dropping off so suddenly, for, with one exception, they were strong and healthy, and seemed to be doing well up to a certain stage. Two Goldfinch mules went off in the same manner, just as everything seemed to be going on well.

MRS. E. M. SARGEANT'S PET CUCKOOS

(See article in this issue.)

The young Cuckoo has its plumage barred all over, with cream and black below and brown and black above, but the adult Cuckoo (note bird at top right-hand corner) is a plain grey, barred with black and white on the under-surface only.

A CURIOUS ATTITUDE OF THE BEARDED TIT

The male may sometimes be seen with its wing extended over its mate, as though to protect her.

I managed, however, to rear a nest of Greenfinch-Canary mules. But even here ill-luck seemed to follow me, for when the youngsters came on to the perches, I discovered that three birds out of the four were the possessors of mal-formed feet. In two instances the three front toes on each foot were joined throughout their entire length, while the third bird had only two front toes on one foot and a short, useless hind toe on the other, which caused him to take the perches very badly. The last-mentioned bird was a really fine specimen and would have given a good account of himself at the shows had it not been for these imperfections.

In my fourth season I turned my attention to the breeding of Canary mules, but though I bred several mules from the Goldfinch, Linnet and Greenfinch, including three variegated Goldfinch mules, none of the youngsters proved to be up to the exhibition standard. Of the possibilities of the successful crossing of some other species of British birds, suffice it to say that I do not intend to relax my efforts just yet, and intend shortly to try for some of the rarer crosses.

A TRICKY GAME.

We are now standing on the threshold of another breeding season, and the would-be hybrid breeder will soon be finding sufficient work to keep him occupied during his leisure hours. I propose now to call attention to a few points which demand notice, the neglect of which will be followed by unsatisfactory and perhaps even fatal results. But before proceeding further let it be thoroughly understood that the following remarks as to the selection, feeding and general management of stock are written for the benefit of novices, and those who have not yet entered the lists, but are thinking of "trying their luck." I use the word luck here advisedly, for there will always be the element of chance in this hobby seeing we are attempting something which is against Nature. Hybrids between British birds will never be as common as Canaries or mules, for in each of these cases we have, as a parent, the domesticated Canary, which at once brushes aside most of the difficulties. The following is just an honest attempt to enumerate some of the difficulties I have met with during three years of hybrid breeding, and to explain some of the methods I have adopted to overcome these difficulties.

In deciding to write at all on this subject I have been guided to a very great extent by the questions that have been put to me when visiting the shows—questions as to what my birds were, how they were obtained, the housing and management of the Finches paired for breeding and the feeding and moulting, etc., of the finished article—the hybrid itself. Here let me say at once that he who is thinking of setting himself the task of placing upon the show-bench a team of hybrids bred by himself—hybrids which shall be a credit to their owner—must be prepared for many a disappointment before he has accomplished the object of his desire. It is a game which baffles one at every point, a game in which the best laid schemes of men are often shattered.

finches have been previously observed. The sockets and limed twigs are fixed as before, and a dummy Finch may be fastened on top as shown in the photograph. The call-bird is placed on the ground at the foot, and should be either a cock or a hen of the same species. It is a good plan to place a handful of grass or rubbish on top of the cage to render it less conspicuous.

Another branch of this art demands the use of clap-nets, by means of which Goldfinches, Greenfinches, Chaffinches, Bullfinches, Hawfinches, Linnets, Redpolls, etc., may be caught. The nets, usually of about ¾-in. mesh, are made of fine and inconspicuous material in order that they may show as little as possible when laid out on the ground.

The nets in the photograph were chosen because they did not match the ground very closely, in order that they might show up the better in the reproduction with a view to showing the manner in which they are set. Each net may be any size up to 6 ft. by 30 ft.

Our bird-catcher, having now decided to devote the rest of the day to the use of the clap-nets, selects a spot that is free from long grass or weeds, both of which may prevent the nets responding quickly to the pull, and may interfere with their lying evenly on the ground. He then lays out the nets, near a hedge if possible, and proceeds to adjust the poles, pegs and guy lines, until the nets, when closed, overlap a foot or more. It is usually desirable that the net nearest the hedge should work fastest. The bait and the brace-bird (if one is used) are placed within the net.

When call-birds are used, they are usually placed about in the positions indicated in the photographs, reference to which will, I think, make all clear.

Supposing the catcher wishes to procure Linnets, the call-birds will be cock Linnets, and the brace-bird a hen Linnet; and he will set the nets in the middle of a field, the nets themselves being large, as Linnets usually fly in flocks, and will, on hearing the call-birds, be attracted to the nets. They will then either settle immediately between the nets or hover around on seeing the brace-bird. A pull at the right moment will net the birds in either case.

If he desires to catch Goldfinches, he will select a spot in the open country where teazel and thistle abound; and he will, if possible, set the nets near a hedge and near a brook, and scatter thistle heads and teazel stalks underneath the fastest net as bait. Call-birds and brace-birds are used, and in this case they will be Goldfinches or Goldfinch Mules. The bird-catcher usually waits until all have settled, when he may succeed in taking the whole flight at one pull.

Chaffinches, Bullfinches, Redpolls, Hawfinches, etc., can be caught in the same manner, but the call-birds should be, if possible, of the same species; the first-mentioned are somewhat shy and difficult to net. Even the dashing Sparrow Hawk is occasionally netted, attracted by the brace-bird.

OUR COLOURED PLATES.

The Three Graces.

There is no bird of the Canary race that has been so much improved by careful breeding as the Crested Norwich. The bird known by this name some twenty-five years back was a mere pigmy compared with the giant of to-day. Not only has the bird been improved in size, but shape of body, quality of feather, radiation and density of crest feather have all been improved, and it cannot be said of this breed that any one point has been neglected; the improvement wrought has been a genuine all-round development of general characteristics.

The improvement in this breed is owing to the introduction of the Coppy. The beautiful radiation, droop, and density of crest have all come from the Lancashire, yet so carefully has this been done that very few of our best show specimens show any sign of the cross except in the formation of the crest. The Norwich body, with its beautiful feather, has not been improved out of existence, but is found in all birds of the front rank.

Crest breeding is one of the most interesting branches of the Canary Fancy. There is here more scope for the development of individual thought and experiment than there is in either of the other breeds. Take, for instance, the breeding of evenly-marked birds. The breeder of the Plainhead has only to get his markings; the breeder of the Crest has to get markings and crest. Then, again, in breeding clear-bodied birds, the Plainhead breeder has to simply get his bird clear. The breeder of clear-body Crests has to get the body of his birds perfectly clear, yet, while doing this, he has to keep the crest as dark as possible.

In selecting stock, see that the Plainheads are possessed of good broad skulls, well browed eyes, and thick, stout bodies. The crests should be carefully examined. Many birds with long drooping crests are often deficient in density of crest feather—that is, the under-feather is short, thin, and scanty. This cannot be observed unless the crest is carefully lifted and turned back. It is also wise to turn back the feathers on the skulls of the Plainheads. It sometimes happens that birds possessing good brows are not well-feathered on the top of the skull. This is a most important point in selecting stock, and should not be overlooked.

The crested birds of this variety should possess a good centre, and from this centre the crest feather should radiate in a uniform manner all round; there should be no break in the feather, which should lie quite thick and flat on the skull, drooping evenly over the eyes, beak and neck. The neck should be short and thick, the back broad and full, the chest deep and well rounded, the legs short and well set. The tail should be neat in shape, and not too long.

Length of body feather is a "sine qua non" in breeding these birds, it being quite impossible to get long, weeping crests of much density unless the body feather is long and thick.

The above paragraphs concerning the noble Crested Canary, which Mr. Norman has so successfully portrayed in the three specimens on his splendid coloured plate which appears in this birthday issue, are taken from the chapter on the Crest in Mr. C. A. House's "Canary Manual." This popular handbook (a fifth edition, brought thoroughly up-to-date, has just been issued) is published by CAGE BIRDS at 1s. (or 1s. 2d. post free), and is an invaluable work, giving detailed instruction concerning the proper methods of breeding all varieties of the Canary family.

Strangers Within the Gates.

Mr. Rankin's trio of artistic paintings grouped under the title "Strangers Within the Gates," represent birds which occasionally pay a visit to the British Isles.

THE MASKED SHRIKE (Lanius nubicus) is an exceptionally rare visitor—or straggler—to our shores, only one (or, perhaps, two) instances of its arrival having been recorded. The Shrikes are a well-known family, and comprise many species, two of which (the Red-backed and the Great Grey) visit us regularly, the former in the summer, and the latter in the winter. They are popularly known as "Butcher Birds," from their habit of slaughtering other small birds, mice, etc., and sticking the body of the victim on some convenient thorn while being torn to pieces and devoured.

THE WHITE-WINGED LARK (Melanocorypha sibirica) is an accidental visitor from Central and Southern Russia and Central Asia. In winter it has been found occasionally as far west as Belgium, and one or two examples have been secured in England. It is said to have a song very like that of our own familiar Skylark, and to be in the habit of making short ascents into the air. It frequents grassland and open country, and flocks of the species assemble in the winter months. The sexes are easy to distinguish, the female lacking the rufous crown of her mate. This Lark is just about the same size as the Skylark, is thick-set in build, and has a very stout bill.

THE BEE-EATER (Merops apiaster) is a gorgeously beautiful bird, with plumage of varying shades of sea-green, yellow, and chestnut, carrying a lovely metallic sheen. It is not often an example is found in England (though once a flight of about twenty was observed in Norfolk), its home ranging about Southern Europe, Northern Africa and Central Asia. This species has the habit of nesting in colonies, in holes in banks, like the Sand Martins. Bee-eaters are birds of very active habits, living by catching insects while on the wing, and they are birds of very graceful flight—quite one of the most beautiful species to be found in these islands.

Notes upon our coloured plate "Wild plants and seeds for Bird Keepers" will be found on page 32.

A FREE TRIP TO THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW

"CAGE BIRDS" UNIQUE COMPETITION.

To the reader of CAGE BIRDS who exercises the greatest skill in forecasting the entry received at the coming Crystal Palace show we offer the following prize, which we believe is unique so far as the cage-bird Fancy is concerned.

OUR PRIZE:

A DAY'S FREE TRIP TO THE PALACE SHOW.

A Free Railway Pass (3rd Class) to and from the Crystal Palace Show; free meals during the day spent in London; and free hotel accommodation (limited to one night) if made necessary by reason of the distance from the Metropolis of the successful competitor's home.

The conditions attaching to this competition are very simple; the filling up of the coupon, however, calls for the exercise of skill in gauging the present-day exhibiting strength of the various sections catered for by the management of the Crystal Palace Show.

Competitors have to fill up the appended coupon with the number of exhibits they consider will be entered at the forthcoming Palace Show in the various sections covered by the classification. The coupon which gives the correct total, or that which gives the total most nearly correct, will be adjudged the wining coupon. In the event of a tie, then the competitor gauging the entries correctly in the greatest number of sections will be awarded the prize. The rules printed below must be carefully observed; failure to do so will lead to disqualification.

This competition closes first post Friday next, January 20. Any coupons arriving after that date and time will be too late to compete.

A complete detailed list of the entry at the Palace Show will be obtained at the earliest possible moment from the Show Manager, Mr. J. W. Ramsden, duly signed by him; and on the figures given in his list this competition will be decided.

We need hardly say, perhaps, that no person directly connected with the management of the Crystal Palace Show, or the staff of CAGE BIRDS, will be allowed to compete for this prize.

In the coupon, as a help to competitors, we give the number of entries received at the Palace Shows of 1909 and 1910 respectively, the figures in brackets representing the number of classes which appeared in the schedules for the years in question.

RULES FOR COMPETITORS.

1. The figures must be clearly written, and only in the spaces provided.
2. Competitors can send in two or more attempts, but each attempt must be made upon a separate coupon cut from the pages of CAGE BIRDS.
3. The name and address of the sender must be given in full on every coupon.
4. In the case of two or more competitors correctly forecasting the total entry, the coupon giving the correct entry in the greatest number of sections shall be adjudged the winning coupon.
5. All coupons must reach us by first post Friday next, January 20, or they will be too late to compete.
6. Entries are accepted only on the understanding that the Editor's decision shall be final, and subject to no appeal at law.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Norwich Hen Mopy.

Killiecrankie.—You should have given some idea of the bird's age. If she is an old bird I doubt your making much improvement. Anyway, try the following treatment for a few weeks. First of all see that she is quite free from cold draughts and extreme variations of temperature, and is not hung near or over burning lights in the evenings. Aim at a well-ventilated and cosy place—not necessarily overheated. Feed on a staple of plain canary seed only. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape and a morsel of banana, or occasionally a grape broken open, and on the alternate days give twice a week a small teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the remaining days each week give a pinch of maw seed. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and afterwards give 20 drops of the following mixture two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another fortnight afterwards. Mixture: Two drams each of oxymel of squills and glycerine, one dram each of ipecacuanha wine and chlorodyne, plus six grains of iodide of potassium. Your chemist will mix this for you. Withhold the bath until bird is better.

Distinguishing Sex of Rollers (A. B.).—See reply to "A. T." in last issue under heading "A Question of Sex and Feeding." If the Roller is a moderately young bird, and in good health and condition, it would, if a cock, have been in full song before now, and if it were not I should be strongly inclined to write it down a hen.

Yorkshire with Bad Eye (W. H. Green).—Am afraid you will not do much for this bird. Feed and treat as advised to "B. T. Foyle," except as regards the medicine, which will not be necessary. You might smash up the mealworms, and put on the bread and milk, as the bird might not find them otherwise. Bathe the eyes daily with a lukewarm solution of boracic acid—small teaspoonful to teacupful of warm water. Dry off moisture, and put in each eye a tiny morsel of spermaceti ointment in half an ounce of which five grains of yellow oxide of mercury has been well incorporated. Your chemist will mix it for you. Keep cage and perches scrupulously clean. Report result in a fortnight.

A Good Class of Songster (E.C.).—As you want something better in appearance you cannot do better than make a beginning with, say, two pairs, one a good singing buff green or variegated Roller cock, and a rich clear yellow Yorkshire hen, and the other a green ticked yellow Yorkshire cock and a clear buff Roller hen. Remove the young from these two pairs out of earshot of all common singing birds, and as soon as the cocks can be singled out place them under the tuition of good Roller songsters or bird organ. From the hens pick out the richest coloured and best shaped birds of good size, which come nearest your ideal for the following season's breeding; clean out the nest. When the tuition of the cocks is complete, make a similar selection from them with the addition of keeping the freest and most expert singers, and dispose of remainder for songsters. Next season mate one of the young clear hens from the Yorkshire cock to the original Roller cock; a hen from the Roller cock to the Yorkshire cock; and a cock from the original Roller mate back to the original Roller hen. Discard the Yorkshire hen, and mate the remainder of the young among themselves, avoiding mating brothers and sisters, and from the progeny of these against select cocks and hens as before for the following season which show the nearest approach in colour, shape, and size, to your ideal, always remembering to give due weight to the skill shown by the cocks in fnbibing and performing a good pure type of song. Start with four unrelated birds, and you should be able to go on for three or four seasons without inbreeding to any extent or introducing fresh blood.

Swelling on Leg (B.Y.).—You ought to have described the appearance of this swelling. It is quite likely it may be a distended vein, in which case your best plan is to leave it severely alone. If the appearance seems to negative this surmise and there is any appearance of a "head" to the swelling, bathe the leg well with a 1 in 40 solution of Jeye's Fluid, then prick the swelling with a clean needle, gently press out contents, and anoint daily afterwards for a few days with fanocyllin ointment, or carbolised vaseline. If there appears no "head," paint it every second day for a week with a small feather dipped in tincture of iodine, and report result in a fortnight.

An Aviary Trio (W. Ritchie).—(1) Yes, sawdust will ho a suitable covering for the floor, but when the breeding season arrives discard it, and substitute good clean gritty calcareous sand. (2) The birds will breed successfully if you are careful not to overcrowd, and put in a good supply of nesting receptacles to prevent squabbling, say, eight or ten for four or five hens. Wicker travelling cages with the short bars removed would be excellent. (3) One cock and four hens would be sufficient to stock it for breeding. Let the cock be a lusty, vigorous, one-year-old bird, in full stout song when mated.

Kitchen or Elsewhere (A. K. R.).—In the kitchen, with a large cooking stove, and hanging at the window, is a combination of unsuitable conditions which is almost certain to end in failure sooner or later, and probably very soon, too. Most decidedly, if you have another room available, where there are comparatively slight variations of heat, and freedom from daughts, damp, and impure air, you would be well advised to remove the bird to it at once. Hang it in a bright airy position, but well away from both fire and window. It will not matter if it is a room in which no fire is kept. So long as it fills the above conditions it will be far preferable to the present position.

Too Fat and Mopy (Soldier).—If it is convenient place the bird alone in a large flight cage, or a double-breeder, with the centre partition removed, and limit its diet to a small teaspoonful of seed per day until sufficiently reduced. Let this diet consist mainly of plain Canary, but twice a week give half Canary and half summer rape—a teaspoonful of the mixture, not of each sort. Once a week give a very small piece of bread and milk in addition to the seed. Be careful not to forget the daily ration, and keep a supply of watercress going when available. When green food cannot be supplied give twelve drops of syrup of buckthorn in the drinking water three times a week to keep bowels moving freely. As regards the other bird treat as advised in reply re mopy Norwich.

Crossed Wings (E.W.S.).—No; I certainly do not consider it advisable to breed with the pair of birds you describe, as both having this fault in a pronounced degree. For the wing-marked buff cock you should get a clear yellow hen, from a marked strain if possible, or one with slight eye marks, but no markings on head, neck, or breast. Let it he a chubby bird with as much as possible in front of the perch and a minimum quantity behind—i.e., have a close compact feathered body with short tail and flights, and the wings well carried, showing no disposition to cross at all. If they do not meet at the tips, so much the better. For the yellow hen, get a ticked buff cock as closely feathered as possible; and otherwise answering above description. In buying another matched pair, you would do well to get a reliable breeder to select for you. I doubt whether the pair you now have were selected by such an one.

Hen Mopy (A. E. H.).—It might help the hen to pick up if you removed her to a cosy room indoors in which no fire is kept, but you must not move her to a warm room or it will throw her into moult. At the same time, if the outdoor room is ventilated and free from damp, and, as you say, draught-proof, there is no reason why she should be removed at all. Feed her on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet; on two other days a pinch of maw seed, and every second day for the next fortnight give a piece of bread and milk, the size of a hazel nut, with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Stop all the other seeds and foods you mention. In the drinking water give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a fortnight. Keep cage clean, and strewn with clean, gritty sand. See there are no red mites.

Building a Strain (C. H. K.).—To attempt to establish a strain of pure Cinnamons from a single pair of birds plus crossings with Norwich is simply waste of time and years of patient plodding. Certainly it would be quite possible to perform the feat, but as you would have to begin putting in Norwich blood from the very first, and doing very close in-breeding to breed back to the pure Cinnamon, you must see that years of patient work would be necessary before your object in having a strain of pure Cinnamons was realised. Instead of going over all this useless ground, why not dispose of a pair or two of the Norwich and replace them with a few extra pairs of Cinnamons, ready made, so to speak, and thereby start with, say, three or four pairs of Cinnamons, which would soon give you a good basis to work upon in building upon a strain without introducing alien blood unnecessarily? This method would be much more satisfactory, and the results more quickly seen.

Sneezing Noises (P. D. R.).—You ought to have kept this bird in a fairly warm place, and given her the mixture you have been using the last month for the first week or fortnight after you received her, when she would probably have been all right. Now, unless this sneezing and speedy exhaustion under exercise quite disappear in the next few weeks I cannot advise you to attempt breeding with her. She would breed successfully in all probability, but there is a very great risk of her progeny being affected in the same way. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed. Twice a week give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and on two other days a small teaspoonful of mixed seed. On each of the remaining days give either a pinch of maw, bit of green food when available, or a morsel of sweet fruit. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, two days in every three for a week, and every second day for another week afterwards. Keep her in a cosy part of your room, but see it is equable, free from draughts, yet well ventilated. If not well in a month write again referring to this reply.

Sore Eye (Mrs. Manning).—Keep the perches and places where it rubs its eye as clean as possible. Give a little extra green food when available in a fit condition for use, or otherwise a sweet grape now and again broken open, to keep the bowels freely moved, and help to clear and cool the system. A morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar every second day for a fortnight may also be given with advantage. Stop using the boracic lotion and bathe the eye for a few minutes each morning with a lukewarm decoction of poppy heads. After bathing gently dry off the superfluous moisture, and drop in the eye one drop of a lotion composed of half-ounce rose water, five grains sulphate of zinc, and five drops laudanum. Repeat the drop in the evening, but not the bathing.

Charlock Seed (Anxious Novice).—Personally I do not care about this seed as a food for closely confined Canaries, except in the most limited quantities, as a little change, in the same way as inga, millet, etc., may be used, and then I should rather limit its use to birds in large flights or aviaries. I tried it many years ago, and found that Canaries do not seem to care much about it, and so long as good rape was available, threw charlock in the cage bottoms and rejected it. A staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together is about the best all round for birds in a cold room, with a little of a mixture of two parts each hemp, inga, millet, and broken groats, and one part each teazle, linseed, and black rape (or charlock, which is frequently the same), every third or second day, according to severity of weather, during the winter months.

Loose Feather (O.P., New Southgate).—As the bird is in a warm room, you should first satisfy yourself that it is not subject to extreme variations between day and night temperature. Keep it well away from the fire and windows, but out of draughts, and examine cage carefully, and also the cover when removed in the morning, for presence of red mites. If the latter are discovered, eradicate them at once. Continue the staple of plain canary; give half a teaspoonful of summer rape twice a week; and once a week a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed. Give a bit of raw carrot or banana twice a week. Limit the diet to this for a month. In the water add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and afterwards four drops of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a fortnight. Let bird bathe freely when it is so disposed.

Pairing for Mates (A. A.). — You cannot rely upon producing either cocks or hens by pairing together different aged specimens. There are other, and quite as powerful, factors to be reckoned with in attempting to control sex of progeny—health and condition generally, physical stamina, and physiological powers possessed by individuals of which at present we know little or nothing. Some hens will produce a majority of cocks mated with any cock, and vice versa; and the same remark applies equally to cocks. Again, any given pair of birds may produce a good majority of cocks in the first and second broods, and practically all hens if allowed a third brood, and my experience is that one may invariably count upon the proportion of hens produced increasing vastly at the end of the season, particularly when third and fourth broods are being taken. As far as mere age is concerned a young vigorous one-year-old cock with a mature hen, say, one in her third or fourth season, may reasonably be expected to produce a majority of cocks, but don't gamble on this. Any one of the above-named factors may come into play and upset all age conditions.

Loss of Voice (B. T. Boyle).—The bird is suffering from loss of voice, and although you say he "sweets and chirrups," I have no doubt if you take notice you will find these sounds husky and rasping. I suspect the bird has been exposed to some cold draught or damp, or to some unusual extreme of heat and cold. Keep it in a fairly comfortably place, not necessarily very warm, nor yet on the cold side, but let it be as equable as possible, and perfectly free from draughts or impure air, such as the fumes of burning lights in the evenings. Feed on a staple of three parts Canary to one part summer rape, and every second day for a fortnight give a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days a pinch of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed. Give a little banana, or a grape broken open, twice a week. If available, a mealworm each day would also be most beneficial. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, glycerine, and parcgoric, every second day for a week or fortnight, as may seem necessary.

Rollers Stopped Singing (H. Kidd).—It is impossible to even guess why your two Rollers have gone off song so suddenly, and yet seem in good health and condition, without some data to go upon, and you give absolutely none. How are they fed and treated generally, where kept, did they moult at the proper time, and have they been moved recently to a different room or position? Write us again, and give these particulars; also give the probable age of birds, when I will do my best to help you. Meantime, feed on a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape. In addition, give every third day a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the intervening days give first a scrap of sweet fruit, or green food if available, and next a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts for two days.

A Triplet (A Novice, W.).—(1) You must first see that this bird is not exposed to any cold draughts or damp. Treat as advised "B. T. Foyle." (2) When using single breeding cages, you must only put in one nest pan. The only time when you may temporarily put in a second is when a hen is very anxious to begin nesting again before the young are quite ready to leave the previous nest. Then, sometimes, not always, it prevents a hen disturbing or plucking the young. The result depends solely upon the idiosyncrasies of the individual. (3) The real use of the double breeding cage, as you put it, is that if you so desire you may keep in the centre side and keep a hen in each compartment for breeding, utilising the services of one cock for them both, running him with each hen alternately. Or you may put the cock in one end, the hen in the other, and thus let them make friends through the wires before running them together, and later on the cock's compartment may be utilised to separate him from the hen if necessary during sitting and rearing the young, and to transfer the young brood to when necessary to remove them on account of plucking, for weaning, etc., when the cock is returned for the second brood. You would find all the varied uses of all cages fully dealt with in the early parts of "Our Canaries," now publishing.

A Border Mixture (A. R. Marshall).—As you distinctly say the cock in question is of the slim type I certainly would not advise you to mate him with his own nest sister. This is the closest possible in-breeding, and even when required for some definite purpose should only be carried out with birds that are well up to, or even over, standard size and substance, in order to allow for the bulk which is very apt to occur in such close breeding. As regards your other query, whether clear birds or yellow to yellow are to be preferred, you must have got a little mixed. Clear birds are those with no marking at all in the plumage, and exist in both yellows and buffs. Except you have some special object in view it is best to stick to the usual method of mating yellow to buff, and a clear bird with one that is more or less marked. If, however, you wish to breed a majority of clear birds you may mate about three-fourths of your stock clear yellow to clear buff, but for the remaining one-fourth let one bird of each pair be ticked, or lightly varicgated, otherwise your birds will lose in depth of tone of natural colour.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Re Mexican Parrot.

Constant Reader.—Your query came to hand at the last moment, with no time to look matters up, and I do not recall to mind at the moment a Yellow-naped Mexican Parrot; possibly your bird is the Yellow-naped Amazon. If you will send me a description of your bird, and state whether it has a long or short tail, I will try and give you a more satisfactory reply in our next issue. In the meantime, diet it on seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), and plain biscuit, supplying a piece of the latter occasionally. Seed mixture: Canary and white millet seed, three parts of each to one part each of maize, hemp, oats, paddy rice, and sunflower seeds; well mix the whole together. Also keep a piece of cuttlefish hanging in the cage.

A Wild Parrot.

Hopeless.—If the ring becomes gradually more and more distinct you have a young male, but if the ring remains as it is, that is merely a faint indication of a ring, then it is an adult female, and taming will be difficult. With such creatures as Parrots I never take the "hopeless" position. A wild screeching Parrot is a tiresome possession, I admit, but I should try it for a while longer. Continue the coaxing, but do not stand over its cage while doing so, sit quiet and still by the side of its cage, talking gently to it the while, and if you have any young people, romping or sudden movements (or teazing) should not be permitted in its vicinity. Note what item of its dietary it most fancies, and offer it a little of this as a tit-bit from time to time, and I opine you will gradually overcome its wildness. Possibly keeping a screen halfway round the cage on the most exposed side, or placing the cage in a corner of the room, where it would have light and air, yet be screened from too much publicity, would help.

What Birds?

E. T.—They are a fine group of birds to be found ranging over the Sandwich Islands, but they are, I believe, pretty closely protected. The Creepers are very numerous, of varying size, and clad in rainbow-like hues, with great curved bills varying in length from nearly three inches to one inch. The Great Hook-billed Creeper is a fine bird, total length 8 inches, with silky plumage, similar to that of a Hangnest, in which black predominates. The Hook-billed Red Creeper is only 5½ inches over all, and is of more gorgeous plumage than the well-known Scarlet Tanager. There are others of the same group, but of varying size, with delicately harmonised garments of olive-green, yellow, and white, and of varying degrees of intensity. There are a number of fine Grosbeak-like birds, with Parrot-like bills, and others of the Hawfinch type, but even larger in proportion to bodies than those of the Hawfinch, with beautifully harmonised plumage of golden-yellow, olive-green, and greyish-white, varying in intensity in the respective species. It is impossible for me to give more in the space of this reply, so I have made a few rough pencil sketches of typical birds of the respective genera, and posted them to you. We hope when you are settled in Hawaii you will send us some notes of the birds you come across.

Amazon Parrot in Poor Plumage.

I. L. E.—I should certainly spray this bird with quassia solution, as from your description it certainly appears to be troubled with some minute skin parasite (some of these are scarcely discernible under a powerful microscope). Use the spray twice weekly, but guard the bird carefully against draughts till it is dry. Continue to use the magnesia sufficiently often to keep the bowels moving freely, but the voidings should not be watery loose. When not giving the magnesia well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. It is a fortunate thing the bird will not touch boiled egg, as such would soon ruin it completely. It will do well enough on seed alone, but I should still continue to offer it an apple core occasionally, a few shelled walnuts, and a piece of biscuit; it will be the better for these. I incline to the opinion that it is a young bird; in such case, its rough condition may be rather protracted, and you will have to let things take their course. From your description it appears to be a young double-fronted Amazon. You might try it with a little boiled maize, as it will not touch fruit, etc. Boil the maize till soft, and then drain away all moisture before supplying to the bird; this only keeps fresh one day, so it must be prepared fresh for each occasion. Offer it every other day. You will only aggravate matters if you tempt it with a bit of everything—tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, egg or any kind of animal food must not be given.

Red-crested Cardinal, etc. (R. C. F.).—(1 and 2) The value of a Red-crest may be said to vary from 5/- to 10/6, according to condition and plentitude or otherwise on the market. If the bird you refer to appears healthy and alert, with a clear eye, etc., it will be a safe purchase and fair value at the sum named; the moult will soon rectify the defects you point out. Any broken wing or tail feathers could be extracted one or two at a time, and would be reproduced at once. There is practically no difference in the crest of male and female. (3) There is no Green-crested Cardinal, but there is a Green Cardinal with a black crest, which is also known as the Black-crested Cardinal; a pair would cost 25/- to 35/-, and a single male from 20/- to 25/; they have been advertised during the past year in our columns. Glad to note treatment has proved effective, and beg to thank you for appreciative remarks re our Christmas Number.

Lost Parrakeet (no nom-de-plume).—It is very difficult to advise; it may, of course, have flown a good distance straight away; on the other hand, such is not usual, and I should incline to the opinion that after having been so long in captivity it had entered some house or shed at no great distance, as it would be no easy matter for it to procure food at this season out of doors. I should advise you both to advertise in CAGE BIRDS and the local newspapers—you really ought to cover a twenty miles radius, and then there should be a good prospect of your recovering the bird, which I hope you will do, as it is sad to lose a great pet, and not know what has become of it.

Siberian Goldfinches (H. B.).—(1) Diet on a seed mixture of canary, hemp, teazle, linseed, maw, and a pinch of inga seed; also supply regularly a tin of some good make of wild seed mixture. Green-food (at this season of the year, apple and lettuce is as good as any), a small mealworm or two daily, and any small maggots you can obtain for it. (2) Very similar. (3) This is rather a common and annoying habit with cross-paired birds, and I fear the Siberian is as bad as his English cousin—never-the-less, individuals vary. (4) The price appears to vary from about 6s. to 10s. 6d., the latter for picked birds. Of course, an exhibition bird (winner of prizes) has a very different value.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

Soft Moult, etc. (Thrush). — Follow the advice given E. Allfrey this week; the recipe mentioned (oxymel of squills, etc.) is the one to use to cure your bird's cold. You give me no information as to your methods of feeding and management; anyway, keep the bird out of draughts and extremes of temperature.

A Linnet Ailing (C. H. W.).—Get one ounce of syrup of buckthorn from a chemist and stir a small teaspoonful into three tablespoonfuls of drinking water; give for a second day after a day's interval on plain water. Pity you do not tell me how you are feeding the bird. Give it a change, anyway (a little maw, dandelion, thistle, gold of pleasure, and lettuce seeds, for instance, mixed).

Identity of Bird (A. Thomas).—I should think your bird must be a Wheatear (note the drawing given in our supplement this week). It can hardly be a Stonechat, for this bird is less in size than even the Robin, and has a black head and reddish breast. As the bird is commencing to sing a little, I recommend you to keep on with the food you have been using, which obviously suits it; if you changed its diet, then it might possibly go off in condition.

Mating for Muling (H. Upson).—As a mate for your cock Goldie, you cannot better a yellow hen of Norwich type (that is, stoutly built). See that she has a good, broad head. For extra good coloured Mules, have a variegated (green marked) hen. You should let them run together from now onwards, though of course the actual breeding operations are not likely to commence before the middle of March. Separate the birds (a wired slide between them in the breeding cage, for instance) about the middle of February, and withdraw the slide when the hen begins to "play about," with nesting material, which, as indicated, should be towards the middle or end of March.

Two Matters (Reeding).—I should say that the Chaffinch cannot be in very good condition; but I have no doubt if it is merely a question of being "backward," that he will sing in a few week's time. The Chaffinch, in its wild state, does not sing until the approach of the breeding season; and it is only by forcing him into condition (by stimulating food, keeping in heated room, etc.), that he will sing in the house during the winter. You do not tell me how you are feeding your bird; give a mealworm or two daily, and a few cracked sunflower seeds one day, and a little hemp the next day (in addition to the usual seeds). I have never trained Redpolls to draw up their seed and water, so unfortunately cannot advise in the matter. Put a letter in the correspondence columns and I have no doubt some reader will be found glad to give you the information.

British Bird Queriists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Steadying a Hawfinch (J. M. Williams).—It is often a difficult matter to properly steady a Hawfinch, and only a lengthy period in a cage, with a house-mount, will achieve this end. You should keep the bird in not too large a cage, in a room wherein people are constantly moving about, and hang the cage away from the window (out of direct light). Talk to the bird whenever possible, and try to gain its confidence. Get it used to eating mealworms; when this has been accomplished, offer the mealworms direct from the fingers. Hawfinches are very fond of mealworms and will soon come to the front of the cage to take them. I have steadied many birds by this means alone. Putting a bird through a hand-wash (or constantly running it out into a small cage to be sprayed) will usually help towards steadying it. Washing a Hawfinch, however, is not an enviable job for the tender-fingered.

A "Chaffinch" Mule (H. Miles).—If your bird were really a dark Chaffinch-Canary Mule, it would most certainly show something of the characteristic markings and carriage of the Chaffinch. Your description answers to that of a dark Redpoll-Canary Mule, and taking the small size into consideration, I have little hesitation in saying that this is the parentage of the bird. I take it that you had a Redpoll in the aviary. Why not pay a visit to the forthcoming Crystal Palace Show and look over the Mule classes there? Or enter your bird for competition and let fanciers see it? I should be pleased to have a word with you on the subject; the show manager (or CAGE BIRDS stall attendant) would put you on my track. This year I am down to judge the Mule and Hybrid classes.

Thrushes and a Blackbird (E. Allfrey). — The point is: Did your two Thrushes moult this last autumn? If so, then they have evidently gone into a cross-moult, and you can do nothing beyond waiting for this to be completed. Keep the birds in a room indoors until the moult is over, and every other day stir up a teaspoonful of Parrish's Chemical Food into their drinking water. Your feeding is alright. They must be kept out of draughts. A sudden change in the temperature is often sufficient to drop a bird into soft moult (this condition does not necessarily point to something being wrong with the food or the owner's method of management). On the other hand, it is a very bad policy to hang birds out of doors in winter in the daytime and then bring them indoors at night into a more-or-less heated room. Here you have just the very conditions likely to result in a cross-moult. I strongly advise you to discontinue the practice. With regard to the Blackbird, get a chemist to mix you one ounce each of oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine and glycerine, and stir a small teaspoonful into three tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Give it fresh at least once daily, and keep it up for 10 to 12 days, at least.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

H. Wallis.—This second bird verifies my first opinion, viz., that your birds are suffering from septic fever. As you will probably know, this is a very fatal disease, there being no remedy known at present. Early preventive measures by means of isolation and disinfection are the proper course, but, unfortunately, this disease is generally allowed to take such a hold upon one's birds before it is recognised. The remaining birds, if appearing healthy, should be removed to fresh quarters, the original birdroom now undergoing a rigid disinfection, and, more important, a rest of two to three months before any others are introduced into it; the virus of the disease cannot exist without the proper soil, viz., the bird. As I have remarked, there is no specific for the disease; all that can be done is to maintain the condition and vitality by the use of simple tonic medicines, of which the vegetable tonics are the best. Doses of three drops of infusion of gentian or infusion of calumba administered night and morning in the drinking water, to which a little simple syrup is added for sweetening purposes, might assist in preventing those at present unaffected from contracting the disease.

W. F. Wilbee.—Fatty degenerative disease affecting the liver was the primary cause of the Linnet's illness, and pneumonia the culminating cause induced by a system weakened and depleted by the former. You could not have arrested the disease once it had begun; the cause is of dietetic origin. Use linseed very sparingly and only very occasionally, and be sure to thoroughly clean your seed before use by rubbing it in a clean cloth. The sample you sent me was slightly musty. The suggestion re cleaning seed is rather tedious, but where one possesses but a few birds it is well worth the trouble, and removes any slight mould which might exist, and does exist where seed is kept in damp places. I have practised this method for some time, with satisfactory results.

Canary Management Throughout the Year.

SIR,—Those of your numerous readers who are contemplating a commencement in the Canary Fancy may find the following of use to them; at any rate, that is my hope and object in writing what I have. Perhaps we had better start at the beginning of the year, viz., January. The show season is drawing to a close, and we have now to turn our thoughts to another breeding season, or, rather, to the preparation for it. In January I give my birds canary seed as a staple food, German rape and niger seed twice a week, and egg food once or twice, according to the condition of the birds. If the weather is very cold, I give a little warming seed, such as hemp or a pinch of maw seed. If the weather is severe, I believe in giving a little heat, but one must use his own judgment. Do not forget the ventilation; always open the window for a little while each day. I like to keep my own bird room 45 degrees in temperature, at the lowest. At this time of the year, when the weather is so changeable, you may find a few feathers dropping from a bird. In such case I find the best thing is to give the bird a little extra egg food and about eight drops of tincture of steel in the drinking water (one ounce) until it is better. In February I continue giving the same food; of course, feeding the cocks a little more liberally than the hens. I also give a pinch of the following mixture every day from now onwards (this mixture I read of in CAGE BIRDS about two years ago, and I have found it to be very good): equal parts of gold of pleasure, niger, red millet, summer rape, maw and lin seeds, and a very little hemp seed, a quarter of a part. I stop the hemp when the birds are breeding, and give a little more egg food, say, one tablespoonful to each pair daily. If you have heat at your disposal, and the birds are ready, you can safely start breeding with them in the first week of March. But don't be in a hurry; if you have no heat, wait until April. Of course, I am speaking of good birds in cages now. If you have common birds flying loose in a room that has a fair amount of sun on it, you will find that the birds will start breeding of their own accord by about Valentine's Day (this is not an old fairy tale about Valentine's Day, but a fact). My friend has some common birds flying loose, and he always expects, and, moreover, gets, young flying about by March 1st. He never uses any heat, and his birds never even see a fowl's egg, let alone eat any of it. He feeds his stock on a mixed seed diet, consisting of canary, lin, rape and hemp seeds, and he soaks some stale bread in water, and gives them that. For green food he hangs up a lettuce like you would a cabbage for fowls. He puts eight or ten cocks to two dozen hens, and uses husks for nest pans. They do not get over-much attention, and his knowledge of birds is not great; yet there is never a queer bird; and the only medicine his birds get is fresh air. But we must go back. By this time all our cages have been thoroughly cleaned, and our birds are almost ready for their season's work. If you can tell when the birds are ready, there will be no need for you to hang the cock bird in front of the hen, unless, of course, you are running him with two hens, in which case I find it best to do so, as sometimes he may be a little spiteful to No. 2 hen. A fortnight or so before pairing your birds up add a little brown sugar to the egg food and a little treacle to the hen's drinking water, to prevent egg-binding. You can give a little maw seed the day you expect the hen to lay—in the afternoon, which is very good for them, especially if the weather is chilly. As the eggs are laid, take them away, and replace them by dummies until the third egg is laid; then give the nest a good dusting with some insect powder, and replace the real eggs on the third evening. In the case of egg-binding, you will be able to get advice out of CAGE BIRDS as to how to act. I have never been troubled with it among my birds, and, therefore, cannot give you any experience of it. A day or two before the eggs are due to hatch, give the hen a dose of Epsom salts; and on the day the eggs are expected to hatch give a little yolk of egg and but a very little biscuit; or, in other words, make the egg food strong. The egg should be boiled for about five minutes. For the first three days give the yolk of egg only; but each day add a little more biscuit (or bread crumbs, whichever you like). After that time, give a little white of egg as well as yolk, and as the young grow, keep making the egg food weaker. The young birds will be leaving the nest when they are about seventeen days old. Do not be in a hurry to take them away from their parents unless the hens begin to pluck the young or to lay again. When the hen does start laying again, the young must be transferred to a nursery cage, and hung in front of the breeding cage. I always use a Yorkshire show cage for nursery purposes, and in them I put canary seed and whole and crushed hemp seeds separate, which I give fresh every day; also I supply a little egg food, in which I put a few drops of tincture of gentian for two or three days every fortnight until the young are well in the moult. While they are moulting I shade my room off from the bright rays of light, and give the birds a bath when possible. Keep them quiet, and give them a little of the mixed seed spoken of for February use. The show birds ought to be taken out of the flight when they are half-way through the moult; and if they will agree, place them (in pairs) in separate cages—if they will not agree they must be singled out altogether. Colour-feeding ought to be commenced in the first week of July and given every day until the head and neck only are left to finish off; then give colour-food the same strength, only miss a day until the birds are finished; and then give it only twice a week during the show season. Most of the show birds will be able to go to one or two early shows without being washed. If by accident they get dirty, do not wash them before the feathers are fairly hard, or else ten to one it is you will spoil them altogether till the new feathers grow again in place of those that come out in your washing them too soon. If you cannot wash a bird, it is best to get someone to show you how to do it before attempting it yourself. After washing my birds, I always use two drying cloths for buff birds and one for yellows; in which they remain for about twenty minutes in front of a good fire; and I always give them a thorough rinsing after I have got the dirt out of the feathers. It is best to wash birds four days before a show, and either give them a bath (or spray them) the day before. All your spare time should be spent in training the birds for show and in an attempt to gain their confidence. Steadiness is of great importance if you are to succeed on the show-bench. I know of a good many cases this season where birds have failed to take their proper places simply because the owners have not had the time to train them. The birds should be sent off in good time for the shows, and if you are lucky enough to win some prizes, don't run after the secretary of the show to know when he is going to pay prize-money. If, on the other hand, you lose, then lose with a good heart, and try and learn by your loss; do not grumble at the judge or at those in charge of the show. We all make mistakes at times, remember. Do not forget the motto, "To show well, to brag little, and grow gentle if in luck; to pay up, to own up, and to shut up if beaten." About October get rid of the birds you do not want, and be careful that you do not sell the birds that your own strain is in need of. If you have enough birds to sell, advertise them in CAGE BIRDS. When you have only got your breeding stock left, and the rest have been sold, you can take the opportunity and re-paint some of your cages. At the bottom of my cages I use sand. I like it better than sawdust, as I think it hardens the feet of the birds, and also keeps their claws from growing so quickly. While the birds are going through the moult give extra linseed; when they are finishing, give a little iron in the water—either chemical food or sulphate of iron. If your birds "become stuck in the moult," try cochineal tea, made with one ounce of boiling water, in which put six cochineal grains; press the grains out when cold, and give the liquor to the birds instead of water until they are all right. Should a bird become bare in parts, touch the parts slightly with paraffin. Take in CAGE BIRDS, and you are sure to learn something new and interesting; and also you will be able to obtain an answer to any question you may wish to ask the Editor

The metropolis is losing one of its best-known British bird exhibitors, in the person of Mr. C. Prior (Brentford, W.), who is leaving London to reside in Hampshire. His whole stock of birds, cages, appliances, etc., is advertised for sale in this issue, and should provide many budding exhibitors with a start in the British bird fancy.

I was greatly surprised on receiving last week's CAGE BIRDS to find my foul-marked green hen given the place of honour in your popular journal. She was bred by me with birds purchased from Mr. H. Davis, and has been very successful, winning under four different judges, which I think is very creditable, considering she had to compete against clear birds. She is also one of my best stock hens, as I have bred some grand youngsters by her, which have in turn also won on the show bench.—F. KING (London, S.W.)

The 3½ h.p. Rudge-Whitworth motor bicycle made its first appearance in a competition in the Boxing Day Motor Cycling Club run, London to Exeter and back, its rider, Mr. Alan Hill, securing a gold medal, the highest possible award. Throughout the whole distance, 320 miles, his machine gave him no trouble. He says: "The machine ran remarkably well all through the trial, and I did not have occasion to open my tool bag." This new model was first seen by the public at the Olympia Motor Cycle Show in November. Large orders have been booked, and deliveries are now just beginning. Riders wishing to possess one of these remarkably successful machines should lose no time in placing their order.

The Midland Counties Yorkshire C.C.

SIR,—Will the members of the Midland Counties Yorkshire Canary Club kindly note that a general meeting will he held at the Crown Hotel, Station Street, Birmingham, on January 19, 1911, at 8 p.m., prompt? And will all members please make a special effort to attend, as several important matters have to be brought before the meeting?

Focussing the Cage Bird Fancy in Deptford and District.

SIR,—A meeting for the formation of a cage bird society, including the reorganisation of the Greenwich and Deptford C.B.S., will be held on Thursday, January 19th, at the coffee rooms, 397, New Cross Road, New Cross, near the S.E.C. Ry. station, at 7.45 p.m. sharp. Will all local fanciers endeavour to attend to make this new society a success? A society in this district is greatly asked for, and should be well supported.

Is it Cruel to Keep Birds in Cages?

A Reader Qualifies for "Seven Days."

SIR,—In view of the recent discussion which has taken place with reference to the above, I am writing to inform you of the following little incident which has occurred. In doing so, I am fully aware that I am publicly admitting a great crime, and may possibly go to penal servitude, but I am going to chance it. I have in my back garden at Peckham a small aviary containing a collection of British birds. Contrary to general opinion, the birds are not vainly beating their wings in an effort to escape, but, being well fed and sheltered, they seem very contented with their lot, and are in the pink of condition. On Monday last, a freezing cold morning, I noticed a small bird on the wires of aviary trying to get at the food inside. I went out and found that it was a young Chaffinch. It seemed to be injured in some way, as it made very little effort to get away. As I could not reach him with my hand, I placed a trap cage out with some food, and in a few minutes he was inside. On catching him I found that he was in a most deplorable condition from starvation, and so weak that he could scarcely stand. After I had given him a good feed and some water, I turned him into the aviary and forgot the matter. On looking this morning, however, I was astonished at the change which had taken place. The bird had had a good bath, and with plenty of food had regained his vigour; and I hardly recognise him as the miserable little wreck that I had caught only a few days before. The question now is, what am I to do with him? If I am brute enough to keep him, I am breaking the law, and may possibly be hauled up before some "kind-hearted" magistrate, who will treat me like a felon. If, on the other hand, I am "kindhearted" enough to turn him out to starve, he will possibly become the dinner of the first cat that comes along. What shall I do? Well, Mr. Editor, I am not going to tell you what I propose doing; if you hear that I have retired from public life for a month, you will know why.

The Two-barred Crossbill.

Mr. Frostick's Views.

SIR,—Mr. Fulljames' unsympathetic article on the Crosshill (Loxia curvirostra) seems to have been written more to point out that I am mistaken in calling my unique exhibit the Two-barred Crosshill (L. bifasciata), when, according to his opinion it is the White-winged Crossbill (L. leucoptera) of North America, though he admits that his personal experience of either is limited to the single specimen owned by myself. His reason for doubting the description I have given my bird is that he has compared a sketch of his own (a very bad one by the way), with a coloured illustration in Morris' "British Birds," which to my mind amply explains his confusion. It is some time since I saw a copy of Morris' work, but if my recollection serves me rightly the majority of the plates were simply atrocious. Morris was a popular writer of some note, but he has never been recognised as an authority by serious ornithologists. I have before me a more up-to-date work by Dr. Bowdler Sharpe, containing an illustration by that famous artist, Mr. Keulemans, of the Two-barred Crossbill, which exactly resembles my bird, with the exception that my bird is housemoulted, and the bird in the drawing is in wild plumage. Mr. Fulljames rightly says: "Certainly, an adult fresh caught male, with its bright rose-coloured body plumage, and its blackish wings and tail presents a certain amount of beauty, but this . . . is but transient, for with a cage moult the red plumage is replaced by a dingy yellowish green." Now the extraordinary thing about my bird is that it was, when I bought it from my friend, Mr. R. Lewis, of Workington, in May last, in the "dingy yellowish green" stage, as described by Mr. Fulljames, but at its last moult, much to my surprise, it assumed the rose-coloured plumage again. This rose tint is not so deep in colour as it would be in an adult wild male, but it is sufficient to make it a remarkably handsome bird, and is such a rare occurrence as to make it worth while noting as exceptional. Howard Saunders describes the adult male as having the head, neck, mantle, and rump carmine red, slightly mottled with black; wings black, with white tips to the inner secondaries, and broad pinkish-white edges to the greater and medium wing-coverts; tail-feathers brownish-black, narrowly edged with reddish-white; under parts carmine-red, which fades into white on the belly; bill horn-colour, lighter on the lower mandible; legs dull brown, length 6.25 ins.; wing 3.7 ins. The European Two-barred Crossbill inhabits the coniferous forests of Northern Russia and Siberia, as far as Kamchatka and the Pacific, wandering in autumn and winter to South Sweden, Denmark, Heligoland, North Germany, Holland, Belgium, the North of France, Switzerland, North Italy, Austria, and Poland. The first recorded specimen was obtained near Belfast on May 11, 1802, since when numerous specimens have been shot and otherwise taken in various parts of the United Kingdom between November 1, 1845, and March 25, 1846, 11 were shot in the neighbourhood of Brampton, in Cumberland, right down to the last recorded occurrences in Saunder's Manual, in 1895, when they were observed in Somerset and in Co. Fermanagh. My own bird was caught in Maryport, Cumberland, in September, 1908, and was first identified by myself from a written description and sketch. It was first exhibited by Messrs.

The wing and tail of Mr. Frostick's bird; copied from sketches made by Messrs. H. Goodchild and H. Norman.

J. and R. Lewis at the last Palace show, and when I questioned the judge why he had left such an interesting, beautiful, unique, and genuine British specimen cardless, he said it was because it was not in the list of the N.B.B. and M.C. When I exhibited the bird myself at the L. and P.O.S. autumn show the same judge again left it cardless. When asked for an explanation he said because "it looked like a foreign bird." When I told him I could prove it to be a British specimen, he replied he could never accept it as such. As this same judge told me on another occasion that a Bunting is not a Finch, I have given him up as a hopeless case, past arguing with. This is the sort of treatment I have received on more than one occasion when I have shown the public rare and unique specimens. Under other judges the bird has had justice done to it, at Wimhledon 1st, Battersea 4th, and the Horticultural Hall 2nd, only times exhibited. As a cage bird I find it a most delightful pet, exceedingly tame and most amusing. I have to fasten the cage door very securely, as he quickly unties any ordinary knots, opens the door, and has a fly round "on its own," but will fly to my hand and freely help himself to some of his favourite sunflower or hemp seed, absolutely without fear. He is truly a dear little chap, and I can thoroughly recommend the species as a most desirable cage bird. The Two-barred is, of course, considerably smaller than the Common Crossbill, and the beak is much smaller and weaker, so that it cannot do any damage to a wooden cage; in fact, it takes it all its time to crack a sunflower seed. In a state of nature they live chiefly on the seeds of the smaller cones of the spruce-fir and larch, whilst the Common Crossbill feeds principally on the larger cones of the Scotch fir. In captivity it thrives on the ordinary "Finch" mixture, likes a little green stuff in season, and is fond of apple; it won't look at a mealworm, but occasionally has a little of my insectivorous birds' food. This bird has had the honour of being drawn by both the justly celebrated artists on the staff of CAGE BIRDS—Messrs. Goodchild and Norman, the latter's sketch graced the front page of your famous journal some seven months ago, and under the exceptional circumstances I would feel obliged if you could reproduce this in conjunction with this letter, as it is matter of unusual interest to students of bird life in general and should prove definitely that the bird, when drawn by a professional up-to-date artist, is what I have represented it to be—a Two-barred Crossbill.

JOHN FROSTICK.

P.S.—Just as I am sending this letter for publication, I have received a note from Mr. R. Lowis, in which he states:—"I see in this week's CAGE BIRDS Mr. Fulljames thinks your bird is not the Two-barred Crossbill. Perhaps he imagines you have imported it yourself; if so, I will furnish you with additional proof of its capture here, if necessary. I think his own sketch is sufficient to prove that your bird is the Two-barred Crosshill."

Dandelion Grown from Seed.

SIR,—Perhaps readers will remember the correspondence of a few months ago on the growing of dandelion from seed. "Straight 'Un" and Mr. Downing didn't believe it possible to grow dandelion from seed gathered the previous season. I have this day (January 9th) sowed some seed that was gathered last year, and to show your two correspondents how confident I am that it will grow, I will forward them some of the young plants in about six weeks' time if they will let me have their respective addresses through you, sir.

T. JOHNSON.

The New East Ham Cage Bird Society.

SIR,—A meeting of local fanciers took place on January 9th, when it was decided to form a society for this district. Whilst there are many successful mixed societies near here, there has hitherto been no society devoted entirely to cage birds. The wish of the leading fanciers has materialised, and to-day East Ham possesses a body of men bound together to further the cause of the Fancy. Mr. H. B. Rout, 44, Lawrence Road, East Ham, has been elected secretary pro. tem., and any lady or gentleman wishing to become a member should apply to him for information.

B. C. SMITH, Club Reporter.

British Bullfinches at the Scottish National Show.

SIR,—I regret to read the report upon my British Bullfinch at the above show. I took second prize, and the reporters say a decision they could not follow, this bird being almost twice as big as any other in the prize list. Please allow me to say that I can vouch for its being a Britisher. This bird was caught by Mr. J. Wilson, Pickering, within a mile from the town. Mr. Spenceley, Pickering, was also present when this bird was caught, and I bought it from Mr. Wilson. I may state that I have never had a foreign bird of any sort in my possession. It appears that the judge had not the slightest doubt as to its being a Britisher. I also note that the reporters say the third prize winner in the Foreign Bullfinch Class could likely have won the British Class. I think this is absurd, and should not have been published; it looks like tempting fanciers to show foreignors in British classes.

W. WOODS.

A Cage Question at the City of Glasgow Show.

SIR,—At the City of Glasgow Show, held in October, I exhibited, along with other birds, a Bunting. Being anxious to dispose of the birds at the show, I read the rules carefully to see if cage was included in selling price. As the rules state distinctly "price exclusive of cage," naturally I entered the birds as cheap as possible, that being the price of bird only. The Bunting was claimed at catalogue price, but the cage (which was a valuable one to me) was not returned. I certainly had one, a small useless one, sent in its place, which I immediately returned to the secretary. But I have not had my own returned. The secretary informs me that a Blackburn fancier claimed my bird, but this fancier wrote him that he did not take my cage away. I have since written twice for this Blackburn fancier's full name and address, but have not had that information supplied. Can the official who was in charge at the show throw any light on the subject, as I fancy some of the committee would see the birds despatched? Who left the cage that was returned in my hamper?

JAMES MASON.

In Praise of the Greenfinch.

SIR,—When a boy I watched the Greenfinch hatching its eggs, rearing its young, and the male flying through the air with its peculiar "whirr." In those days I regarded it as a common-place bird, and never thought it would be a favourite cage bird to be used in cross breeding with other birds. It has all along been known to be a free breeder with the hen Canary, producing handsome Greenfinch-Canary Mules; but of recent years it has found its way into the British home as the very best of Hybrid producers. The breeder who wishes to have a chance of producing a medal winner at the Crystal Palace and other leading shows should put up a cock Greenfinch and a Siberian Bullfinch hen. A well-matched pair, if they breed, will compensate one for his attention to them for a couple of months in the summer. The hen lays freely, clutch after clutch. When young ones do hatch they are vigorous, and grow apace; they rush through the moult, and are ready for the show bench much earlier than others. Those who frequent the shows at the commencement of the New Year have only to search out the class for Greenfinches to be confronted with a regiment of bold fellows prepared to hold their own wherever they go; and they do hold their own. In the cage the Greenfinch is a sprightly but a homely occupant. He is pleased with the hard fare of Canary and rape seeds, but he is fond of sunflower seeds. I recommend the addition of the latter, as they keep him in prime condition. A good specimen can be picked up at almost any bird shop in the City or the village for a sixpence or a shilling. As the season advances a beautiful sheen comes on to the surface of the feather, bringing out a fine lustre, and giving perfect plumage. All else being equal, a bright yellow rich green is preferable. In the selection a large bird should be chosen. There is always a large army to select from. A Greenfinch is a safe investment, and those who are in doubt as to what to buy for a few months' unbounded pleasure might do worse than try this bird. He is strong on the wing, so that if he gets away, he is gone for ever.

The Artificial Heating of Bird-rooms.

SIR,—I have a birdroom (11ft. by 7ft.) built against the eastern side of the house. The windows extend the whole length of the long side and 18ins. on each small end. There is no fireplace or chimney, and I find the windows almost always wet and the room very cold. The temperature these last few days has varied from as low as 36 degs. F. I should like to know whether the gentleman (who wrote in CAGE BIRDS, December 3rd issue, under nom de plume of "Moderation") would oblige me with particulars for applying reasonable warmth to my bird-room. Would this do away with the sweat on the glass? If not, what would stop it?

M. HUGGINS.

SIR,—I have much pleasure in forwarding you the enclosed description and sketches of the heating apparatus mentioned in my letter, which you published in CAGE BIRDS of December 31st. Since the letter appeared I have received a number of enquiries, so the article is evidently awaited with considerable interest. The subject of artificial heat in the bird-room is one over which an argument can always be raised. With many fanciers, however, it is not a question of heat or no heat, but how to raise the necessary cash to supply the heat, and also to maintain it when they have got it. The following notes and accompanying sketches will solve the difficulty for many; at least I hope so. I would first like to say that this apparatus is not intended for use where a constant heat is required, but is especially useful for the purpose mentioned in my letter, namely, to enable the fancier to counteract sudden variations in the temperature, and also to overcome the bad effects of a long run of damp, muggy weather, which is very trying to the birds should it occur during the moulting period. The first thing to be obtained is an atmospheric oil stove. The one I use is a "Salamander No. 209S," made by Wright and Butler, of Birmingham. Any ironmonger or oil stores will supply one for 3s. 11d. In matters like this, I do not advise the buying of cheaper makes. Having obtained the stove, a cover of thin sheet-iron, about 1 32nd of an inch thick, must be made. To anyone used to metal work this should be a fairly easy task. I did not make mine, but cut some cardboard to the following dimensions: One piece 10in. by 24in. for the back, one piece 10in. by 16in. for front, and two pieces 7in. by 24in. for sides, also a piece 7in. by 10in. to form a tray in the top. Then there is the flue pipe—the most important part of all. I made a mistake in having this too small at first—1¼in. square—but I had it altered afterwards (in width only) to 3½in., allowing the depth to remain the same. It is about 6in. in length, and is rivetted to the box 6in. from the top at an angle of 45 degrees. When put together, the pieces form a cover like the sketch. I took the cardboard model to a man in the metal line, who made it for 4s. 6d. The piece which forms the tray must be firmly rivetted in 2in. from the top, and if this tray is half filled with coarse silver sand it will give off a good heat when in use. It must not be taken for granted that the height of the cover cannot be altered. It may be raised to suit the requirements of individual fanciers. The reason mine is 24in. high is because there is a fireplace in my bird-room, and when I have lit the stove and put the cover over it, I push forward the iron tray on which the whole arrangement stands, and the flue pipe just passes under the front of fireplace. About twenty minutes after the stove has been lighted the cover will be very hot, and will draw the flame up a little. Turn it down a bit, and you can then safely leave it for nine or ten hours, which is about the time the oil lasts if the stove has been filled right up. I would say here that these atmospherie stoves burn with a peculiar spiky flame, and, owing to the fact that they consume air, can be turned up very high indeed without a sign of smoke. It is quite unnecessary, however, to use a big light, as plenty of heat can be obtained from a very moderate flame. Neither is there any smell; but, of course, the stove must be kept clean and dry. After using it for two years, I can, with the greatest confidence, recommend this idea to my fellow fanciers as safe, efficient, and economical.

A. W. FARMER.

The Cage Bird Union and Its Future.

SIR,—Once more the annual general meeting of the Cage Bird Union draws nigh, when the "body guard of the Fancy" will likely be assailed by the envoys of the "Prince of Fear," whose banner, held aloft by Caledonia, will represent a judge reaching for a distant shelf, enshrouded by a black fog, their shield a bird o' Freedom emblazoned in the four corners with birds in flaked plumage—their battle cry, "Down with the honest and true, and up with the paint and glue." Sir, if there is a man in the whole cage bird Fancy deserving of sympathy, consideration and support, it is Mr. Lythgoe. To expect to get a perfect man for such a position is even greater folly than to continue the production of drivelling, rancorous Bird o' Freedom. That there are more honest fanciers than fakers we will agree. That being so, how many honest fanciers are likely to suffer by allowing the fakers to carry on their trade; for instance, in the Linnet classes? Now, the Cage Bird Union, given the support of all those honest fanciers, would soon make them all honest. But I am afraid the ethics that lie behind rule 22 are too high for all those honest fanciers who are so anxious to make the C.B.U. powerless to deal with offences in their own ranks. To the C.B.U. I would say, the Fancy evidently does not want a Union with such objects. Give it cups and medals, without questioning its actions, and you will be patted and clapped, feted and honoured. Have you noticed how adroitly the fear of the law has been hung over the heads of such judges as dare try to protect honest exhibitors by finding out the "artists"? Then, of course, the Union gone, judges are defenceless too. Let the Union die upholding the highest principles; let an honest Fancy have the credit of destroying it withholding its support rather than you, its elected representatives, by a weak and halting policy, should be the cause of its gradually mouldering away through the suspension of rule 22—a fate that will follow as surely as it did to the unions that have gone before.

SPARROW HAWK.

SIR,—I note in your issue of January 7th that the C.B.U. has advertised the suspended members in connection with the late L.C.B.A. show, of which I am one. I should like to know why they advertised the suspended members of this particular show and not of others? Surely some of the members have exhibited at other non-union shows throughout the past season. This, to my way of thinking, is not right, and as far as I can see the Union is absolutely useless in its present state, for instead of doing the fancy any good, it is debarring its members of their liberty (which every fancier has a right to), and unless the rule 22 is cut out I am afraid the C.B.U. will very soon have its funeral. I wrote Mr. Lythgoe about the members entering their birds in their wives' names, also enclosing a cutting from the local newspaper stating their wins at the L.C.B.A., and which was sent to the paper by these members themselves. To this Mr. Lythgoe replied that he had written to these members on the subject, also drawing their attention to this newspaper report, to which one replied that he was not the possessor of this particular bird which had been exhibited (although he had advertised himself as such). The other wrote saying that the birds were his wife's property, and went on to say that the newspaper report was put in by someone for the purpose of reporting them to the Union. Now if the C.B.U. allow such dirty work as this to go unchecked, and suspends the member who sends his birds out in his own name, may I ask which is the worst offender? Yet this kind of thing is allowed to go free. But as far as I can see, the Union can do nothing whatever in the matter, and no doubt the Palace show next month will have a record entry from lady exhibitors, for this is the only course open to the members of the union without suspension. To me, the C.B.U. seems a complete farce, for every society has to pay 5s. and upwards, and at the same time they are taking their members' liberty away, and leaving them to be dictated to by the Union as to where they shall show. This, of course, appears to most fanciers quite in order, but when you keep a variety that only four shows in all give a class—and two of these are not affiliated to the Union—you have to keep the birds at home, or be suspended through no fault of your own, but simply because you are a member of a society which for some reason or the other becomes affiliated. This is very detrimental to all societies, and it has been the cause of a good many fanciers resigning from their societies for the purpose of having a free hand.

W. MINTY.

SIR,—I am obliged to Mr. Lythgoe for his letter in your last issue, to which I will endeavour to reply as briefly as possible. As to whether the Liverpool O.S. is helping the Union to enforce its rules, I am inclined to think the proper authority to undertake this is the Executive Council and other officials of the Union, and that the L.O.S. cannot in any way assist, except to the extent of defraying a very small proportion of the cost of upkeep of the C.B.U. by its subscriptions. My society, from the commencement, have been in favour of a Union, and I think I am correct in saying have loyally observed all the rules of the C.B.U. with the exception of Rule 22, which, perhaps, some of the members, although not technically, yet morally, may have broken. The L.O.S. have found this rule inimical to their interests as a body, and intolerable to their members individually; and in consequence have seceded from the Union. Not having an arbitrary rule like the C.B.U. to enforce membership, we unfortunately have to accept resignations when given, and when a good fancier and former supporter desires to rejoin, we are glad to welcome him within our ranks. With regard to other societies allowing resignations to evade Rule 22, it is common knowledge that in Lancashire many exhibitors refuse to allow their names to appear as members of their local societies, although they pay their subscriptions (by way of donation to the funds), show in members' show, and participate in the discussions and business of the society. Others, on account of Rule 22, decline to be members, in my opinion to the detriment of the society, and the novice members in particular, as it is largely from these fanciers that the novice is likely to acquire the knowledge to attain which he joins the society. I am pleased to hear I was wrong in believing that Rule 4 was added to in consequence of our resolution submitted at the Leicester meeting. To obviate the delay in the publication of particulars of suspensions, I would respectfully suggest to Mr. Lythgoe the advisability of inserting in the Fancy Press at the earliest possible opportunity after the event that suspensions arising out of a particular show are under consideration. This would do no injustice to the parties interested, and would let the Fancy know that the Union was alive. Mr. Lythgoe's suggestion that the Green Canary Association should back up its members who are members of the L.O.S., by giving its patronage to Union shows is all very well in its way. Unfortunately for our members the Green Canary Association considers it is not advisable to follow this course, and, like other specialist clubs, prefers to be a free agent, and to give its patronage where it thinks fit, and not to be in any way fettered by the C.B.U. and its rules. Had we the desire (which we have not) the L.O.S., with its 24 members, could not expect to govern the G.C.A., with its membership of considerably over a hundred. It takes us all our time to look after our own business. By the time the full list of suspensions for breaking Rule 22 is published, presuming all the transgressors at the late non-Union shows are included, and not forgetting the Crystal Palace, I think there will be a pretty long list, and many of these will be found to be our best-known and respected exhibitors, who support exhibitions most frequently, and ought to be encouraged. Are these men to be branded as criminals, and punished just because they think fit to show at a particular show which may not happen to be affiliated to, or licensed by the C.B.U.? Surely a fancier who has to "pay the piper" in the pursuit of his hobby should be allowed to call the tune? Instead of encouraging and advancing the interests of exhibitors (vide Rule 2), it appears to me the Union is doing its utmost to discourage them. Were I inclined to prophesy, I would predict that, providing the Union did not in the meantime become defunct, in course of time all the best fanciers and exhibitors will have withdrawn from membership, and the Union will be run by novices, who, not doing much exhibiting themselves, will have the inestimable privilege of making the rules and regulations to be observed by the former. Let the C.B.U. confine itself to the supervision and regulation of shows and the suppression of dishonourable practices, and it will attain its objects, and will need no coercive rules to maintain its existence. I would respectfully recommend to the delegates at the forthcoming annual meeting the desirability of seriously considering Rule 22, with a view to its deletion. I am aware that this has been discussed before, and I admit that as a general principle it is right that the majority should rule; but where an influential minority is concerned, if it is desired that harmony should reign, it is always wise policy to make concessions. The Union has given this rule a fair trial, and it has always been the cause of disruption. My advice is, Let us try and do without it for a year, and I am sure that in the end it will be the making of the C.B.U. Otherwise, I agree with Mr. Lythgoe, that it seems useless to go on. It seems somewhat of an anomaly that the principal meeting of the C.B.U. should be held at our premier non-Union show. I hope it augurs well for the Union.

Proposed Border Fancy Canary Club for the South.

SIR,—In reference to the letters published in CAGE BIRDS relative to a proposed Border Fancy Club for the South, I might state in reply to Mr. F. Moore's letter of January 7th that I for another would welcome such a club, as I believe it would further popularise the "wee gems" and greatly add to the classification at various shows during the ensuing year, which, by the way, is badly wanted, especially by the novice. I think there is a sufficient number of fanciers who would be present if a general meeting were to be conveniently arranged, so will someone conversant with the arrangement of club matters kindly propose a meeting place? Then we can all meet together and endeavour to bring matters to a definite point.

W. E. PLANK.

The Inside of a Birdroom.

SIR,—May I ask, through your paper, if any reader could kindly let me know what is best to colour the inside of my bird-room with? I may say I have just built an outdoor bird-room match-boarded inside and out, and should be glad to know of something cheap and effective, a light colour preferred.

A. WRIGHT.

Prolific Foreigners.

SIR,—In a recent issue, in replying to "Ferret" (under Editorial), I see you give preference to Budgerigars as the most prolific breeders. From my own experience, I think that Black-cheeked Lovebirds run them very close indeed. The two pairs I have here, have each this year hatched off four nests, and both pairs now have youngsters. In fact, the difficulty I have with my two pairs is to prevent them breeding. With Budgerigars (yellows) my experience has been just the opposite; from three pairs I have only had six young birds. The Black Cheeks and the Budgerigars have aviaries to themselves—so both breeds have been kept under exactly similar conditions. As it would be interesting to hear other people's experiences perhaps you may care to find room for these notes of the two breeds.

Proposed New Cage Bird Society for Edinburgh and District.

SIR,—It has been suggested that a new society might be formed for Edinburgh and District. It is proposed to adopt the rules of our Glasgow brother fanciers, and I have been approached to write to the Press and call a meeting of all interested to a free and full discussion, and see if it is deemed advisable to elect office bearers. The meeting will take place in the Cairn's Memorial Church Hall, Gorgie Road, on Saturday evening, 21st January, at 7.30 p.m. All fanciers are heartily invited.

Bullfinches at Guisborough Show.

SIR,—I wish to say that my Bullfinch got second prize at Guisboro (not third, as stated in report of that show). There had been a mistake made, and I got the wrong bird and cage home (the one that had got third). I returned it to the secretary, and by Thursday morning I had my own bird home again. I think there is all honour due to the secretary, Mr. R. Mays, and also the gentleman that received my bird and cage, for their honest dealing. The Guisboro Society is worthy of support by reason of its excellent hard-working secretary, Mr. Mays. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, as I have been a reader for over two years, and always look forward for it on Fridays.

The Disqualified Yellowhammer at the Scottish National Show.

SIR,—With reference to the Yellowhammer disqualified at the above-named show, I should like to ask if it is the first time the same bird has been objected to for alleged trimmed head markings? Did it not at our local show held early in November cause a great deal of controversy among the exhibitors, and an objection to be lodged against it for alleged trimming on the head? And was not this objection upheld by Mr. Bull, of Bristol, the judge? Shortly afterwards the bird was given 1st at Bournemouth. In my opinion, the time has come for judges of British birds to be keener in detecting unlawful practices; also, show committees should be more particular about appointing judges who fail to detect these practises. I should like to see rules drawn by clubs not to appoint judges over a certain age, because of failing eyesight.

The Mystery of Siberian Goldfinches Dying.

SIR,—I have had the misfortune to lose three Siberian Goldfinches within the past month, one of which was two years aviary-moulted, and had been repeatedly caged. It was caged when it took ill. This bird was the father of Hybrids, bred by me. All went the same way. They became "puffy," and before they died the abdomen was swollen, with the blood vessels there very prominent, and a white tick on the side of vent. I tried the first one with a pinch of Epsom salts, and kept it on soaked seed, but it was no use. The next one (field-moulted) that showed symptoms of being a little "thick," I gave one part milk to three parts water, with soaked teazle, as I feared the saline aperient had been too much for No. 1. But it was no use. Then when a third (also field-moulted) began to "thicken," I tried feeding it entirely on white English thistle seed. Then I gave it the heads of the Scotch thistle, ad lib, with soaked teazle and sunflower. It died notwithstanding. In this last case the voiding from the bowels were watery, and when it expired it was not so far reduced as the others. I lost a Bullfinch under similar conditions. As I have still ten Siberian Finches in good condition, I would like to know wherein my treatment in health, and also when they sickened, was in error? I considered myself an adept in keeping "British" birds in the pink of condition, but this experience with expensive Siberians has taken the conceit out of me. Can any reader enlighten me? My usual feeding for Goldfinches is teazle and hemp, with "pinches" of thistle, maw, inga, and flax, and a feed of crushed sunflower now and again. I never could get Goldfinches to eat Canary or rape seeds. I treat my Bullies on the same lines, with the exception that I omit thistle and substitute Canary for hemp in the stock mixture, and add a little German rape, with plenty of berries and sweet apple. I also give them a little hemp and sunflower now and again.

"CAGE BIRDS" JIG-SAW PUZZLE

Can You Solve It?

HALF-GUINEA CASH FOR THE SUCCESSFUL COMPETITOR

The "jig-saw" picture on our front page this week hides in its jumbled-up pieces the silhouette of a Norwich Plainhead Canary. A cash prize of half a guinea is waiting for the reader who cuts out the pieces and pastes them on a sheet of paper or cardboard so as to exactly reproduce the original picture of this Canary before it was cut and jumbled up. The key to the correct arrangement of the pieces (as given by our artist) is locked in the editor's desk. In the event of no reader correctly solving this puzzle, the prize will go to the effort which comes nearest the said key-picture; should two or more readers be correct, the prize will go to the one who sends in the most neatly arranged attempt.

In solving this puzzle, every jumbled piece appearing on the frontispiece must be utilised—any picture sent in which is made up of less than the said number, or to which extra pieces have been added, will be disqualified.

All solutions should be sent packed flat with the full name and address of the competitor clearly written at the foot, and be posted to reach CAGE BIRDS Offices (154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.) not later than first post Thursday, January 26th, when the competition closes. The Editor's decision will be final.

Hints to Societies in Liverpool and District.

SIR,—I am quite surprised at these members of the unknown when they say they never see any notices of Liverpool shows in your valuable CAGE BIRDS. I may say that if they look in CAGE BIRDS, October and November, 1910, they will see who was the judge for B.C.F.A., also where it was to be held. So I don't see where we are "lost." I am quite sure our posters were up in good time in Liverpool B.B.A., also some of our members selling tickets. The posters are not all down in Birkenhead yet. Come on Tuesday, 17th January, and ask for me at the society's room, and I will entertain you and your friends. Don't forget, this is the final note. Give us your names and addresses and be men. Join the B.C.F.A.

A. E. LLOYD.

SIR,—Having been accused of being the "Disgusted Liverpool Novice," kindly allow me to deny being the "disgusted one," or having anything to do with the complaint of December 17th. On the contrary, allow me to thank Messrs. Abbot, Hales, Peak, and others, for the unbiased assistance rendered me, and the courtesy shown when I have visited the various bird rooms and shows which have been held in the City of Liverpool since my introduction to the Fancy through an accidental reading of CAGE BIRDS about two years ago.

THOS. R. JONES.

SIR,—Allow me to inform "Novice," or so-called novice, that I fail to see how Mr. A. E. Lloyd can be pulled up for not announcing the Wallasey and Bootle shows recently held—he is not a general secretary. As regards the Birkenhead shows, I have always seen the announcement under the heading of club and society notices. If "Novice" would get a pair of glasses perhaps he would be able to see them for himself; or join the B.C.F.A., or some other society, and pay the 2s. 6d. per year, and he will be able to get all the information he wants about the local shows. But perhaps "Novice" would like the secretary to run round with handbills, the same as advertising a sale.

OLD NOVICE.

[We think this correspondence may now very well close.—Editor.]

Two Public-spirited Members.

The Crested Canary Club Patronage.

SIR,—Kindly announce that the loss incurred on Crest and Crest-bred sections at the undermentioned shows, in accordance with Mr. Ley's insurance scheme, has been made good, a cheque having been sent to the respective hon. secretaries:—Plymouth, £2 11s.; Cheltenham, £3 19s. 6d.; Nottingham, £4 18s.; L.C.B.A., £5 4s.; Manchester, £6 6s.; Birmingham, £3 8s.; Cambridge, £2 10s. 6d.; Gateshead, 16s. The last-mentioned show is the only one whereby the C.C.C. did not lose money; or, rather, I should say Messrs. Ley and Rhodes did so. It will be remembered that these gentlemen guaranteed the C.C.C. against loss, and up to now it has cost them within a few shillings of twenty pounds. This leaves the Palace Show to be dealt with under the same scheme, and I do hope C.C.C. members will support the same with their entries, so as to prevent further loss to the two public-spirited members who have already done so much. What is the matter with the Crest Fancy? For one thing, it needs a new hon. secretary, one with more time to devote to the Fancy than the present one, who must positively resign the position at the forthcoming annual general meeting.

J. S. CLARKE, Hon. Sec.

LEADGATE (Co. Durham).

Second annual show, held January 7th, in the Church Square Hall, a most suitable place for the purpose, being large and roomy, and provided with all the necessaries required for the comfort of the exhibits. Entries came up well, totalling 207, this being an increase over the entry of last year. In the Canary section, Yorkshires were the strongest in number, averaging nine per class, while the quality of the exhibits was very good. Norwich also came up well, averaging 8 per class, and here again the quality was good. Borders were also good, averaging 8 per class, the winners all being birds of exceptional merit. In the British bird section Goldies, Bullies, and Linnets were the strongest. The genial secretary, Mr. J. A. Turnbull, had all the arrangements well in hand, and in him the Society possess a most capable and hard-working secretary, courteous and obliging to all; and under his careful management everything went off splendidly. He was ably supported in his efforts by a grand body of fanciers, headed by the chairman, Mr. E. Westthorpe; vice chairman, Mr. J. Rowell, and treasurer, Mr. J. T. Colling, the committee being Messrs. Rice, Wilson, Reed, Dickenson, Walton, and others, all grand workers. We regret to record a very poor "gate," the attendance of the public being much below expectations, whilst the sale of tickets in connection with the prize drawing was also much smaller than was anticipated, due probably to the general slackness of work in the district. We hope, however, that the subscription list will counterbalance this, and that the Society will have a balance in hand. Mr. R. S. Bewick (Chester-le-Street) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

CHIRNSIDE.

Thirtieth annual show, held Volunteer Hall, 2nd January, in fair weather. The cage birds were staged at end of Hall, and were attended to by Messrs. W. Denholm, J. Young, G. White, and R. Ferguson (stewards) backed by a hard-working secretary in Mr. A. Shiell, who had everything well in hand, no hitch occurring under his able management. The entry all over was somewhat down, but the quality well maintained. Scotch Fancies were a strong class. The Border Cup was awarded to a clear buff cock shown by Mr. Lloyd. Special for best bird in hall fell to a rare good evenly marked buff Mule shown by Mr. J. Patterson, junr.; he also secured special for best British with a good song Thrush. Mr. W. Bell (Earlston) judged. His awards in the Border Fancy section came in for criticism. The attendance was a record, the hall being simply packed.

OBITUARY.

I regret to announce, writes Mr. V. Wynn, hon. sec. City and Suburban A.C.B., that the eldest daughter of our old and esteemed member, Mr. A. W. Hart, passed away on Thursday evening, after a protracted illness. Although the highest medical skill was concentrated upon her case, nothing could prevent the final setting in of congestion of the brain, which turned to the total paralysis of the whole of the right side, from which she succumbed. I feel sure that the sympathy of members and friends alike will go out to Mr. and Mrs. Hart in their heavy loss, and a sorrow made the more acute by reason of the fact that she had just attained the age of 20.

EASTFIELD SIDE C.B.S.

On January 7 the society held a coffee supper, and invited all local fanciers. There was a good gathering, fully 30 sitting down to n capital spread, served in fine form by the host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Bradbury. After supper, with Mr. W. H. Burton in the chair, we did a little business. The balance-sheet was read over; it shows a balance in hand of £5 9s. 10d., which is considered very good. Some new members joined. We then had some enjoyment. With Mr. J. Carlins at the piano a very fine evening was passed. Mr. J. Smedley opened with a couple of songs, then Mr. Beardall sang. Mr. A. Wright gave us some good "comics", including "Last Night" and "The Irish Jubilee." Messrs. J. G. Wright, A. Keeling, R. Nuttall, G. Hall, and others also obliged. Our membership total is 33, and still they keep coming. The singing of the National Anthem closed the meeting.—R. Nuttall.

ASHINGTON AND DIST. C.B.S.

Annual meeting held January 7, at Mr. Rowley's. The president regretted having to accept the resignation of the secretary, who gave up his position owing to pressure of business. The president also resigned owing to his removal out of the town. Mr. James Miles was elected president, and Mr. F. Barron secretary. The chairman congratulated the members on the successful year they had just had, it being a record one, both in entries, donations, gate moneys, and membership. After paying prize money at the rate of £1 per class, we added £1 13s. 6d. to our already substantial balance in the bank. Our prize money was paid on a unique scale, that is, on points at the rate of 10d. per point: 1st, 8 points; 2nd, 6 points; 3rd, 4 points; vhc, 3 points; hc, 2 points, c, 1 point. I don't know of any club which pays on the same principle, and upon the whole it gave every satisfaction to the majority of the members, and greatly facilitated the work of the secretary in paying out prize monies. Five new members joined, and we have a prospect of a yet further substantial increase in membership. Mr. J. Graham (Newbiggin) kindly promised to read a paper on the Border Fancy at some future meeting. —J. Miles.

PARTICK AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

Usual meeting held Trades Hall, Mr. Anderson (president) in chair. Secretary read correspondence from the Glasgow and District Association with regard to entering for challenge shield at their forthcoming great open show; it was agreed that this club support same to the best of its ability. Any member not present at meeting and who is thinking of showing birds might kindly mark the name of club on their entry form, as it is the club with most points that is declared the winner. Mr. Appleyard proposed, and Mr. Roy seconded, that we open a gold medal fund, same to go along with large cup each year. It was moved by Mr. Walker, and seconded by Mr. Henderson, that we have a committee meeting to revise rules, same to have the approval of members at next meeting. To a motion by Mr. Maxwell, seconded by Mr. Henderson, "that we add an extra ten shillings to secretary's salary," an amendment was moved by Mr. Appleyard, and seconded by Mr. Walker, "that we keep it as it is." On a vote being taken the motion was carried. On a vote being taken the motion was carried. It was mentioned that at our recent show young birds were shown in pair classes, which was not in accordance with Rule 8. To make the matter clearer, Mr. J. Riseborough moved, and Mr. G. Davidson seconded, that "pairs must be old birds used by the exhibitor during the breeding season." Mr. J. Riseborough moved that "in all cases where a point arises which is not clear to a member, and a dispute occurs, the secretary to call the committee together to settle the matter." Mr. J. Riseborough moved, and Mr. Davidson seconded, "that in future the rules be strictly enforced." Mr. G. Bryan staged a grand team of Yorkshires, taking all prizes. His first prize winner, a grand hen, had taken first at Brownsgrove during the previous week. The quality and excellence of his exhibits were much remarked on, every exhibit being in grand form. In the class for British birds, Mr. Bryan took first with a Goldfinch, and Mr. W. Parsons second with a Lark. Mr. C. Machin judged, and he had also promised to give a lecture on "Canaries and British Birds for a Hobby," but, unfortunately, he could not stay to give this, but promised to do so at a later meeting. The society has only a few cage bird members, and any fancier residing in Staffordshire will be given a hearty welcome. I shall be pleased to send all particulars.—H. W. Briggs, Hon. Sec., Walsall Road.

BRISTOL C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Jan. 4th, headquarters, City Hotel, Wine Street. Mr. W. H. Manley presided over a good attendance. The balance sheet was submitted, showing a balance in hand of £3 14s. 6d., considered very satisfactory. Through the illness of one of the auditors, the accounts could not be passed till next meeting. The election of officers; President, Lieut-Col. G. A. Gibbs, M.P.; vice-president, Messrs. J. H. Payne, B. Bowering, R. H. Crocker, Hone and Co., Chamberlain, Pole and Co., and Mrs. Brunt; hon. solicitor, Mr. W. F. Cook; hon. auctioneer, Mr. W. E. Parker; chairman, Mr. W. H. Manley ,re-elected); vice-chairman, M. F. Buckland; committee, Messrs. E. Stonelake, O. Coggins, F. Burgess, R. Rogers, J. Fletcher, F. R. Phillips, T. Noble, and H. H. Grandfield; auditors, Messrs. T. M. McIlrath and R. G. Clark; treasurer, Mr. J. Tristem (re-elected); hon. sec., Mr. A. R. A. Carter (re-elected); asst. sec., Mr. T. Keegau. The rules were then revised, several alterations and additions were made. Rules added:—"Members joining after July are not entitled to compete for members' cups, but can accept the benefits of reduced entry fee and specials." "If the existing partnership be dissolved the year they hold the cup, the win for that year to be nullified. Our subscription has been reduced from 4s. to 2s. 6d. per year, with 1s. entry fee. I shall be pleased to hear from any fancier who would like to join. We have three £5 5s. silver challenge cups for annual competition, and our membership is open to the U.K. In connection with the Palace show, the secretary is arranging a party for Saturday, Feb. 4th, and will any fancier who would like to join, please let him know early, so that arrangements can be made.—A. R. A. Carter, Hon. Sec., 11, Queen's Road, Ashley Down Road.

DUBLIN C.B., &c., ASSOCIATION.

Annual general meeting, held 5, South Anne Street, Mr. Webster, in chair. The hon. treasurer's balance sheet was submitted and passed, showing a debit balance, but owing to the generosity of the members present same was cleared off before the meeting terminated. Proposed and carried that the number of committee be reduced to 12 members. Election of officers: President, M. L. Hearn; vice-presidents, T. Speedy, Welby A. C. Adams, T. Farrell, F. R. Buckley; committee, W. Webster, R. C. Bolton, J. Blood Smyth, F. Sammon, W. C. Hughes, H. Kavanagh, J. T. Dixon, J. Dowling C. W. Smyth, W. H. Plewman, J. C. Maclean, and W. Ashe King. Secretary and treasurer: J. Gibson, 5, South Anne Street, Dublin. A cordial vote of thanks was passed to the hon. treasurer, Mr. T. Speedy. Date of 1911 show fixed for 6th and 7th December (will other secretaries please note, so as not to clash?) The arrangement of prize money was completed. The following was passed unanimously "That the secretary write to any Cage Bird Society in Dublin, asking them to name two or more members who will attend any meeting summoned, and who will assist in the arrangement of the classification for the show, etc." Unanimously passed, that all prize winners be paid prize money on the second evening of show, after 3 p.m. The meeting concluded on passing a vote of thanks to the Chairman.—J. Gibson, Sec.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Annual Concert and presentation of specials won at the annual show took place at the "Reindeer Hotel," January 3rd. A good number of members and friends were present, and spent a most enjoyable evening. Amongst those we noticed were: Mr and Mrs. N. W. Tomsett, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Mr and Mrs. Cracknell, Mr. and Mrs. Broacher, Mr. and Mrs. Hodson, Madam Madewell; Messrs. F. Cole, L. J. Richardson, A. W. Hollands, J. Hazell, J. Johnson, B. Reeks, F. J. Martin, F. Hocking, A. Goodwin, L. S. Mazzoni, A. Carpenter, M. Cornish, Master, Norman Thomas, A. Cunningham, S. Stephens, J. Groombridge. Mr. F. Cole occupied the chair and kept the meeting alive with his jokes and witty remarks in presenting the prizes to the fortunate winners. An excellent programme had been arranged. Mrs. Gertrude Brown presided at the piano, and right well she acquitted herself; she also sang "By the Fountain," which was much applauded. Master Norman Thomas played two violin solos in fine style. Mr. B. Reeks, who was in fine form, sang several good songs. Mr. L. J. Richardson also sang. Mr. Allan Cunningham ably recited. The principal prize winners were: Messrs. F. J. Martin (who took the challenge shield and bowl), Mr. Botting (the challenge cup), Mr. A. W. Holland (the novice Norwich cup, presented by Mr. Matthes), and Messrs. Richardson, Goodwin, Freeman, Carpenter, Hocking, Easterling, and C. W. Mabey, and Madam Madewell. Before the meeting closed a vote of thanks was proposed and unanimously carried to Messrs. Tomsett and Richardson for the admirable way in which they conducted the annual show, and the great success it proved to be. Vote of thanks to the chair, and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" closed the evening.—W. Hodson.

Wild Seeds and Plants for Bird-keepers.

CHAS. PRIOR (Brentford, W.)

A Special article written round this week's coloured plate, by one of our oldest and foremost exhibitors of British Birds.

Of peculiar interest and usefulness to all keepers of seed-eating birds, particularly British, is this latest production of CAGE BIRDS' clever artist-in-chief, Mr. Norman. To the beginner, a boon and a blessing; and to many an old hand doubtless a timely reminder.

No. 1 in the plate, chickweed, is common and well known. About the first of the green foods to put in an appearance in the spring, it is a welcome addition to the birds' larder. It should be given in a seeding condition, and while all the seed-eaters will partake of it to some extent, Linnets, Greenfinches, Bullfinches, Twites, and Redpolls will set about it with greedy eagerness. Canaries also are extremely partial to it, and there is no better greenfood for them while breeding, and rearing young. It should be sought on ground which is continually being dug over, and in its seeding stage is a perfectly safe change from the dry winter's diet for all birds that eat it.

No. 3, groundsel, is also common, and even better known than chickweed; in fact, the oldest recognised green food for all pet birds. It is less sought after by the Linnet and Twite, and not at all by the Chaffinches, Bramble Finches, and the Buntings; but the Bullfinches, Greenfinches, and Goldfinches delight in it, as also do Siskins and Redpolls. Its seeding time is about coincident with chickweed; but it lasts much longer, being obtainable practically all the time the weather is open, and it is never otherwise than useful. Also found most abundantly where the ground is continually being disturbed.

A Food with many Uses.

No. 4, Shepherd's purse, like chickweed, is acceptable, in some degree, to all the Finches, and is the wild food par excellence for the Linnet. Keenly relished also by Twites, Bullfinches, and Greenfinches, and, needless to say, Redpolls. A wonderful harbourer of minute insect life—invaluable food for all captive birds—and an unsurpassed producer of the amatory state—in other words, the best possible food to get birds into breeding condition. It will be found in all waste places which are not dominated by the all-conquering grass, and it should be gathered in a state of yellow ripeness, care being taken not to lose the ripest and best seed pods in transit. The ripe stage is seldom attained before June, and extends well into the summer months. Canary breeders will do well to direct their attention to this food.

No. 21. Dandelion, again a spring food, and another wonderful conditioner and promoter of activity in the reproductive organs. Greenfinches and Goldfinches will devour the young green leaves with great gusto, and apparently considerable benefit. But the seeding stage is the most valuable, and Goldfinches, Siskins, Bullfinches, Greenfinches, Linnets, Twites, and Redpolls vie with each other in doing justice to their allowance of ripe dandelion seed heads. Perhaps Goldfinches and Siskins may be named as deriving the greatest benefit therefrom. It will doubtless be instructive to trace the development of the dandelion to the time for gathering. First, of course, the plant, about the middle of March. Early in April appears the bright yellow flower with the rude nickname. Soon the flower closes and the petals fade. These two stages of the flower are clearly seen in the picture. Next the faded petals fall from the end of the seed head, disclosing a fluffy white tip. Now is the time to gather; now, before the ripened seed head opens out and the seed is blown away and lost. The seeding time of the dandelion is not of long duration. It is here and gone in three or four, or at most five weeks. Lose no chance then, and use it abundantly while you may. It grows everywhere, and even the grass cannot choke it, although gaining the upperhand of most other small plants.

No. 5, Sow Thistle, is, like all those already noticed, a wild food of rather succulent nature, and, similarly again, occurs chiefly on cultivated land. It will be found with its clustering seed heads in fit state to gather about July, and keeps on growing and seeding until the first frosts deal it its death-blow. Bullfinches are extremely partial to it, and lay in great stores of breast colour from it. Greenfinches, Goldfinches, and Siskins devour it with great relish, seed, leaves and all, down to the very stump. It has a bitter taste, is doubtless a tonic, and certainly a great colour producer. The greenfly blight seems to be particularly attracted to this plant, and often completely smothers it. In this condition it is much appreciated by all seed eating birds.

No. 6 is plantain, another old-established wild seed food for captive birds, well known also as "ratstails." Found generally on stony waste places, and often on little-used roads; growing freely on the edges of the deeply indented cart rucks. It is ready for gathering in the early autumn, the best condition, and the one most favoured by the birds, being the purple stage of ripeness. Linnets, Twites, and Redpolls fairly revel in it; Bullfinches, too, do not despise it, and many of the other seedeaters will eat it a little. It has undoubted colouring properties for the birds mentioned, and some astringent qualities as well. A little caution should be observed in its use on this account.

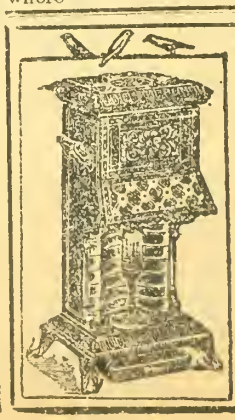
No. 24, smaller plantain, is ready for use earlier than the "ratstail" variety, and its season passes more quickly. Its properties are similar, and it is a bit less astringent.

Most of the remaining bird foods illustrated are seeds of a less succulent nature than those already reviewed, partaking more of the character of the seeds of the corn stores. And whereas the foregoing foods are of enormous value in their season, but not worth saving for use out of it, the bulk of the after-mentioned ones may suitably be stored and used as tit-bits at all times. Of these,

No 2. charlock, otherwise wild mustard, is the bane of the cornfields, and found also on the sloping banks of almost all roadside hedges. Greenfinches and Linnets eat freely of this pungent seed in their wild state, but few of them are keen about it in captivity, perhaps finding the milder flavour of the various kinds of rape we give them more to their palate. There is usually a goodly proportion of charlock in most of the advertised wild seed mixtures, which consist mainly of the siftings from wheat, oats, and other grain.

No. 7.—Teazel. Teazel seed is now recognised as an established item in the stock mixtures of all well-regulated bird rooms, and no seed salesman can consider his price list complete if he fails to quote it. In the wild state it crops up in unexpected places, appearing, disappearing, and re-appearing year by year in a very puzzling fashion. Marshy spots in woods and copses appear to be its favourite sites, and it will sometimes be met with in hollow places—such as worked-out gravel pits—and again on railway banks. All the seedeating birds are fond of it, and its chief value lies in its tonic and corrective qualities. To Goldfinches, Siskins, and Redpolls it is a natural food; quite a winter granary, in fact.

A "Fat little Maggot."



No. 19 is "hard-heads"—otherwise knapweed. There are two varieties of this, a greater and lesser kind. The one shown in the plate is the greater, and there are various slight differences which are easily remembered after both varieties have been seen. Here attention will merely be directed to the seed, which is the point of chief interest to bird lovers. The greater kind then has a hairy-looking tuft attached to each seed; perhaps the first step to evolving a parachute of down, like that of the dandelion and thistle. The lesser kind is entirely free of this appendage, and much resembles thistle seed, is, in fact, sometimes sold as thistle. Familiarity with these two varieties of knapweed is well worth acquiring, because it is the lesser kind which is most appreciated by the birds. Goldfinches are particularly fond of it, and Linnets, Siskins, Redpolls, and Twites find it entirely to their liking. There is also, in quite a considerable proportion of knapweed seed heads, a fat little maggot, which finds great favour with the birds, especially Goldfinches and Siskins. Knapweed will be found round many pastures, and sometimes amongst them too. Also by grass-grown roadsides; anywhere, in fact, where there is grass in a natural (i.e., uncultivated) state. The flower appears in the early summer, and the ripe seed soon follows. It should be given freely during the moult.

No. 14, spear plume thistle, most commonly known as Scotch thistle. This is par excellence the wild food of the Goldfinch, captive or free. Other seedeaters will help themselves to it when opportunity offers, but it requires a Goldfinch to properly negotiate Scotch thistle, and he does it with amazing dexterity. The illustration admirably sets forth the various conditions of the flower until the ripe seed head stage is reached. First the characteristic purple flower, each petal widely spread to the sun and the bees. Then the flower all closed and withered, and the seed head perceptibly increased in size, with the growth of the seed. Finally the flower all disappeared, the white pappus showing, and the seed head enlarged to bursting point. This is the time to gather it, and store away, after drying, for future use. There are maggots in most thistle heads like those to be found in hard-heads. The Goldfinch knows all about them, and reserves a special corner for them in his anatomy. Thistles, as everybody knows, grow everywhere

No. 13, creeping thistle, is also visited by wild Goldfinches, but it is comparatively of little value; nobody, that is to say, who can obtain supplies of hard-head and Scotch thistle need go to the trouble of collecting creeping thistle. Many of the heads are barren of seed.

No. 20 is poppy, and both flower and seed cup are depicted. We are familiar with this seed by the name of maw, of which both blue and white are purchasable. Poppy, or maw, seed is one of the most useful of all trade seeds. A welcome tit-bit to all seedeaters, it is also a perfectly safe and generally beneficial food to offer to any ailing birds. These will always eat of it even though rejecting all other.

For Owner and his Birds.

No. 22, chicory, is a plant not unlike the dandelion, and with a similar "tap" root. Its seeding habit is, however, quite different, the handsome blue flowers being set quite close to a long vine-like habit of growth. It is cultivated as a salad, but I have met with it growing wild at the edge of a cornfield, and observed Goldfinches, Greenfinches, and Linnets feeding upon, and quarrelling over, the seeds. My own birds were delighted with some that I gathered and took home to them.

No. 17, common nettle, is certainly visited when seeding by wild Bullfinches, so it is worth while offering it to captive ones. My own, however, have never seemed keen about it, though the experience of others may perhaps be different.

No. 8, dock. Another common and well-known weed; rampant in all neglected ground, and difficult to get rid of once it has taken possession. Bullfinches eat it pretty freely, and most other Finches find a certain amount of appetite for it. It is not appreciated much, however, until the depth of winter, and appears to be more to the birds' liking after it has been once or twice visited by frost. Its value is medicinal rather than nourishing.

The eight remaining examples, rye grass (favoured by most foreign seedeaters), corn marigold, fleabane, ragwort, wild linseed, and saxifrage (bill of fare items for Linnets, Redpolls, and Goldfinches), persicaria (beloved of Bramblefinches and Chaffinches) and common fumitory, may be regarded as useful auxiliaries to the long list preceding them, and perfectly safe things to offer by way of variety to any of the Finches.

New British Bird.

It is reported that a new British bird has been discovered in the pine woods of Sligo, Ireland. It resembles a Cole Tit, but differs from that bird by having cheeks of sulphurous yellow instead of pure white.

The Rook's Marriage.

With the Rooks, once paired means a pairing for life, or, rather, so long as one is not removed by death. These old pairs visit the nest in winter, and upon calm, sunny days they may be seen pottering about, adding a few sticks and straws to the structure, although it may be months before they actually nest.

Jackdaws as Pets.

Some years ago the artful Jackdaw was very much in favour as a pet, but of late years he seems to have entirely lost his place. He is the comedian of the bird world, and as interesting in a way as any of his more favoured rivals. Few country villages were without one, which was usually allowed its liberty and known to everybody.

Speed of Birds and Beasts.

The pace of birds and beasts has always been a most interesting subject of discussion. The ways of wild birds in the air were noticed by the ancients. It has not grown less wonderful in spite of the advance of avian knowledge. At all times the flight of a bird exceeds that of the fastest quadruped. The fleeing hare is caught by the lumbering Eagle as if she was standing still.

Hints on the Construction of Travelling Cases.

H. NORMAN.

There has been considerable improvement during the past few years respecting the way in which birds are dispatched to show. The time has gone by when canvas wrappers and brown paper did duty to cover the cages containing valuable birds, while on the journey between the fancier's home and the exhibition hall. In many cases this journey covers several hundreds of miles under conditions not always favourable to the well-being of the exhibits. Choice show birds are taken every care of while in the fancier's room. They are fed and watered regularly, and managed so that they are neither in a draught nor in a stuffy over-heated room. Yet upon the journey they are frequently subjected to ill-usage. I have seen them standing upon exposed platforms where the wind has been so keen that travellers avoided the spot, and we all know that some of the booking offices at the railway stations are not so well ventilated as they might be, but are more frequently over-heated, so that it is not an uncommon occurrence for exhibition birds to be exposed to the two extremes in quite a short period, while on a journey.

Therefore, the necessity arises of packing them securely before dispatch. Although many fanciers prefer to make their own appliances, such as cages, etc., the Fancy generally is pretty well provided for in this direction, and cheap, serviceable, neat-looking cages may easily be procured, but with packing cases there are several reasons why this branch of the Fancy is not so well looked after. In the first place all cages are not of an uniform size, and in many cases a fancier has more than one variety of Canary, or he may keep British or Foreign birds requiring cages of different sizes, so that to provide cases suitable for everybody a dealer in appliances would require a stock quite out of proportion to the demand, and it would mean so much money lying idle that it would not pay him to keep them.

Many fanciers are very handy with tools, and as they frequently make their own cages, they also include the case in which to dispatch birds to the shows as soon as they get something good enough to compete.

The following drawings of different cases have been taken from actual specimens seen at shows, so that the would be case-maker can choose whichever pattern he thinks is the best adapted to his requirements. The ideal show case should be strong, light, and easily handled. Strength is needed to ensure safety to the birds, and to stand the rough usage to which travelling cases are frequently subjected, and lightness to ensure a minimum charge for the journey. Unfortunately for exhibitors the cages and cases are charged for by the railway company as live birds, and a pound or two in weight off a case frequently means many shillings in travelling expenses during the show season. After the old days of brown paper and canvas wrappings the first sign of improvement was that many sent their birds in wicker-work baskets; and these undoubtedly are hard to beat for utility purposes, as they supply the two requisite necessities—strength and lightness. They are however rather expensive to make, although lasting many years if properly constructed.

Baskets are more suitable for Norwich and Lizard Canaries, Hybrids and British birds than they are for Yorkshire, Border Fancy and Lancashire Canaries, and there is always a certain amount of "give" or bend in them which the box cages more easily resist.

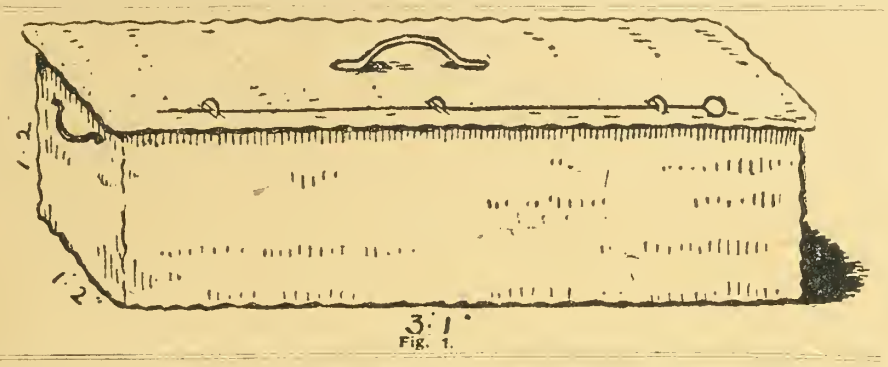

Fig. 1.

Fig. 1 shows such a basket, made to contain six Norwich Canary cages, but the baskets can, of course, be made of any size. If the fancier happens to live in a town where a basket-maker works, his best plan is to take him an odd cage and get him to make the case to contain the required number. It is not necessary to have them made of close material, especially for two or four cages; they can be constructed somewhat open which will make them lighter, and very little will be lost in strength.

When received they should be carefully lined with good thick canvas (which can be procured at any draper's establishment), and a card bearing the fancier's name and address should be sewn in the canvas inside the lid. These basket cases require no holes for ventilation as sufficient air will penetrate the canvas.

Fig. 2 is a sketch of a case made to hold two cages. It is constructed of 3-8th inch pine, such as is used in the construction of cages. To the fancier who is in the habit of making his own breeding cages this case will offer no obstacles. Undoubtedly dove-tailing and glueing make the stronger case, but this method requires far more skill, and no doubt the majority of fanciers will be content to use nails. For this purpose procure those made with an oval head, as they are not very unsightly, and hold quite as strongly as the ordinary French nails. If desired, the lid need not be made quite as shown in the sketch, although it looks neat and adds greatly to the strength, and considerably lessens the danger of getting the wood split while on the journey. Two pieces of strong webbing tacked inside the lid and inside the case prevent the former falling back and being torn from the hinges.

Fig. 3 is a similarly made case, to contain two Yorkshire show cages. This case could be made (and many are), with a flat top, instead of a rounded one, but the latter looks much neater, is easily recognised as a case for Yorkshires at packing time, and being so constructed prevents heavier cases being placed on top of it.

In making the lid, the fancier should first construct the two oval ends as shown at A. The rounded parts can be sawn either with a proper fret saw or with one of the American keyhole saws, which can be procured cheaply at most ironmongers. They should first of all be cut out of fairly thick wood, say, half or 5-8th inch thick, the under or straight part screwed to a plank C, as shown in Fig. 4, and this used as a mould. Now procure the thin pine for the bent part of the lid, cut it the correct length, but a little wider than required. Have some boiling water handy, and wet and steam the upper surface, gradually bending it into the shape required. Nail on the mould at D, and carefully bend over, putting other nails in as required. Do not drive them quite home, but leave sufficient of the heads showing to take hold of when the time comes to take them out. Having fastened the pine on to the blocks it can be left until the next morning. When thoroughly dry, after withdrawing the nails it will almost retain the required shape. It can now be re-steamed if necessary, and glued on to the proper rounded ends, which should have had the sides fastened to them previously.

As the case is made of thin material, it is a good plan to fasten a strip of wood about two or three inches wide at A in Fig. 3, as it strengthens the parts where the hinges are put on.

This case is designed to carry two Yorkshire show cages, but one made in the same way, for six, would have to be wide enough to take the cages lengthwise, so that the six stand side by side. The case would then measure 42in. long, 10in. wide, and 15in. high.

Fig. 5 is a case made to contain a mixed collection. It is constructed of thin pine and strengthened with iron bands at the corners. These bands add very little to the weight, but considerably to the strength. A tinsmith or working ironmonger would cut them out of thin sheet iron, and drill them with holes for short screws. They can easily be bent to right angles and fastened on. A big strap to go right over the lid and a couple of simple fasteners would add greatly to the security of the birds.

My Pet Cuckoos and other Birds.

By Mrs. E. M. SARGEANT.

It gave me much pleasure to get a photograph taken of my Cuckoo for your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. He is now well over two and a half years old. Mr. Downing (Worcester) has, I think, made a beautiful picture of him, and it is absolutely true to life. A correspondent of yours, some time ago asked a few questions about these birds which I might be permitted to answer first. I fed both my Cuckoos on raw beef and hard-boiled egg and greens, a few caterpillars being the only live foods I gave—when I could get them, of course. Then as to the winter; they moult late as the young birds in a state of nature leave here for Africa as late as the end of October; the old ones go, of course, during June, though I have read of cases in August. Your correspondent will notice what a large and powerful wing the young Cuckoo has, and what a distance he flies without opening it; or, rather, with a single stroke of the wing. I began to think I should not have the pleasure of trying to rear a Cuckoo during the past year, but I had a real beauty brought me, so I am going to try and do without so much raw beef, and intend giving snails and cooked beef instead, as perhaps it was the quantity of raw beef they will consume that caused the cankered mouth that my last year's bird died from.

It may be of some interest to the gentleman whose Thrushes built last year, and whose cock bird I was sorry to hear is dead, that my Thrush, who laid eggs but did not build, has this year paired up with the Thrush who also brought up a nest of young last year. She has built two lovely nests. This past year in the kitchen, in the first nest, she brought out two young they lived a couple of days and then she carried them out dead, to my sorrow. She immediately built again. The first nest was a fortnight in building. She still sleeps beside it on the place she built for the cock bird close under the ceiling between two beams on an iron support and close to the outer door. The second nest took only three days to build, and was constructed in a comb-box between window and door; it was lined with mud and teak leaves. On the fourth day the first egg was laid. After she had laid three I had the misfortune to step on her foot, or rather her middle toe and break it; she endeavoured to sit, but the pain made her so restless that she broke the eggs.

After this she continued to lay eggs without intermission every two or three days, and laid fifteen in all. Some I boiled for the Cuckoo; he ate only the hard yolk, and would not touch them raw. Both are now in the moult, and the baby, the cock bird, has gone of his own accord upstairs to the other birds, and only comes down once or twice a day just, I suppose, to see if she is all right; in the same way, she very occasionally goes upstairs.

Nesting Attempts.

I am thinking you will conclude that I have had a chapter of accidents this past year when I tell you that my Skylarks paired up, built their little nest in the middle of the cage, laid eggs, which kept unaccountably disappearing. I blamed the cock, "Mousie," for their disappearance, and took him away; but still the eggs went. At last I caught the little madam with her beak in one. I saved only one, which I put under a hen Canary. It proved to be addled. The little hen Yellowhammer has been guilty of the same thing. She built no proper nest, but continually made and unmade it. I was not lucky enough to get an unbroken one. The eggs from the brown Linnet and Canary have all been clear, and those from the Greenfinch and Canary addled; but I shall try again another year. The Linnets are only young and I am just a novice with no experience; but I can get information from CAGE BIRDS.

Since the above notes were written I decided to have the photograph of Cuckoo No. 2 taken, to illustrate clearly the difference between the plumage of the young bird and that of the adult. Meanwhile, another Cuckoo was brought me in a tiny Sparrow's nest. Then I thought that as I had used Joey's second nest for the purpose of rearing brown Linnets and Hedge Sparrows, I would slip the Cuckoo and his nest inside and rear him in the same, and so have nest and bird photographed. At this time the bird could only open its mouth, having apparently little other movement. It had a bristly sort of appearance by reason of the half of the feathers still being in the pen. In the one photograph he is seen just lazily turning round for a mouthful. Not thinking these pictures quite satisfactory Mr. Downing offered to take the photograph again. Meanwhile, this little bird, in the course of five days, had made such rapid progress as to have come out of the nest on to my finger.

A Regular Torment.

I am of opinion that this is a male bird; the shape, colouring and tail make me feel quite as sure about it as I did about the previous year's bird that died. The birds are not caged, but are on the lines in the same way as the old one was, and he is on a line upstairs. The birds downstairs are tormented by my young Starling, the first I have been able to rear. He is, at the time of writing, just changing his grey coat for a green one and spangles. I once had to put poor Joe in a cage out of his way, and the very next morning he had forced his way through a loose wire and was seated on the perch beside her. He steals the other birds' food, or takes it out of my fingers just as the Cuckoos' mouths are gaping. He makes himself at home on my head, and clambers down my forehead till I tilt my head back, when he makes a perch of my nose and opens my mouth with his long beak to look for my dinner. Of course, I hide a little piece there for him. If I refuse to notice him he shrieks "Bobby, bobby" at the top of his voice, but he won't say it when I want him to. He is certainly the naughty boy of the family, and as is generally the case, is liked by everyone who knows him. He is on my shoulder now while I write, and is trying to eat my collar. I rather think the Cuckoo sometimes gets some of his misdeeds shouldered on to him, as he did not scruple to take one of Joey's eggs for his breakfast, which the Cuckoo never did.

I think the markings of Cuckoos' heads vary very much, and remind me of a necklace of mixed beads—all something the same, yet each different.

Difficulties of Feeding.

One word more about the feeding of Cuckoos, and I must close. These birds, being birds of passage are, I take it, very uncertain in their appetites, sometimes crying for food all day and eating a tremendous quantity. I always give them food as long as they ask for it; then they will eat scarcely anything, even with coaxing for two or three days. I try to follow out their instincts as far as it lies within my power. I do not find them more dirty or unpleasant than any other bird, unless given a quantity of soft food, which to me does not appear good for them; neither do I mince it up finely, but give it in long, thin strips. Cuckoos need a deal of attention in feeding just as the beak is hardening and closing; as the passage gets narrower, I tuck as much at a time down as I can, as they are backward in opening the mouth much at that time and drop the food even after you have got it into the month: it requires the patience of Job just at that time. But after, like him, you get your reward.

The Keeping and Breeding of Java Sparrows.

WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., &c.

The Grey Java Sparrow (Munia oryzivora) and the White Java Sparrow (Munia oryzivora, var alba) are favourite birds with many fanciers. While among the most freely imported of foreign species, they are yet very beautiful and attractive; the sharp contrasts of the plumage of the Grey variety are very pleasing, and the lovely bloom overlaying the whole of the plumage forms a fitting finish to the whole. The same remarks apply to the White variety. These are beautiful objects in an outdoor aviary, as they flit to and fro amid the growing greenery; and they always excite notice and admiration from visitors.

Pleasing, Hardy and Easy to Breed.

I must confess to a weakness for them myself (both the species and the White variety) and have never been long without a few specimens, even since rare species have formed a greater attraction for me. In contour they are not graceful, for they are stoutly or heavily built birds; yet they are not ugly-formed birds, for the balance and symmetry are perfect throughout; and in the aviary their heavy build is not so apparent as in the cage. But in spite of their heavy build their aspect is decidedly pleasing, whether in cage or aviary, and under either conditions they succeed with the simplest, roughest of treatment, and breed freely either in cage or aviary. They are also hardy and enduring.

The species is also known as the Rice-bird and Paddy-bird. It is a native of Java, Sumatra, and Malacca, and has also been introduced in many other countries.

The Grey Java Sparrow has the crown of the head, nape, margins of neck, chin, and tail black; cheeks pure white and very sharply defined; back and breast beautiful pearl-grey; abdomen paler pearl-grey, lightly suffused with brown; primaries leaden-grey; under-tail coverts white; beak rich rose colour, edged and tipped with white; eyelids red; iris ruddy brown; legs pinkish flesh colour. It is about the same size as the English Sparrow. The whole plumage is finished off with a lovely bloom similar to that found on ripe plums and grapes. As a rule they are so tightly feathered that they appear as if clad in an even silken garment—in fact, even when in the moult Mr. Java is always spruce and quite a dandified bird.

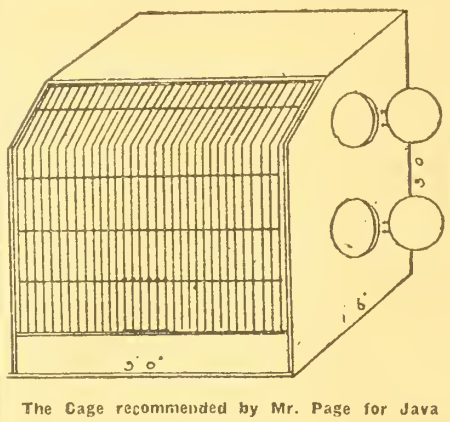
The Sexual Distinctions.

In plumage the sexes are alike, yet with a little practice it is easy to pick a pair from a crowd; it is never easy to define the sex of an odd bird. The female is slightly the smaller; her crown is narrower, and she has a narrower and more tapering beak, not so deep at the base as that of the male. The difference in the shape of the beak is most distinct when viewed in profile.

When attempting to judge the sex of an individual bird with others to compare it by, if the culmen is decked and the crown of the head broad, it may be reasonably assumed to be a male; while if the bird had a smallish appearance, a narrowish crown, and the upper mandible tapering from the base to point in almost a straight line, it is almost certain to turn out a hen.

Possible Varieties.

Only the White variety has been fixed; how and when this was produced can only be imagined. However, with a little trouble and patience it should be possible to produce handsome varieties intermediate between the Grey and White, and ultimately to fix them. The White variety is the exact counterpart of the Grey as to form and size, but the plumage is pure white, which admirably sets off the rose-coloured beak and red eyelids, and it is certainly a handsome bird. It is not an albino, but, still, it is not so hardy as the wild (Grey) species, though a robust bird. The same sexual distinctions apply in this case as in the case of the Grey varieties.



Nesting and Breeding.

In the aviary, both Greys and Whites breed freely and practically the whole year round, but winter breeding should not be encouraged out of doors, though I have had young leave the nest almost every month in the year, and fully reared, too, in my late London aviary. Though others have had natural nests built, I believe, yet in my aviary a box or husk was always used as a nesting site. Possibly the birds had learned, or instinct told them, that this was the safest course, for they formed part of a much mixed series in my aviary, though for two years they had plenty of natural cover; yet they never attempted to build a nest in a bush—always in either box, husk or Hartz travelling cage. The White Java is a free breeder under any conditions, but the wild Grey variety (species) is not so in a cage.

A Suitable Cage for Breeding.

In these notes I shall refer principally to the Grey species, as the White variety will breed without trouble under the same conditions. Herewith is figured a good type of cage for breeding foreign Finch-like birds, and the sizes given in diagram are what I recommend for the purpose, though a fair measure of success can be achieved with a cage one-third smaller, but then there is but little room left for the brood when they leave the nest, so that if the space at your disposal will in any way permit of it, have your cages full size.

The idea is to hang a nest box so that observations can be taken through the top circular door, the back of the cage to be well furnished with twiggy branches and the nest box well screened with same; there should be a hinged flap for cleaning out, and provision should be made for the usual food vessels. The wire front should be detachable, to facilitate the special Spring and Autumn clean-out. The type of nest box most favoured by these birds is a wooden one, square in shape, about six inches all ways, with an oval hole for entrance in one of the sides near the top. The bottom of the cage should be kept well covered with gritty sand, and hay and grass supplied for nesting material.

Mate Grey to White.

Now as to the birds; I have remarked that the Grey or wild species does not breed freely in a cage; but this difficulty can easily be surmounted by pairing up a White hen with a Grey cock, when the resulting progeny will be a free breeding strain; and if you can have two pairs going at once, the progeny would then provide you with unrelated pairs for future breeding operations. There will be a small proportion of pied birds among the young, which, though usually looked upon merely as mongrels, are often very handsome indeed.

If you are only able to keep one pair going, take one of your Grey hens with white blood and mate it with an imported Grey cock; and they will breed freely so, and throw pure and vigorous stock. From birds so mated only an occasional pied bird will be obtained. The young, also, are, if anything, larger and richer in colour than the wild-caught birds. I have proved this by breeding them through several generations, though I have not attempted breeding them these past five years, rarer species occupying my attention.

The Menu.

The diet of the species is very simple: a mixture of canary, white millet, and paddy rice, and a millet spray once a week, with green food, cuttlebone, and water for drinking and bathing purposes, will meet all their requirements when they are not rearing young. When they have young in the nest a little soft food should be given daily, though the young will be reared mainly on seed and green food.

Any good soft food mixture will meet the case (several excellent ones are advertised in our pages); or equal parts of ants' "eggs," crushed biscuit and crumbled sponge cake, made crumbly moist with boiling water will answer admirably.

The Methods of a Successful Canary Breeder.

JOHN LEES (Rochdale).

A well-known breeder and exhibitor offers a few hints to novices.

As a fairly successful breeder and exhibitor of Yorkshires and Norwich Canaries for the last ten years, and a reader of that valuable paper, Cage Birds, from the first, I should like to give my experience on the general breeding and management of same which, for my own part, I think much better than confining oneself to any one variety, as what I write will apply to all. My notes are written for the working man fancier.

The Room and Cages.

I have been very lucky in having a very large attic at my disposal; but in most cases any sort of a room, in fact, one of the sleeping rooms, is used. If it is possible, however, I advise the setting apart of a separate one, as I find that, no matter how clean and careful one is in the summer time, the egg food turns sour, and then there is a slight odour from same.

The next things to think about are the cages. Some prefer single, and some double breeders; but my choice is in favour of the latter, with a small wire slide between fitted with seed hopper, water glasses, egg drawers, and a small penny drinker which I always keep filled with grit. I am a believer in whitewash, and if the above-named cages are whitewashed inside and blacked outside, and arranged in a neat rack one above the other, they will be very pleasing to the eye, and will last a lifetime.

If anyone prefers the single breeder, a nice cheap cage can be made out of a Watson's soap box, which costs about twopence. One of these, with a rail at the bottom about two inches deep, a wire front (costing about fourpence), a little whitewash and black paint, will look equal to the best. A good flight can be made out of an ordinary egg box, which costs twopence, a wire front costing one shilling. Anyone who can use a hammer I advise to try their hand at cage-making, and I feel confident they will be satisfied with the result.

For the last few years I have used sawdust as a covering for the cage bottoms (pine preferred), and to my present thinking I shall never use anything else; it always looks clean, and never clogs the birds' feet. When using sand I found that this happened often, and another reason is that I find sawdust acts as good disinfectant. I can safely say I have never had any ill effect from the use of same.

The next move is to decide on the variety you intend going in for. Whichever breed you decide on, get as good birds as your pocket will allow. Better have a few good ones than a room full of wasters. Always remember when pairing, never to pair two birds having the same fault. Have size and colour on the cock side, and type and quality on the hen's side.

How to Feed.

Having got your birds, and put them in their new quarters, the next question is how to feed. I will give my method from the beginning of the year. I use best Spanish Canary seed as the staple food about twice a week, about a teaspoonful of mixed seed, viz., maw, rape, and hemp; and for the hens I add a little inga; the latter I find, if used as recommended, a grand thing for preventing egg-binding—a thing I have been troubled with very little all the time I have kept them. In February, to the above diet I add once a week half a teaspoonful of egg food, made in the following manner: One egg boiled for about ten minutes, to a good thick slice of household (stale) bread; add a little sugar and maw seed, put through the mill, and give in quantities as stated above. In March I give the mixed seed every other day, and the egg food twice a week; and if the stock is healthy you will find them in tip-top condition by the first week in April, which I consider early enough to commence breeding operations, and not then unless the birds are quite ready. When you see the following signs you cannot go far wrong. The hens will be seen flying from perch to perch continually calling to the cocks and flapping their wings, the cocks behaving in the same manner, and singing as if their throats would burst. This is a sure sign.

Place the hen in one compartment and the cock in the other, and when you see the cock feeding the hen through the wires withdraw the slide, and after they have been together for three days, you may hang in your nest pan and give a little nesting material for the birds to play with. I always cover my pans with felt, made out of any soft material. Some fanciers use the wood pans, but I prefer the porcelain ones (there being less harbour in these for the troublesome red mite), which I always hang on the back of the cage between the two perches, as I find the hen can get to feed the youngsters much better than when these are placed on the end of the cage.

After the birds have been paired up for about a week or eight days, we may begin to look for eggs. But do not be too anxious and disturb the birds too much, as many a hen has been spoiled through being interfered with too much. The best plan is to have your cages numbered, also have a box with divisions numbered to correspond with your cages, and place the eggs in as they are laid, substituting dummies until the evening, when the third egg is laid; then give the hen her own eggs, and if the cock is wanted for another hen give him about three days' rest before running him with No. 2 hen.

Incubation and Rearing.

Some hens are very nervous while sitting; the more so the young ones. To disturb them as little as possible, when sitting the eggs, I generally hang on the wires in front of nest pan a piece of cardboard about six inches square; it also comes in very useful for writing down when the eggs were set and when due to hatch, and so saves one's referring to the pedigree book every time—something, by the way, that every fancier should possess.

The time of incubation is thirteen or fourteen days. On the evening of the thirteenth day I give in the drawer a little egg food, made with about half the quantity of bread mentioned previously. When the youngsters get three days old I give a little hemp and rape, also a little green food (dandelion preferred). Some hens, when the young ones get about seven or eight days old (or sometimes earlier), fall off their feeding duties; but in this case never be without Epsom salts in your room; it is a simple remedy, but has been worth pounds to me. Give about as much of it as will cover a shilling in drinking water for two days, and I think it will "do the trick." It has made hens feed for me that, had they been in other breeders' rooms, would have been put down as "bad feeders." The same remedy I use, with the addition of a salt-water bath, for hens that "sweat" their young.

Weaning the Youngsters.

Provided the young ones are well fed, they will be ready for weaning any time after they get about three weeks old; but do not be in too big a hurry. So long as the hen does not pluck them they are all right for a day or two. The best plan is, when they leave the nest to place them in a nursery cage (a Yorkshire show cage makes a very good one), put a little egg food in same, and hang on the front of the breeding cage; return the cock to the hen, and between them they will feed the youngsters through the wires until they begin to do for themselves. When I see them picking nicely I transfer them to a flight cage, adding a little crushed seed to their bill of fare. I never give green food again until the moult, and no water until I see them cracking seed for themselves. If they are wanted for first feather shows, hang on the show cage regularly, and handle them as much as possible to get them steady; also give the bath occasionally.

A Cake for Colour-feeding.

I begin colour-feeding when the youngsters get about eight weeks old, and for this purpose I make a cake out of the following, which is very handy for any one who is away all day and has to feed his birds before going out to work in the morning: 8 eggs, ½lb. pure lard, 1½lb. castor sugar, 1½oz. baking powder, 1½oz. salt, 3½lb. flour, add a little milk, and make into a thin paste. Let the loaves stand for about four days, when they will be fit for use. To every pound of tasteless pepper I add 2oz. of hot Natal, 2oz. linseed meal, and 2oz. castor sugar to commence with. I add about 2oz. of the above to a 1lb. loaf, and as the birds take to same I gradually keep adding more, until I get it up to a ¼lb. to a loaf; this will be found quite strong enough for the old ones as well; these I generally commence feeding about the latter end of July. While the birds are moulting I use Canary as their staple food, and a little mixed seed twice a week. When they are about three parts through I give a little sulphate of iron in the drinking water, which acts as a colour fixitive. If the room is a very light one, cover the cages with some light material, or darken the window a little, as the light affects the colour a little. I prefer covering the cages with thin muslin, and then the birds will not need washing for the early shows. When the youngsters are nearly through give the bath regularly, which acts as a "conditioner," and tightens them up.

MANCHESTER & N.C.O.S.

Thirteenth annual members' show held January 7, Choriton Town Hall, All Saints. No doubt some of the members will remember when the annual open show was held in this hall; it is not big enough for the open show now, but it is admirably adapted for our members' shows, being large and roomy, well lighted, and free from draughts. Entries showed a slight increase on last year's, numbering 231, and quality was of the best. Mr. S. Cook gained most points in the open section, and also in the open Norwich classes; Mr. G. Pike most points open Yorks., and Mr. A. G. Robinson most points open Brit.; Mr. J. W. Jones most points amateur Yorks., Mr. H. Boothman Nor., Mr. H. W. Schofield Novice Yorks., Mr. C. E. Gaul Nor., Mr. A. G. Smith amateur and novice Brit. Dr. Twigg won special for best bird in amateur or novice classes with a splendid Crest (we hear it was the winner at Nottingham in fresh hands), Mr. A. Bain winning special for best novice Yorks. Altogether we think the show passed off very well, but a society like Manchester should have more entries than it has at its members' shows. Mr. A. G. Davis (Manchester) judged, and his awards were well received.

WAUNARLWYDD.

Second annual show held Shepherd's Hall, and judging from the amount of entries, this society will another year have to look for a much larger hall. Mr. Walters made a most excellent secretary, and by his tact and geniality did much to further the success of the fixture. He was ably supported by a worthy band of stewards. Our section was well filled, and another year it will pay the society to extend their classification. Goldfinches were excellent, as also were the A.O.S. British. Mr. J. Harrison judged.

DUNFERMLINE.

Annual show held 3rd and 4th January. The hall in which the exhibition was held is a most excellent place for such a purpose, being well lighted from the roof and free from draughts. The birds were nicely screened off at the end of the hall, and were very well staged. The entries this year showed a slight increase upon last year's, the only disappointing sections being the Border Fancies, which did not come up to expectations, despite the fact that the society had exteuded the number of classes this year. But what was lacking in numbers was made up for in quality. The Norwich section had a really good entry, and contained some very fine quality. The Crests and Crestbreds were a show in themselves, some real "eye openers" being staged; in fact, in point of quality they were equal to anything seen previously in this district. But pride of place must be awarded to the British bird section, both in numbers and quality. It contained some of the winners from the "Scottish National," and we understand the winning Goldfinch again took premier honours, and several others were well up in the prize list. The officials are a thorough set of fanciers, and the management was all that could be desired, being under the guidance of the following gentlemen: President, Lord Bruce; vice-president, Mr. T. Harrower; treasurer, Mr. H. Mowbray; and the secretary, Mr. Peter Dudgeon, the last-named being an ideal official, obliging and courteous to all. The judges were—for Scotch Fancies, Mr. D. Black (Govan); for Norwich, Mr. G. F. Adamson (Kilmarnock); for Border Fancies, Mr. H. Bennet (Kelso); for British birds, Mr. J. Brown (Edinburgh), and they got through the work in good time, their awards seeming to give general satisfaction.

WISHAW.

Wishaw O.S. 53rd annual show, held in the Factory Buildings (cage birds in Watson's Hall), Youngstreet, December 31. President, Mr. McLachlan; vice-president, Mr. J. McFarlane; treasurer, Mr. Nimmo; secretary, Mr. W. H. Livingstone; committee, Messrs. R. T. Sorbie, W. Irving, J. W. Brownlie, D. R. Nimmo, T. Mitchell, T. Watson, J Nimmo, J. Cole, J. Walker, C. Small, W. Barr, D. Aitken, J. Messer, G. Clarke, T. Paterson, T. Dick, T. Weir, and Allerdice, jun., H. Nimmo. Sec. Mr. J. Watson looked after the cage bird sections, for which there was a capital entry. Norwich and British birds were a superb lot, some splendid specimens being staged. Borders were also a fine lot, and all of them staged in the pink of condition. In the cage bird section some valuable specials were competed for, including the society's handsome cup for most points over the show. Messrs. Smart (Carmyle) and Young (Rutherglen) judged the cage birds, and their task was a hard one, so many first class birds being forward. However, their placings were well received, the only jarring note being a protest lodged by Mr. A. Malcolmson against an exhibitor's birds, which matter was ultimately settled by bird being disqualified. Secretary Watson and his stewards had everything in splendid order. Watson's Hall is the acme of perfection in every way for show purposes. There was a large turn-out of visitors, the hall being crowded during the afternoon.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

GRANITE CITY.

Granite City C.B.S. eighteenth annual show, held Y.W. Hall, John-st., Aberdeen, Dec. 31st., Jan. 2nd. The entries turned out a record for this society; 500 exhibits faced the two judges, who had a good morning's work. President Mr. W. Rae and Vice-president Mr. A. First annual show, held Billiard Hall, January 5th. The hall was neatly set out, and most comfortable for the exhibits. The stewards were untiring in their efforts to see to the comfort of the birds. Entries turned up very well, and from what we hear this Society intends next year to hold a show on a much larger scale, and they would be well advised to spend a little on advertisements in CAGE BIRDS. Mr. G. Lingard, the secretary, and his assistant, Mr. H. Powell, were very courteous officials, and had everything well in hand. Mr. W. Thomas made a very capable show manager, and was ably assisted by Messrs. H. Davies, Byard, Haddrell, F. Nicholas, etc. Members' cup was won by Mr. W. Thomas. Mr. G. Watkins judged.

EASTERN COUNTIES C.B.S.

Members' annual show held at the Ipswich Social Settlement. The venture, which was the first on so large a scale, proved a decided success in every way. Entries were numerous and quality unusually good. Sir Daniel Goddard opened the show, and was afterwards presented with a Canary in a brass cage. Mr. Simpson judged, and his awards appeared to give every satisfaction. Mr. W. Barritt, the sec., had all the arrangements well in hand, and is to be congratulated on the successful issue of the show.

HALTWHISTLE.

First annual show, held Jan. 7th, in the spacious Mechanics' Hall, in close proximity to the railway station. Cage birds had sixteen open classes provided for them, and these were staged on the raised platform at the end of the hall, away from the door, and made a very creditable display. Entries came up moderately well, totalling 140, which was scarcely up to the expectations of the committee, and three classes had unfortunately to be cancelled owing to lack of entries, viz., Norwich Yellow bens, Yorkshires Yellow, and the Softbill class. What was lacking in numbers, however, was amply made up for in the quality of the exhibits, some of the sections being really good; this was especially the case in the Norwich and British bird sections. In Mr. Thomas Hedley the society possesses a most energetic and hard-working secretary, and we always found him most courteous and obliging, and under his careful management everything passed off without the slightest hitch. The stewards for our section were Messrs. W. Pape and J. Yeoman, and these two fanciers had everything in tip-top order ready for the judge; they in turn were ably assisted by Messrs. A. Makepeace, J. H. Bowerbank, and J. Nicholson. In the British and Mule sections Mr. J. Maddison (Newcastle) had quite a field day, capturing all the firsts with his well known team, and also securing special for most points in show, while Mr. A. Makepeace secured the silver medal for most points in members'. Other special prize-winners were Messrs. G. Edwards, A. Holden, J. Armstrong, Jos. Graham, J. Ross, F. M. Dixon, and J. Maddison. Fine weather favoured the show, which was attended by a large number of people, our section coming in for a great deal of attention; in fact, during the latter part of the afternoon one had some difficulty in getting near the cage birds, so great was the crowd. We think the committee would be well advised to have the cage birds in a separate room another year, seeing they were so great an attraction. Mr. A. Brown judged, and his awards were well received.

LIVERPOOL (Amalgamated.)

Fifth annual show of the Liverpool and Dist. Societies was held in St. Thomas's Schools, Upper Frederick Street, on Jan. 2. The committee representative of each society was:—Messrs. J. H. Isaac, J. Hunt, W. Mallinson, W. Young, J. Richardson, J. Morton, C. Scrimshaw, A. Wilkinson, and T. James. These are all known experts in the art of show management, and they carried out the show ably. A very extended classification was provided, and some sections turned up well, notably Yorkshires, Yorkshire Greens, Hybrids, and British birds, and selling classes. Norwich and Borders were in very small evidence. Was it that most of these had gone on tour Scotland way, along with Yorkshire Greens? It is a pity this show clashes with the Scottish National, with the Green Club specials offered there for competition. We think this show could be made a greater success by holding it a week or fortnight sooner, and on a Saturday. Some 220 entries, however, turned up, and a few very select teams did duty for their respective owners. There was lively friendly rivalry between members of the various societies, making a joviai re-union of fanciers. Mr. F. Eccleston was show secretary, and he faithfully did his duty in a meritorious manner. Mr. W. R. Knowles judged Yorkshires and Mr. Chas. Houlton all the remaining classes, and their awards appeared approved of. Some very good special prizes added to the interest in competitions.

AWSWORTH.

First annual cage bird show held Jan. 6th and 7th, Assembly Rooms. The hall is a nice one for an exhibition of birds, and the light was good. The Secretary, Mr. J. R. Smith, is a capable official, and the arrangements were admirably carried out under his supervision. The birds were well looked after, and visitors to the show were pleased with the way in which everything was done. Mr. Fred Beardall (Huthwaite) judged.

QUEENSBURY.

Fourth annual open exhibition of the Queensbury C.B.S. held January 7th, Baptist School, under the rules of the Yorkshire Union and the patronages of the Y.C.C., C.M.Y.C.C., and the N.G.M.Y.C.C. The Society have a good room for their show, splendid light, lofty, and within a short distance of the trams, and the village is situated midway between Bradford and Halifax, and the show therefore should be well fed from two such important birdy centres. Mr. Wilton Jagger is an energetic and obliging secretary, and is assisted by Mr. A. Deighton, backed by a strong committee, including such well known fanciers as Messrs. Myers, Thomas, Gledhill, Brooke, Allen, Smith, Fowle, Briggs, Kirkbright, Heap and others. Mr. H. Sutcliffe officiated in the capacity of judge, his awards giving satisfaction generally.

BIRDCATCHERS.

I supply every known appliance required for successful catching, but before you buy one pennyworth from anywhere let me beg of you to send stamp for my full printed list of up-to-date appliances, with hints on net making, etc. It will be an eye-opener for you. All the professional catchers are supplied by me, and one letter given below proves that my goods are far aud away the best on the market. "Gedney, Holbeach, Lincs, Dec. 16th, 1910. Sir,—Please excuse delay in acknowledging receipt of come and go net. It is very cheap indeed, and unlike most cheap things it is very good. How you can do them at the money I cannot make out. You are easily first man for any sort of nets. Thanks for sending net with extra strong gearing; it's just how I wanted it. I shall send for the 20-yard pair of clap nets, and also several more single nets in a week or so.—Yours, Charlie Cubley." Please note this letter is from the well-known Lincolushire bird catcher, who catches more birds in one day than the average man sees in a lifetime. I offer £50 sterling to anyone who can prove this letter is not entirely unsolicited and genuine.

Silk's Champion Norwich

Do not buy cheap, so-called champion strains; take advice from a Norwich specialist. I keep no other variety. My aviaries have some of the most choice specimens of Norwich in the British Isles. Blood tells despite what you hear to the contrary. I have a genuine life experience in this most popular variety. Being, as all the cage bird Fancy knows, an expert on this variety, and one of the largest breeders (please note breeder), I can supply pairs or single birds; the finest value obtainable. Pairs from 20/- to 60/-; single birds from 10/- to 40/- each. I keep no 10/6 pairs, which are a waste of time and money. Fanciers requiring something which will breed really high-class specimens should send to the fountain-head. Refuse other so-called just as good strains. Kindly state what price you are prepared to pay, to save unnecessary correspondence. I will guarantee for satisfaction, or return cash in full; all birds on three days' approval.

I KNOW IT'S RUDE

to point, but I must point out to you the exceptionally good value I offer in Roller Canaries. I care not how good other advertisers say their birds are, I distinctly say mine are better, and to prove this I want you to have a Roller from elsewhere and a Leipzig Roller from me; test them side by side for a week, and if mine is not far the best return it, and I will refund every penny of your money. I am the only importer in England of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and now have a grand lot all in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, piccolo trills, soft roulades, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, harp, gong, and flute notes, etc., and guaranteed entirely free from any harsh or objectable notes whatever, price 7/6 and 8/6 each; special handmasters, which excel in the hollow and bass rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. I also have a magnificent collection of pure Seifert contest Rollers, in glorious song, price 15/-, 20/-, and 30/- each. These are of real Seifert blood, and have hollow, hollow bell, bass, schockel, and glucke notes to perfection. Leipzig Roller hens, 2/6 each, 4/- couple. Special Roller singing cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. For those who like loud noisy songsters, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks, in full, vigorous song, price 5/6 each; Hartz hens, 2/- each, 3/- couple. All sent on full week's trial at my risk, either on receipt of cash or "Cage Birds" deposit system, and money returned in full if every satisfaction not given. I care not how hard a man is to please, I guarantee to do so if humanly possible, as the following letters will show:—"8, South Eaton Place, London, Dec. 28.—Sir,—Rollers have turned out a treat, and want a lot of beating at price. I am very well satisfied. — Yours, A. Frederick." "1, Leicester-st., Phibsborough, Dublin, Dec. 26th.—Sir,—I am well pleased with Hartz cock you sent. It soon started singing. Thanks for satisfactory business.—Yours, Wm. Wynne." "2, Brachead Place, Saltcoats, Dec. 24th.—Sir, Leipzig Roller arrived safe, and I am well pleased. It sings lovely. Also the first one you sent is a grand bird. I would not sell it for double the amount.—Yours, J. Taylor." "245, Cowley-rd., Oxford, Dec. 23rd.—Sir,—The two Rollers arrived safely and I am very pleased with both. They are singing lovely, six o'clock in morning or twelve at night, they don't care, they sing just the same.—Yours, A. Toubs." "London rd., Alderney Edge, Dec. 22nd.—Sir, I thank you for Roller received; it gives every satisfaction. Thanking you very much for sending such a good bird.—Yours, G. Birkin." "Dowell-st., Honiton, Devon, Dec. 22nd.—Sir, Bird arrived safe and well. I am extremely obliged to you for sending such a beautiful songster. It sang soon after arrival, and has improved since.—Yours, A. Hussey." "60, Vivian-st., Tylorstown, Pontypridd, Dec. 22nd.—Sir,—Received Roller alright, and am very pleased with it. He is a champion singer; started soon as unpacked, and keeps on day and gaslight.—Yours, Isaac Davies." "12, White-st., Felling, Dec. 20th.—Sir,—Received Leipzig Roller carefully packed, and started singing, and is the sweetest Roller I ever heard at the price.—Yours, W. Ward." All birds are stamped on wing, "Hans Waber, Leipzig," and I am the only man in the trade that can supply you with them, so if you want a Roller that will sing 24 hours a day, send to me, and you may rely upon having one. Mr. Hanbury, of Llanelly, writes: "The bird you recently sent me has shown himself just as successful as the one I had from you last season. It won for me the proud honour to possess the best bird in the open champion class, with 49 entrances, and the only bird in the show which was given points for Koller. I can do with one more like it." Second Amateur class. T. E. Williams writes: "The birds you sold me have turned out little champions. Have shown one bird five times, and on each occasion was awarded highest honours." Amateurs Note this!

Novices Note this!

That no man breathing is in the position to supply you with THE VALUE that I am.

Note what a few more say (these are not last week's):—

THESE ARE SIMPLY SAMPLES OF MANY HUNDREDS, BUT THEY HONESTLY BEAR THE DATES, WHETHER LARGE OR SMALL QUANTITIES GIVEN, AND ARE NOT SEARCHED UP OLD LETTERS, AND CONSEQUENTLY MISLEADING. NO! I AM A BIT ABOVE SUCH MEAN TACTICS.

Did not Expect.

Vauxhall, London, Jan. 9th, 1911.—Bird arrived quite safe, and in fine condition. I am very pleased indeed with him. I did not expect to have a bird as large as that for the money. He is a beauty. Thanking you for prompt attention, and assuring you of my best support.—F. Morris to W. Rudd.

Good Value by Comparison.

"Lynton," 46, Buller-road, Thornton Heath, Surrey, Jan. 13th, 1911.—I received the bird safely. It is good value compared with other birds I have purchased from private fanciers. I wish to thank you for your consideration in despatching the bird as desired.—F. Tofts to W. Rudd.

A Pleasure to Have, etc.

19, Celluloid, Port Talbot, Glam., Jan. 13th, 1911. —I am writing to let you know I received the birds in fine condition. I am well pleased with them. It is a pleasure to have birds from such a man as you. Wishing you the success you so highly deserve.—J. Herbert to W. Rudd.

Price Low! Quality High!!

9, Hind-street, Birkenhead.—I received the birds on the 10th. I am well satisfied. They are worth double the money paid, which was low, and the quality is high. I showed them to a few friends, and they were surprised at the price. They are going to have some like them from you. They are perfect pictures.—J. Gartland to W. Rudd.

SPECIAL TO AMATEURS AND NOVICES!

Try my special Matched Pairs of prize-bred Norwich Plainheads at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-. Crested ditto, 15/-, 20/-, 25/- and 30/-. Yorkshires, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Border Fancies, 10/6, 12/6. These are the best value ever offered.

I also offer, suitable for above pairs, a good, serviceable breeding cage, fitted complete, price 3/6; ditto, fitted with sand trays, and sanitary utensils, 5/-.

Remember that I personally match these up myself, and exercise the same care as if they cost pounds, and just as I would do if I were pairing for myself. In fact, I always make it a rule to thoroughly satisfy in selection—then I am sure I shall satisfy my customer, i.e., if satisfaction is possible. Now, this may not sound like anything very particular, at the same time it is of the utmost importance to the purchaser, as everything depends upon this matching as to what results are likely to be; hence, you want it done by someone who not only knows what is right and what is wrong, but also someone who takes an interest in doing so, to get the only best results possible from the class of birds purchased.

SONGSTERS! SONGSTERS!

Moore to L. Dykes." "Joyce's Buildings, Dudley Colliery, Jan. 14th, 1911.—I received the birds all in grand trim. Cock started singing as soon as he arrived. I could not have been better satisfied. There is nothing like trusting to a proper gentleman for getting value for your money. —J. H. Hutchins to L. Dykes." "Littleworth, Hednesford, Jan. 15th, 1911.—Just a line to say I received the bird alright, which suits me very well and arrived in good time.—H. Rowley to L. Dykes." "Tarbert, Lochfyne, Jan. 15th, 1911.—A line to let you know I am well pleased with the Buff hen. She got fourth at the Palace Show of Scotland.—D. Blair to L. Dykes." "Bell Vue, Wrotham.—I received the Yorkshire safe, and pleased to tell you it will be a good advert. for you.—E. Burbridge to L. Dykes."

WOOD GREEN F.F.A.

Meeting held January 10, 40 members being present to hear a lecture on "Incubation," by Mr. S. Benyon, which proved highly instructive and interesting. A vote of thanks was accorded him. The pair show which was to have been held next month has been abandoned, as we cannot get a suitable place on that date. We intend holding instead a big table show at headquarters on the ordinary meeting night, February 14, for Canary and muling pairs, also British birds, the latter, of course, being single exhibits. Entry fee 6d. per cage, 2d. off each towards "exes." Prize money as usual. Specials will be given, and a lecture by Mr. Robson. Members absent from last meeting please note. Birds staged by 8 o'clock p.m. Will members please note that any proposed alteration of rules at our annual meeting in March must be notified one month beforehand.—T. Callegari, Assist. Sec.

BRADFORD EAST O.S.

Annual general meeting held Jan. 10, a good assembly of members being present. Mr. W. Blakey (vice-present) presided. Mr. J. Farrar gave the treasurer's report, showing the society to be in a sound financial position, with an increased balance on the year's working. This was passed unanimously. Mr. G. White (auditor) gave his report. This, too, was unanimously adopted, as was also the secretary's report later, in which he referred to the fact that in the society's accounts for the past year, two annual open shows were included; he felt compelled to congratulate the society, he said, on being able to show a small balance on both shows. I wish to refer especially to the help which my colleague, Mr. W. Cruise, has given during the past year, and to the whole of the officials for their self sacrificing labours. The election of officers for the ensuing year was proceeded with: Mr. E. Suddards (president), Messrs. L. Briggs, W. Blakey, C. Cowgill, G. R. Rushworth, J. Stobart, and G. White as (vice-presidents), Mr. J. Farrar (treasurer), Mr. W. Cruise (asst. secretary), Mr. A. Wilkinson and Mr. G. White (auditors), and H. Hill (secretary) were unanimously elected. The society is to be complimented on being able to retain the services of its officials year by year, and it appears evident the members believe in letting well alone for the time being. In Mr. E. Suddards the society has a capable leader, whose interest in its welfare never diminishes. We are one and all well pleased with his leadership, and hope he may lead us for many years to come. The officials are looking forward to a most successful year, and seeing they have promised their next annual show date to the Bradford Cinderella Club Committee, the society unanimously decided to give it every support, and also allow the Bradford East Rose Bowl to be competed for at this show. Any fancier wishing to join us should notify me as soon as possible.—H. Hill, Sec., 15, Settle Terrace, Thornton Lane, Bradford.

PRESTON O.S.

General meeting, held Jan. 12th, Tokio Cafe. Election of officers for 1911: Chairman, T. H. Dent; vice-chairman, A. Burrows; hon. auditors, N. Peak and R. Anderton; committee, Clemenson, Waring, Marsh, Mapp, Anderton, Brewer, Issott, and Watson; assistant sec. T. Leeming; sec. and treas., J. P. Leeming. It was greatly regretted that owing to pressure of business Mr. R. Taylor was compelled to give up the post of sec., and a very hearty vote of thanks was accorded him for the good work during the time he has been sec. It was resolved to hold annual members' show Jan. 20th, and Mr. P. Waring was appointed judge. Votes of thanks to the chairman and treasurer concluded the meeting.—J. P. Leeming, Sec.

Points scored: Knowles, 41; Nelson, 27; Weston, 21½; Hampson, 20½; Harper, 19; Dukes, 18; Emmett, 18; Walters, 15½; Leech, 11; Barnett, 9; Hardy, 6; and Mort, 6. A judging competition will be held on the Norwich section. Several new members have been proposed, so we are looking forward to a prosperous year, and, if possible, no open show.—G. M. Nelson, Hon. Sec.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

I am going to Westport, New Zealand, and all my stock and cages are advertised this week in CAGE BIRDS for sale, and must be cleared out before April next, writes Mr. W. H. Lindley (Wombwell).

All prize money won at the recent L.C.B.A. show, writes Mr. W. H. Mugford, the hon. secretary, has long since been paid. If anyone has been overlooked, I should be glad to hear of same at once.

The Sheffield O.S. have arranged to hold their open show on November 3rd and 4th, in the Cutlers' Hall, Sheffield, with Messrs. J. H. Roe and Chas. Houlton as judges, writes Mr. T. Bishop, hon. secretary of the Sheffield O.S.

The North Manchester C.B.S. have fixed the following dates for their shows, writes Mr. John Davey, the hon. secretary: Nest Feather Show, June 24th, 1911; Annual Show, November 11th, 1911; judges to be appointed later.

I have resigned my position as secretary of the Admiral Duncan (Nottingham) O.S., writes Mr. W. Healey. All further business in connection with the society should be addressed to the "Admiral Duncan," Coalpit-lane, Nottingham.

I have had a lot of applications for my winning Redstart (1st at the Scottish National, besides 14 other prizes, including 2nd at the L.C.B.A.); but I have sold it to Mr. Theodore Martin (Huddersfield), for five guineas.—Edmund Taylor (Glasgow).

I have just recently sent off another consignment of high-class Norwich Plainheads to a gentleman in Bombay, India. The birds were dispatched per the P. and O. steamer "Persia," which sailed from Tilbury Docks on January 5th.—W. Reid (Sunderland).

Will fanciers and secretaries please take note that I have been elected hon. secretary for the Cumnock and Dis. C.B.S., so that all communications regarding this society should in future be addressed to me, writes Mr. Joseph Nutt, 73, Highhouse, Auchinleck.

Haltwhistle show report credits Mr. A. Makepeace with winning silver medal for most points among members; this should have read Bowerbank and Yeoman. We also won in the British bird class members; report had "no name."—Bowerbank and Yeoman (Haltwhistle).

Would you kindly allow me on behalf of my wife and myself to thank in your next issue the writers of the letters of sympathy which we received respecting the death of our dear daughter, as they were too numerous to reply individually, writes Mr. A. W. Hart (Waltham Green).

Will all members who have not already done so kindly return all unsold tickets, also cash for those sold as we wish to get the accounts made up, and to present the balance-sheet at our next general meeting, write Messrs. Dibley and Meades, hon. secretaries of the Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S.

The annual dinner of the L.C.B.A. will be held in the Throne Room (capable of seating 250), at the Holborn Restaurant, on Monday, February 6th next, write Messrs. Tyson and Trower. As usual, a high-class entertainment will be provided, and tickets, 4s. each, can be had from us at 169, Sloane-street, S.W.

The Green Border classes at the forthcoming Palace Show are under the patronage of the Green Canary Association, writes Mr. Geo Green, the secretary, and are guaranteed by the secretary. It is hoped that fanciers will take full advantage of the liberal classification, this being the first time that the Greens have been catered for at the Palace.

I received the bound copy of "Cage-Bird Hybrids" safely, and must congratulate you on bringing before the Fancy such a magnificent work. The illustrations are such as will gladden the heart of any lover of birds, whilst the information contained in the book is of great value, both to the novice and expert.—T. Pope, hon. secretary, Western Counties (Plymouth) O.S.

I would just like to let you know with what interest I read your weekly CAGE BIRDS, and I wish it Many Happy Returns of the Day. Being a fancier in a small way, I always find something in it worth knowing concerning bird life. Also, CAGE BIRDS makes one love the birds more. By it "Dark days are made bright, and hearts are made light." So please accept my good wishes.—William Feddon (Wortley).

The secretary of the North London C.B.A. (Mr. R. P. Harper) and his fellow officials, are to be congratulated on the excellent credit balance (£9 2s. 7d.) shown on the balance-sheet for the year ended December, 1910. This amount is £2 15s. in advance of the carry-forward from the previous year's accounts. Other assets (cups, badges, etc.), are valued at over £14.

I have been requested by Mr. Malcolmson to write and let you know that through the advertisement in CAGE BIRDS his stock was cleared out in one week, and at good prices; his noted light Goldie Mule "Prince Charlie," went to Mr. C. Pearce, High-street, Abingdon-on-Thames, for double figures; not as stated by "Scotch Fancier," in your last issue.—T. Drysdale (Glasgow).

OBITUARY.

Mr. A. NELSON (Carlisle).

I am sorry to inform you, writes Mr. W. H. Wright, Hon Sec. of the Carlisle and Dis. C.B.S., of the death of one of our most valuable members—Mr. Andrew Nelson. He was a great lover of a good Yorkshire and a true fancier. He was always ready to give help in any time of need, which he always gave with a good heart, and he was to be admired for his unassuming character. The sympathy of all our members and fanciers who knew him goes out to his daughter and sons in their sad bereavement.

Mr. JAMES REID (Kilmarnock).

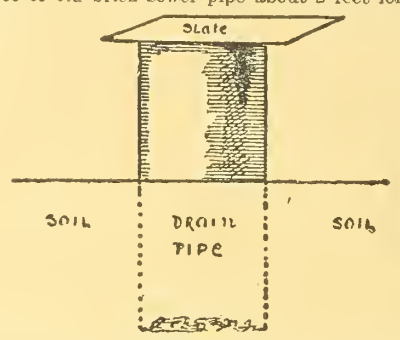
On behalf of the members of the Kilmarnock C.B.F.C., writes Mr. R. McCaw, the secretary, allow me to express our sympathy with the widow and family of our late member, Mr. James Reid, who passed away suddenly on January 15th. Mr. Reid was practically one of the founders, and was one of the hardest workers for upwards of 30 years. We all tender Mrs. Reid and family our most sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

Judge of our surprise upon opening the grand Birthday Number of CAGE BIRDS to find our unflighted clear yellow cock given a place of honour in your popular journal. The bird was bred by us, and up to the present time has won eight 1sts, one 2nd, and twelve special prizes, and he has had to compete with old birds where classes have not been provided for unflighted birds. We also thank your artist, Mr. Norman, for such a life-like portrait.—Lovegrove and Lovegrove (Henley-on-Thames).

R. A. Newley, of 24, Stockwell Green, S.W., is entrusted with the disposal of stock of three well-known breeders of Norwich Plainheads, consisting of Buffs, Yellows, Clears, and Variegated ditto, prices 20s., 30s., and 40s. a pair, or pairs can be separated. All birds are from winners, and carry good blood, and those commencing a stud or wishing to infuse new blood should write at once stating requirements. Also some good songsters, 8s. 6d. and 10s. 6d. each. Send particulars and price asked to 24, Stockwell-green, London, S.W.—Advt.

The Crystal Palace Bird Show, February 3rd to 7th, is held by the L.P.O.S., under the full support and patronage of the Yorkshire Canary Club, Green Canary Association, Crested Canary Club, Belgian Canary Association, Cinnamon Marked Yorkshire Club, Green Marked Yorkshire Club, Southern Norwich Club, Foreign Bird Club, N. British Bird and Mule Club, and Cinnamon Canary Club. The show is open to all. The full classification, also entry form is published in the show advertisement columns of this issue, as the schedules are now out of print. Enter to-day. Entries close Saturday, January 21st.—Advt.

The illustrated idea of mine in the Christmas Number is not the first of mine which you have thought good enough to use, but it is the first I have had appear in a double number, which I look upon as an extra honour. I may as well say that, although I did not show any of my birds last year, I am still as keen as ever, only I have not been getting home from business till after 10 o'clock at night for months. But all being well I shall try to support some of the shows this next season, with, I think, a good chance of helping myself to a few prizes at the same time.—Arthur M. Rees (East Dulwich).



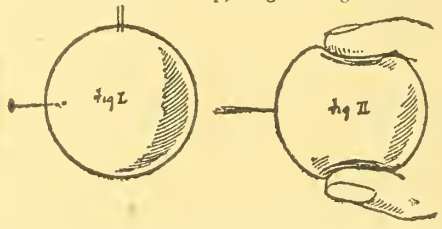
Illustrated Ideas

No. 476.

A Receptacle for Snails, etc.

Sent by Mr. S. T. Perrin, 26, Garfield Street, Kettering.

Enclosed sketch is of a useful article for keepers of Softbills. All that is required is a piece of old brick sewer pipe about 2 feet long.



Half of this should be embedded in a damp soil to make a kind of pit, as per illustration. This makes a fine place for breeding or storing snails, etc. The bottom should be covered with dead leaves. A slate on the top makes a good covering.—S. T. Perrin.

No. 477.

An Easily-made Bird Spray.

Sent by Mr. L. Clifford, Lower Tuffley, near Gloucester.

I enclose a sketch of what I consider a cheap and easily made bird spray. First get a common india-rubber ball (costing about 3d.), and get a borer or large round nail red-hot, and burn a hole in the top, large enough to allow the ball to be filled with water; then get a hat-pin and bore a small hole in the side. Then by filling it, and placing the thumb over the large hole and pressing it, a very fine spray of water will be seen to come out, going a distance of from three to four feet, thus answering the purpose admirably.—L. Clifford.

The Norwich Plainhead Club.

Will those members of the Norwich Plainhead Club who have not yet paid their subscriptions for 1910, kindly let me have same at once, or I shall be reluctantly compelled to strike their names off the list, as per rule?—Jno. Hopkins, Hon. Sec.

A Mule Sensation.

A great sensation was created at Bathgate Show, writes our representative, when it became known that the judge, Mr. McCaw (Kilmarnock) had passed the noted clear yellow Linnet Mule belonging to Messrs. Duncan and Logan (Coldstream) as being a Canary. Mr. McCaw said he failed to trace the Linnet parentage in the bird which, we may say, has won the highest honours at the leading English and Scottish shows for several seasons past.

Linnet Club for Seaham Harbour.

A meeting of Linnet fanciers took place on January 7th, at Mr. Lewis's ("Londonderry Arms Hotel") for the purpose of forming a Linnet club. I am glad to say that we enrolled fourteen members, all paid. We have included Murton, Dawdon, and Seaham Colliery, and we invite intending members to join us at our next meeting, at the above-named hotel, at 7 o'clock on January 21st. I hope now that we have made a start, we will go a step further, and form a Canary club.—John Watson, secretary, 39, Stavodale-street, Dawdon.

Poor Polly!

A tradesman in the neighbourhood of Birmingham, who for years has been yearning to possess a good talking Parrot, has just discovered, to his cost (says the "Birmingham Daily Mail"), that however innocent one's ambitions may be in themselves, the realisation of them may be attended by serious consequences. He bought a bird, and it turned out a first-class talker. Like most Parrots, it had its pet phrases and exclamations, one of which was "It's in the cellar, mother." This, I may explain, is a remark which the tradesman has been in the habit of using playfully to his wife, as the outcome of a domestic incident into which I need not enter. Well, one day recently an inspector of weights and measures called at the shop and asked to be allowed to test the scales and weights. Whether or no he had heard anything to excite his suspicion I cannot say, but having applied the test and found the weights to be correct, the official asked whether he had any others. The reply was a blunt "No." Just at that moment the Parrot in the sitting-room adjoining yelled out, "It's in the cellar, mother!" and the inspector, catching the word "cellar," opened the door close at hand, and disclosed to view a second set of weights, which proved on examination to be against the purchaser. The tradesman was prosecuted and fined.

SPALDING.

Last year the C.B. section of Spalding F.A. show was a complete failure, and it is pleasing to know that though the show resulted in a deficit of £25, all the prize money was paid within a week, and, undaunted by last year's failure, the committee gave fanciers another chance and their confidence was not misplaced, as the entry came up well, with splendid quality in the Canary classes, although only one of the three British classes filled. Messrs. Mouncy, Elviss, and Anton, made most excellent secretaries, and all the arrangements worked well under their direction, the committee one and all doing their level best to make things go smoothly. Amongst those who were prominent in the work were Messrs. H. Facer, W. R. Murrell, A. J. Auton, W. Thimbleby, and A. G. Auton. Mr. C. A. House judged.

The Nightingale at Home and in Captivity.

A day or two later I found that "No. 3" had shifted to a new location, which he was vigorously contesting with a new arrival; there was much skirmishing, loud cries of "chack, chack," and shrill notes which sounded very like swear words. When "No. 3" found a mate the situation became still more involved, and fighting was almost continuous. Poor "No. 4" was born under an unlucky star; he arrived late, failed to find a partner, and something—never mind what—happened to him.

The Nest of the Nightingale.

Searching for a Nightingale's nest before the eggs are hatched, in such a locality as I have described, is much like looking for a needle in a bundle of hay. Some years ago I spent a whole day in the attempt with an assistant. We waded through water, covered ourselves with black mud, tore our clothes in the brambles, and dripped with perspiration and all in vain. This is quite the wrong way to go about it. By making so much noise you put the sitting bird off the nest long before you get close to the latter. The best way is to mark down a pair of birds breeding in a spot where the undergrowth is not too extensive, and you have a fair chance of success. Look the place over carefully, and note if there is a dry bank which faces south. If so, walk quietly along the top of the bank and push a long stick very gently into the thickest places, especially where there are dead oak leaves and growing nettles. Do not trouble to look into bushes, but keep your eyes fixed on the ground. When the sitting bird flies from the nest mark the exact place she rises from. It was in this way that I found "No. 3's" nest on the 24th May, after less than half an hour's search (see photo). It was cleverly hidden under a bramble bush, deeply bedded in oak leaves, and neatly lined with root fibres.

The situation of the nest varies a good deal in different countries. I was shown a nest in a garden at Mentone, in the South of France. It was a typical Riviera garden—some closely mown grass plots, a few clumps of bamboos, and many aloes, palms, and orange trees, but no cover whatever nor anything resembling a hedge. The nest was in the box border of one of the paths, which was less than a foot high, barely thick enough to contain the nest, and constantly brushed by the feet of passers-by.

On the 11th June "No. 3's" nest contained five young, which were already showing greyish feathers on their wings, though their heads were still covered with black down. The hen bird came boldly up to within a couple of yards of me. The attachment of the Nightingale to its young was noted as long ago as the days of Virgil.

On the 12th I came across "No. 2" and his better-half feeding a fine brood which they had escorted to a very safe spot—a clump of bushes entirely surrounded by water. On the 17th "No. 3's" five youngsters flew, and this was the last visit I paid to "Nightingale-land."

The Song of the Nightingale.

We all know the paragraph in the local paper which describes how crowds of people have been flocking to hear the Nightingale sing in such and such a place. We also know that "Nightingale," how it generally proves to be a Wood-lark or a Thrush. I can never understand how these mistakes occur. There is only one British bird which sings "jug, jug, jug," and, if you hear that tour, you may be quite sure that you have heard the veritable Philomel. On the other hand, if, after listening some time, you do not hear this phrase you may be equally sure that the songster is not Philomel.

Much has been written about Philomel's habit of singing at night, but I have not yet seen any explanation that quite goes to the root of the matter. In a state of liberty we may note that he sings a little in the morning, more in the afternoon, and most of all at night.

Now, if we study the habits of a caged Nightingale, we shall remark that the bird is a little dull in the morning, more lively in the afternoon, and very lively in the evening, after the lamps are lighted. I have a Sprosser now in my sitting-room which refuses to take any exercise in the day-time, but every evening, although his cage is partly covered up, may be heard shuffling about, bathing, feeding, and apparently enjoying life. Here it seems to me we have the explanation of the matter: Philomel sings when he is liveliest. Though it may sound a bold thing to say, I am convinced that the wild Nightingale does not sleep at all during the breeding season. Competition is the very essence and keynote of the Nightingale's song, and for this reason I cannot help smiling when people tell me that the bird sings at night because he dislikes the competition of other birds. A caged Nightingale will generally sing only in the daytime, chiefly, I think, because he is usually kept totally in the dark by night, and has no occupation to stir him up.

It is curious that many writers have dwelt upon the sadness of Philomel's song, and mediaeval poets have even gone so far as to tell us that the bird sings with a thorn piercing its breast. Thus Fletcher speaks of:

"The bird forlorn,
"That singeth with her breast against a thorn."

To my mind there is only one tone in the song which is really sad and that is the "tee, tee, tee," which is sung with a singularly lingering and melting pathos.

YORKSHIRE SOCIETIES' PRIZE DISTRIBUTION AND DINNER.

First committee meeting to make the necessary arrangements for this great event, was held at the Market Tavern, Godwin Street, Bradford, January 12. Mr. D. Sunderland was unanimously elected chairman of the committee, with H. Hill as secretary. The statement of accounts for the last prize distribution and dinner was presented and unanimously adopted. Decided, to hold the event on Saturday, March 11, at the Market Tavern, Bradford, this being the most suitable place that could be found by the committee, and seeing that several improvements have been made since the last dinner, it is hoped these will be the means of giving more comfort to the visitors. The price for dinner was arranged as last year, namely, 1s. 6d. per head, and it is desirous that all who wish to attend should give their names to the secretary or members of the committee in good time, so that all arrangements can be satisfactorily carried out. The committee decided to engage musical talent, and to arrange a social evening in conjunction with the prize distribution; and excellent talent will be provided, thereby ensuring a most successful event. The time for the dinner was fixed for 4 o'clock prompt, and the social evening will commence at 6 o'clock. Will all who desire to attend please make a note? It was decided that the secretaries of the specialist clubs should attend at 2.30 p.m. to arrange prizes in proper order. Another recommendation which was unanimously carried, and which it was hoped all the specialist club secretaries would fall into line with, was that all money specials or money prizes be distributed by them apart from this meeting in order that much valuable time may thus be saved. The order of presentation was balloted for, and resulted as follows: 1st, Yorkshire Union of C.B.S.; 2nd, National Green Marked Y.C.C.; 3rd, CAGE BIRDS prizes; 4th, Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C.; 5th, Open Norwich Plainhead Club; 6th, Yorks County British Bird and Mule Club; 7th, Yorkshire Canary Club. Mr. D. Sunderland was again unanimously elected chairman for the dinner and prize distribution, and the committee decided to issue invitations to the following as guests for the event: Mr. and Mrs. Comyns Lewer (London), Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ramsden (London), Mr. and Mrs. F. Carl (London), Mr. J. Bladon and Mr. G. W. F. Lythgoe, of the Cage Bird Union (Manchester), and Mr. R. L. Crisp, and Mr. P. Adamthwaite, of the London Federation of C.B.S. (London). The committee decided to ask the Yorkshire Union to renew their grant of last year towards defraying the expenses. Expressions of regret were tendered that illness prevented Mr. Thompson Ogden and Mr. H. H. Towers from attending, and the secretary was instructed to write conveying to them the wishes of the prize distribution committee for their speedy recovery. This closed the business, and the chairman thanked the committee for their attendance.

A Good Custom.

In Norway the farmers save some of the corn from the Autumn harvest, and form it into a sheaf, which is put upon a pole, and hoisted above the snow in the depth of winter for the birds to feed upon. The idea is a good one, and might be copied in this country during severe weather.

How I Breed My Yorkshire Canaries.

ALBERT BURTENSHAW (Worthing).

I hope this essay on the Yorkshire Canary will give some of the younger breeders some idea of what is wanted, also what there is to do, if they wish to be in the prize list should they exhibit Yorkshire Canaries. The exhibition of Yorkshires is to-day a fine art, and nothing should be wanting in the would-be successful exhibitor.

The Cages.

The first thing and most important of all to consider is the cage. There are many different sizes and patterns, but there is nothing I like better than cage making. There is something about it that makes you the more interested in your Fancy. My ideal cage for a breeder is one that is 24ins. long, 15ins. high, and 12ins. wide, with a movable wire front; this makes a nice roomy and suitable cage. It should possess a good sand tray, a drawer (not less than one inch deep at front), with a half-inch bead round the inner edge, so that it will hold a good supply of sand. One perch should run from end to end, in front of the water and seed; this should be half-inch square, with the top edge just rounded off; also give two or three similar perches from back to front arranged to suit the position of the nest pan; the latter is best, in my way of thinking, when it comes half-way above the perch. The cage should be painted, as it can then be easily washed out when necessary; the cage should on no account be neglected when dirty.

Avoid birds having broad shoulders, flat skulls, or that are short on legs, also that have large beaks. These are faults that you cannot easily get rid of. The cock bird I like to breed from is a bird two years old, one that is a bit on the strong side, well up on his legs, having a nice oval head, with a small beak. A most important thing is the beak. I see that the bird is good in wing carriage and tail, not less than 6½ inches in length, of fine feather, standing on pair of nice legs, a good distance apart when standing, showing plenty daylight through them. Also the bird must be nicely cleaned out behind to top of tail.

The hen should be two years old; my experience teaches me that this is best. She must be "all there," as the hen is the one we look to for quality. Therefore she must be as true to type as possible. The hen must have a small head, neat and oval on top, with a small beak, nice length, and good wing carriage. The body should be nicely rounded, and the build slim and upstanding. The bird should possess close and fine feather and should stand well upright on a good pair of legs. Such stock birds will give you a good start, and they should breed and give you nice results.

Breeding for Colour.

Colour is not so important as in other varieties, but it must not be forgotten that if you keep breeding from yellow and buff you will soon have your birds what is known as mealy in colour—something, I should say, between a pale yellow and buff.

I am in favour of green blood—a heavily-marked (grass green) yellow—and introduce this on the hen side. Should you from this mating get any clear birds, they are sure to be of a good colour, but as a rule they are a little coarse in feather, and to improve this I introduce cinnamon blood. Cinnamon ticked birds improve the quality of feather, and produce young which always hold their own when colour fed.

"Where am I to get stock birds?" is a question often asked. My advice to those who can do so is, breed your own. It is far the best and safest plan to adopt, which I know from experience. The next best thing to do is to buy from a breeder of long standing—a man who breeds all the birds he exhibits and wins with, not a man of one year's standing, and who buys the prize birds that he wins with. Buy from a real breeder. State the price you are prepared to pay, and he will know just what to send you. But do not expect a pair of birds for a few shillings, or you are sure to be disappointed. Good stock birds will cost from 20s. to 60s. per pair. Have them on approval, and if you are not able to tell a good bird from a waster, get some fancier who can to do it for you. This is where a beginner in the Fancy goes astray, as the saying is, because he cannot select his stock birds; and this is just where he wants help.

Breeding the Birds.

We will assume that you have cage and stock pairs according to the depth of your pocket, and are ready to pair the latter up. I like to put one or two pairs together about February 14, if it should be mild; but as a rule it is a case of "more haste less speed," so to be safe it is much better to wait till well on in March before pairing the birds up.

MR. W. ADAMS (Rochdale).
With some of the trophies his Lancashire Canaries have won at the leading shows.

Give them the usual egg food with a little maw seed sprinkled over it every other day, and a little niger seed two or three times a week until the hen has laid her first egg; then do not give her any more of the niger seed. When the hen has laid her third egg I take the cock away and leave the hen to hatch. The eggs are removed each morning as laid, and a dummy egg placed in the nest. When the third is laid, in the evening I put all of them back into the nest again, and give them a good sprinkling of Keatings insect powder.

I just shade the hen from sight with a piece of paper, while she is sitting, also until the young are five days old; then take it from the cage front. Keep the hen, when she has hatched her young, well supplied with fresh egg-food, good Canary seed, hemp, and rape, and also plenty of sharp sea-sand, if you can get it. A piece of old brick mortar stuck between the wires is valuable during the breeding season.

When the young are five days old I supply them with plenty of chick-weed, which is well ripe and well seeded. I think this is the best green food to give a hen when she is rearing her young. When the young are sixteen or seventeen days old I take them out of the breeding cage for safety, and put them in a small cage to hang on the front of the breeding cage. The door of the latter should be left open. Use a Yorkshire show cage, and slip a piece of cardboard through the wires at the bottom, about two inches high, so that it keeps the hen from pecking out the breast feathers and tails of her progeny when she is thinking of going to nest again. The young birds hold their heads over the top of the cardboard to be fed, and are safe. I let them remain in the "nursery" until they can feed themselves, when they are removed to larger cages. Feed them with egg-food, crushed hemp, and Canary, but no green food.

The Stud Book.

It is necessary that you should keep a stud register and not trust too much to your head. You are sure in time to get in a tangle with your stock. When I remove the young from their parents, I use the Canary marking rings, and make an entry of each bird in a stud book—noting down the number, also what pair it was bred from. You do not, at this point, want to lose the run of how your birds are bred. The information is most useful when you want to pair your stock up the following year, or to know what they have done when the breeding season is over. In several other little ways also it is useful to ring the birds.

I might say that I do not remove any of my rings from the stock birds, and they do not do any harm to either eggs or young.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Paraffin and Red-mite.

Anxious Enquirer.—There seems to be a dangerous impression abroad concerning the use of paraffin for the destruction of red mites. When used freely on the cages during a general overhaul, when the birds are not in them, or in a sparing way to touch the joints of doors, ends of perches, etc., whilst the birds are in them, it is a very good mite destroyer, but to apply it freely to the skin of a bird, or to spray a bird with it, is positive cruelty, and the only wonder is, in the case of the bird you have, that it survived the operation—or rather recovered from the effects of it. Having so far recovered, there is no reason at all why it should not breed successfully if it becomes sufficiently healthy and active to wish to breed. Your feeding, however, is very faulty. Give a staple of plain Canary only. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape. On the alternate days give once a week a small teaspoonful of egg food, or an equivalent amount of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar, and one other day each week similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet. Stop all other foods, and cease giving drugs in water as a practice. As regards preparing for breeding, you should get the handbook, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d., post free, from this office, or get the early parts of "Our Canaries," where you will find the fullest details set forth, which space prevents giving in this column.

Waxwing (E. W.).—Your query should not have been marked "Canary." It caused it to be misent to me, instead of the proper authority, thus causing delay. See Mr. Weston's replies—possibly next week.

To Obtain Cinnamon Borders (Rax).—You must mate the hen in question to a buff cinnamon cock, a self for preference, to attain your object of breeding cinnamons. Certainly, a buff green cock with no cinnamon blood will not do at all. On the contrary, it would wholly defeat the object you have in view.

Still Moulting (J. E. A.).—See reply to "Torromont," and treat your bird as there advised. Also examine cage carefully for presence of red mites, and if any are found thoroughly overhaul the cage and eradicate them. If any panting continues after the first fortnight's treatment, give it the medicine advised to "E. R." for another week or fortnight, as may seem necessary.

Not Answered. A query concerning an aviary and the best time to obtain fresh birds for stock which should have been answered in our last issue was, I regret, accidentally mislaid. The full details of query I have forgotten. If the writer will kindly repeat it, I will do my best to rectify the error. Meantime, I may say, the purchase of fresh stock should now be concluded as early as is convenient.

Not Finished Moulting (Torromont).—Your best plan is to move the bird at once to a fairly warm room in order to get the moult re-started and complete as early as you can. See it is in no cold draughts, and place a light cover over its cage. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with a small pinch of maw seed. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw separately, and in the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky, as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny piece, and a few shreds of saffron. At the end of the fortnight the moult should be well started, and then you may dispense with this drug treatment; stop the sponge cake, and give instead a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with cayenne and soft sugar, and trust to this and the warmth to keep the moult going until completed. The bird may be fit for breeding by April, but do not mate him until a month or so after moult is finished.

Cost of Roller (V.A.G.).—A Seifort-trained bird would undoubtedly give you most satisfaction. You could get a very nice performer for 10s., but "one that would sing all the different notes," if by that you mean one of the highest trained birds, it would certainly run to double that amount at least.

Breeding in Aviary (W. E. Sturley).—See reply to "E.B., Oldham," which applies equally to your case. You may put in one cock as you suggest, but not more. Put in three or four nesting sites. The young 4½ months is certainly very young for breeding, and I would not advise you to start with her before the first week in April at the earliest; and to take not more than two nests from her this year in any case.

A Prolific Hen (F. T., Margate).—There are exceptional instances in which this frequent laying does not seem to have much, if any, bad effect. Your hen may be one of these exceptions, but on the other hand you must not be surprised if you find her reproductive powers wane when they should in the normal order of things come into activity. Limit her diet solely to canary seed, with a little green food when obtainable, or ripe fruit for the next month, and add a pinch of Epsom salts to the drinking water three times a week for a fortnight. You should also remove her, if possible, quite out of sight and ear-shot of all males.

Continuous Laying (Canlin).—In your case, if the hen is fairly young, I should say the continued laying will have little or no bad effect, and you may reasonably expect average good results from her next season. It would, however, be a wise precaution to endeavour to have a pair or two of feeders available in case their services were required, as some of these free-laying hens produce eggs too rapidly for them to hatch and rear them all themselves. You may with advantage treat her as advised to "F. T., Margate," for a week or two if she shows signs of continuing laying, and keep her out of sight and hearing of males until near the time you wish to mate her. Then only allow her to see and hear the cock you mate her to, if possible.

Bird Dying and Seed Sample (R. Clements).—I would still advise you to get a post-mortem if another bird dies to clear up matters, although the further details you now send point in the direction of an apoplectic seizure, which may be wholly due to excessive excitement; on the other hand, it may just as likely be of bacterial origin. Do not introduce any fresh birds until you have satisfied yourself this trouble is not contagious. Continue the treatment advised in last reply. Give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. The sample of seed sent consists solely of canary, summer rape, and hemp. The two former are very fair all-round seeds, but the hemp is thoroughly bad and unfit for use. Also, if the hemp were of good quality, there is too much of it, and it is always best to give it separately, and not mix it with the staple diet, which causes far too much waste.

Bald Headed, etc. (E. H.).—I cannot tell what may be the cause of the baldness without some idea as to how the birds are fed and treated generally, and whether old or young birds. But you may rest assured it is not "married life." It is far more likely to be the result of advancing age, mismanagement, or the effect of red mites. Examine the cages carefully for this pest, and if any are found thoroughly eradicate them without delay. You will not be able to make much improvement now, I fear, as treatment should have coincided with the normal moulting season, but you should keep them in a fairly comfortable place, free from all cold draughts, and smear the bare places three times a week for a month with carbolised vaseline. Feed and treat as advised to "F. T., Margate," to keep them from getting too forward, and afterwards treat generally as described in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which you say you have. You will also see from this book that it is yet much too early to mate them.

Straining (E. R.).—The effect is due to constipation. Limit diet to a mixture of three parts canary and one part summer rape for a fortnight, and give a little groundsel, chickweed, or watercress daily, if these can be obtained in good condition. Otherwise give him a grape, broken open, two or three times a week, until actions are normal. For the first two days you may also add to his drinking water six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a small pinch of Epsom salts. To remove the rattle in the voice follow up the rhubarb and salts with twenty drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills and glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a week. The most important point, however, is to remove the cause, which is doubtless the bird's position in the window. You should move him at once to a more comfortable and less fluctuating place further in the room, and quite out of cold draughts.

Hen Mopy (E.V.C.D.).—Feed on a staple of plain canary only. Every second day give a half teaspoonful of summer rape, and on each alternate day for a week give a morsel of bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar. Twice a week give a morsel of banana, or boiled carrot. Limit the diet to this for a month, of course omitting the bread and milk after the first week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny piece every second day for a week, and during the following week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

Bad Plumage and Paraffin (Mancestrian).—See reply under "Paraffin and Red Mites." Even with the addition of olive oil this article is not suited for application to the skin of small birds. I doubt whether the hen will be of any further use. See cage is quite free from red mites; keep it out of reach of draughts, and in a comfortable, but not over-heated, temperature. Allow it to bathe freely in mild weather. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape mixed together. Three times a week for a month give a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, dusted lightly with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed; twice a week on other days give a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle and millet, and twice a week a morsel of raw carrot or banana. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, then miss a week, and repeat it again for another week. Smear the bare places slightly with Lanocylin if available, otherwise with carbolised vaseline.

Feeding Norwich (Working Lad).—At this season no particular feeding should be necessary to make a healthy cock Canary sing out at his best. For a staple diet give plain Canary only. Every second day give separately half a teaspoonful of summer rape; and on alternate days twice each week give a similar quantity of a mixture of hemp, inga, and teazle, and once a week a small teaspoonful of egg food, crushed sponge cake, or bread and milk—one or the other, but not all of them. A little green food when available in fit condition for use, or at other times a scrap of sweet fruit, two or three times a week, may also be given. About the beginning of March begin to give a little egg food twice a week, and first one and later on two crisp young leaves of dandelion daily. This should be all that is necessary to bring it into good breeding condition.

The Moaning (F.J.K.).—You ask how to breed from "one cock and hens," by which I conclude you inadvertently omitted a word and want to know how to manage running one cock with two hens. Here you are. Put up each hen separately in a breeding cage. Mate the cock with the one that is most forward when ready, and when she has gone to nest, laid, and commenced to sit, remove him, and mate with hen No. 2, leaving No. 1 to batch and rear the young by herself. When No. 2 has gone to nest and commenced sitting, remove the cock, and keep him in a cage by himself until hen No. 1 is again ready for him for the second round, when you will repeat the same method again with both hens. As this is your first season, you would do well to get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," from our manager, 7d., post free, or take up the parts of "Our Canaries" already issued, which will keep you from going wrong.

Rollers and Temperature (Bower).—You are probably treating the Rollers a little too liberally, and if they are in no draught the variations in heat you name are certainly the cause of the continued moulting. See that they are quite free from draughts, and keep them well away from the fire when one is being kept going, so that they will be as little as possible affected by the fluctuations. In addition to the staple diet give a small teaspoonful of crushed stale sponge cake, with four drops of sherry, and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of hemp and a morsel of banana. In the drinking water give 6 drops syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day until the moulting is stopped. They will not come in full song until the moult is quite over.

Breeding in Aviary (E. B., Oldham).—Six hens and two cocks will be quite sufficient to breed with in your aviary, and for this number you should hang about in different places nine or ten nesting receptacles. The small wicker German travelling cages, with the short bars removed, make excellent nesting sites for this kind of work. It is no great rarity for Canaries breeding under these conditions to make more or less a hash of things, but it is not invariably the case by any means, and sometimes most excellent results are obtained, in point of numbers. If you wish to keep in the Finch, why not add another and try for mules only? Ho, or they, would be far more reliable in this aviary than in a cage. But I would not advise you to try for both mules and Canaries. You would probably be led into thinking your clear or ticked Canaries were a fine galaxy of valuable mules.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Treatment of Virginian Cardinal.

J. Reed.—Supply two seed mixtures in separate tins—one to consist of equal parts of Canary and white millet seeds, and the other of equal parts of hemp, oats, paddy, rice, and sunflower seeds. In addition, supply soft food (several good ones are advertised in our columns), ripe fruit liberally, and about a dozen mealworms per diem. Also, when available, a leaf of tender lettuce. If you prefer to mix your own soft food, equal parts of ants' "eggs," crushed Osborne biscuit, and crumbled sponge cake, made crumbly moist with boiling water, will about meet the case. As regards fruit, apple, pear, grapes, banana, and all English fruit in season may be given. As it is a new purchase and probably newly imported, a mild laxative occasionally will be helpful, nothing excels Dinneford's magnesia, 3 parts water to one of magnesia—the voiding should not be allowed to remain watery loose, however. A course of Parrish's Chemical Food will help to tone it up afterwards.

Aviary Details (A. S. P.).—Your aviary, even with the extension, is but small; the extension will certainly greatly add to its usefulness. With an aviary of this size it would be a great gain to have some kind of hinged shutters (either a combination of wood, felt and glass, or merely wood and glass), to enclose the open flight during winter's nights and the worst of its days. Do not overcrowd. It will comfortably accommodate a score to two dozen small foreign Finches and Waxbills, or twelve to fifteen birds the size of a Norwich Canary. Hope you'll have luck with them.

Sexing Black-faced Lovebirds (F. H. Wright).—Much more remains to be ascertained yet upon the point with this species; at any rate, so far as immature birds are concerned. When mating adult birds, if you choose a specimen with a dark iris, and one with a lighter one, you will, so far as present knowledge goes, have a pair, always providing both birds are adult. This distinction appears to be constant, but can only be considered as applicable to birds in their second year. For younger birds, all one can do is to observe them, and choose one with an effeminate appearance, and mate it with a large, bold, masculine looking bird—the eye soon gets trained to this. The demeanour of the birds to each other, even in a crowd, tells one much.

Nonpareils (W. Knight).—You do not say which species you refer to—the Nonpareil Bunting or the Pintail Nonpariel. The first, I fear, you possess but little chance of obtaining, and the latter mostly arrives in a very unsatisfactory condition, and losses are numerous with fresh purchases. A liberal supply of paddy rice should be kept up, and they must not be put out of doors before May. The predominating colours are blue, red, and green, the first-named being the brightest in colour, but the latter is a beautiful bird. Neither species have proved free breeders, quite the reverse; but if you succeed in establishing a pair there is no reason why, with a little luck, success should not come your way. I cannot, however, advise the keeping of either species with Budgerigars, as you already have Parrakeets, pairs of Blue-winged Lovebirds and Rosella Parrakeets would be the better purchase, and would bring plenty of colour into the aviary.

Shrubs for Aviary (P.T.O.).—(1) I don't like the ribes, and advise you not to use them. Euonymus, common laurel, box, willow, barberis, fir, Austrian pine, rambler roses, wild clematis, everlasting peas, perennial sunflowers, Michaelmas daisies, nasturtiums, mignouette, and marigolds are all good and wholesome shrubs and plants for the outdoor aviary. (2) I think the Waxhill is a St. Helena. (3) I have never found the Red-beaked or Madagascar Weavers to interfere with small Finches save in very much overcrowded aviaries, and save for an occasional spar the above Weavers agree fairly well together. (3) You can safely leave in the Montana clematis.

Treatment for Grey Parrot (B.G.).—The only way to check this annoying habit is to keep the grating over cage tray and to cover it with small half-inch mesh netting, promptly cleaning away any droppings that adhere. Such arrangements persevered in for a time should prove effective. It might also assist if you gave the bird a piece of plain biscuit twice a day, well moistening it in a mixture of Parrish's Chemical Food and water in equal parts. I should advise continuing the use of netting and grating for three months at least, and during this period mingle a little grit with the daily supply of seed mixture.

Keeping a Pekin Robin (F.A.G.).—You will not get a good cock Pekin Robin under 7s. 6d. If you can see a number of adult birds together, pick out the brightest and largest, one with fiery red beak, yellow cheeks, deep red wing bars, and rich saffron chest, and you can be almost sure it is a cock. The diet is soft food, ripe fruit and half a dozen mealworms per bird daily, with any spiders, smooth caterpillars, small beetles, etc., you can capture for it. Once it has got over the hardships of importation, it is hardy and robust. They are also fond of a piece of sponge cake sopped in milk, and this can be given occasionally. They of course require water for drinking and bathing; they are great bathers.

Parrot with Weak Eye (Chin-Chin).—Bathe the eye with a diluted zinc and rosewater eye solution, which can be obtained from any chemist. Keep the bird warm, yet where it will get fresh air and at the same time be free from draught. For the next month well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, but every fifth day in lieu of the chemical food put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the drinking water. Its dietary should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts and plain biscuits, with cuttlebone and grit. Report progress a fortnight hence.

Amazon Pulling Feathers (L.M.).—Stop the tea sops and all similar things at once; confine the dietary to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts and plain biscuits; a piece of dry potato may be given occasionally if the bird cares for it, and the biscuit may be moistened in Parrish's Chemical Food and water (equal parts)—this will take the place of the tea sop. A little celery or lettuce can also be given. For one day only put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into its drinking water (ordinary sized drinker), and repeat this every fifth day; and on the other days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Also spray twice weekly with quassia solution, keeping the bird carefully out of draught till dry.

Waxbills.—(Dad).—The usual preening of the head and neck feathers with these birds includes feather picking and pulling. Lightly dust their sleeping places with sulphur, and if there is no sign of improvement a fortnight hence, you will have to cage the bald birds up separately till they are in decent plumage again. Half a teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia to the usual sized drinker of water twice weekly would probably be helpful; otherwise I can suggest no addition to your diet, which is a liberal and wholesome one. You might also keep a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and if you are not giving it, keep a mille sprayer or two in the cage; the latter will keep them occupied picking out the seeds.

Parrot Losing its Plumage (E. Piper).—I have not your former query by me, but I cannot at this stage do more than advise you to continue the treatment advised in our previous reply—it is a slow and tiresome task improving the condition of Parrots when they reach this stage. Carry out the former instructions, which may be summed up as follows:—Confine the dietary to seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits, with of course cuttlebone, grit and water. Continue to use Parrish's Chemical Food with an occasional laxative (Dinneford's Magnesia) to keep the bowels moving freely, but not really loose. Keep the bird warm, but yet where the air is fresh and it will be out of draught, it will then take no hurt while the plumage is being renewed. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food whatever.

Foreign Bird Querists will find in our handbook, "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1, and "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d. post free; a mine of information of use and interest.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Magpie or Jackdaw.

Rue.—As a pet I should certainly give the Magpie preference to the Jackdaw. It is best to buy a young bird, but you will not be able to obtain one, of course, for two or three months yet. If you advertised your wants in our columns, however, no doubt you would be able to get a tame Magpie for from 10/- to 20/-; if a talker, its price will naturally be a higher one. Young ones (nestlings) are to be had in season for a few shillings. The only points to note when buying are health and sprightliness (that is, if wanted merely for a pet). If you were to cut the flight feathers of both wings (say the first four or five on each) the bird could safely be left to run about the garden, though any evil-minded pussy-cat might try to make a meal of it. I have had cats come after my own Magpie; but I have always received them "most politely," as Fragson's song puts it. The cage must be a very big one—about 5 feet long by 3 feet high by 2 feet wide would be an excellent size.

"German" cock Linnets (Stultus).—I do not know that the "German" Linnet differs either in colour, size, markings or song from our English Linnet—they are one and the same species. The cage and the feeding should be the same. I have seen hundreds of Continental (German and otherwise) Linnets reach the various importers here. What led you think there was a difference?

Thrush and Bad Feather (No Nom-de-Plume).—You do not give sufficient information to guide me in forming a definite opinion. If the bird does not bathe regularly, this alone may induce a bad state of plumage. Red mite, if present in any quantity; absence of vegetable ingredients in the food; lack of variety in the food line; keeping in a hot stuffy room—these are other possible causes. A perusal of the "Nutshell" booklet on the Thrush (post free 2½d.) might help you to put matters to rights.

In an Aviary (C. A. C.).—If the aviary is a small one, containing but few birds, it becomes hardly worth while giving each seed in a separate vessel. Even then, however, considerable economy can be effected by giving the hemp seed separately and, above all, the niger seed (if this latter be used). Almost any kind of bird (the Buntings are notable exceptions) will throw out the other seeds in a mixture, searching for the hemp and niger it contains. The birds will sing when all together, but there is certain to be some quarrelling when the breeding season gets a little nearer.

A Trio (Lark).—(1) As regards the steadying of the bird, follow the advice given to J. M. Williams last week. (2) Half fill the tin with alternate layers of dry sacking and a mixture (equal parts) of bran and middlings. Then turn in either one or two pints of mealworms (according to the depth of your pocket). Beetles are only obtainable at all freely in the summer. See that some holes for ventilation are bored round the top of the tin. Store the tin in a warm place (this is highly important). (3) A breeding tin of mealworms does not smell at all.

Linnets and a Goldie (Lillie).—(1) The local treatment alone is likely to be of avail. Anoint the part twice daily for 4 or 5 days with just a touch of a mild sulphur ointment, with which any chemist will supply you. (2) The cock Linnet should be mated with a hen Canary (a stoutly-built yellow hen for preference, either clear or marked). (3) This "picking of the feet" is a habit acquired by some Goldfinches (quite a number, in fact), and signifies nothing—that is to say, it does not necessarily indicate that something is the matter with its feet. If the latter are swollen and look inflamed, it is, of course, different, but you do not speak of anything of this nature. Many Goldies like something to tear to bits. I have one now to which I give a soft wood perch, and this is soon picked to bits, the Finch tearing away splinters of quite considerable size. This bird will "pick its feet" if nothing better offers in the plaything line.

A Jackdaw (P. J. Jamieson).—Note the remarks on caging, etc., given this week in the reply to an enquiry about a Magpie. They apply equally to your own bird. I have a punch-bar front in my own Magpie cage; it is strong enough for anything in the bird line. The wire needs to be stout, of course. Any guage round about 1½ and 2 inches will be suitable. The food should consist largely of table-scraps (a fair proportion of meat, greens, and the like) which can be mixed into scalded "Melox" (a biscuit dog food, sold at most hay and corn stores); any good brand of dog food would answer.

A Great Tit (W. R. Everett).—A long and very practical article on the management of Tits was given quite recently by CAGE BIRDS. You should get a copy of the number containing it. I give brief directions for feeding in another reply this week.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

The Great Tit likes a little hemp seed and a few sunflowers frequently. There are no special dimensions for the cage, which should be as reasonably large as you can find space for—say, 2ft. by 16in. by 9in. A suitable small branch of a tree (with twigs) fixed upright in the centre, is appreciated much more than the usual style of perch.

An Ailing Goldfinch (Puzzled).—Give this bird hemp, teazle, and canary in the stock mixture; lightly crack the hemp if he is weak. In a separate dish give freely a mixture of thistle, sesame, and niger seeds (equal parts). Get from a chemist one ounce of compound syrup of hypophosphites B.P. (Fellow's syrup) and stir half a teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, fresh daily. This is a strong tonic and building-up medicine, and soon puts birds "on their feed." Its use has saved me many a bird. I am afraid, however, that your own Finch may be too far gone for any treatment to be of avail. Ailing birds need prompt treatment

An Exhibition Goldie (J. Polkinghorne).—You could try the remedy mentioned by Mr. Yates, viz., make the bird's drinking water taste fairly strongly with ordinary table salt. It is quite possible, however, that the trouble is due to some irritant in the food. Are you sure the seed supplied is of first-rate quality and thoroughly cleaned? Bad hemp seed, for instance, will kill any Goldfinch, and it is more common than many fanciers suppose.

A Linnet Mule's Trouble (Quandrum).—Stir three or four drops of Condy's fluid into the bird's drinking water (sufficient to tint it light-red). Give in a glass or earthenware vessel only Change the water 2 or 3 times daily. Keep this up for several days. Fancy waiting 12 months before asking for advice!

A Quintette (H. Boddy).—(1) "Soft moult" means the actual loss of feathers (a moult out of season, in fact). Probably your bird does not bathe. Spray the plumage daily for a time, and see if this causes the "rough look" to disappear. You are sure the bird is not pestered with red mite? (2) "Thin" Goldfinch Mules stand no chance on the show-bench in competition with stoutly-built birds equal in other points. It does not matter what hens Mules are bred from so long as they are well built; and, naturally, a well-built hen is the most likely mother to produce well-built progeny. A "mongrel" hen Canary may be quite as good for the purpose as any blue-blooded prize winner. (3) You could try covering the cages for part of the day. (4) Many exhibition Mules have been bred from big British cock Goldfinches. (5) A good insectile mixture must be the staple food of Robins and Blue Tits, and some live food must be given frequently (mealworms, flies, smooth caterpillars, various grubs, etc., according to season). Tits like a few small seeds and a little suet or fat meat now and again, while Robins enjoy a little coarse oatmeal.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed this too will be the sender's.

PARK AND LAKE AVICULTURE.

Answered by FRANK FINN, B.A., F.Z.S.

Feeding of Snakes, Lizards, and Frogs (One of Many Readers).—These generally need live food—insects, including mealworms and gentles, in the case of lizards and frogs; small frogs and fish in the case of snakes. Snakes and lizards need a dry sunny place, a bath being required for the snakes. Frogs should have a shadier place, with water always accessible. You will find full particulars of treatment in my book, "Pets and How to Keep Them." (We can send you a copy for 3s. 10d., post free; it contains many coloured plates and other illustrations.—ED.)

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Framed Plate (A. H. C. Legg).—Many thanks for your kindly letter.

A Hot-water Device (E. H. Williams).—Thanks; we will have a drawing done, and publish the letter and sketch next week.

Young Naturalist (W. Watson).—We do not care for this kind of anecdote. It is laughably untrue, of course, but it has its repulsive side.

An Error in Address (W. Stevens).—Have made the correction; and much regret the error.

Cuttings (C. R. Hampshire, W. Gunn, and others).—We are much obliged to you for your kindness.

My First Lizard (W. H. R.).—We shall be very pleased to publish the promised article; many thanks.

A Poem (Bert).—Your sentiments are admirable, but you must really excuse us for not tackling your poetry—we are afraid we should have all our correspondents dropping into verse.

The Case of a Cup (City Sparrow).—As the matter of this cup has already been the subject of legal action, we should only be involving ourselves (and you, too) in the risk of action at law by publishing your letter, and we must beg to be excused.

Particulars for Annual (W. Hopwood).—The particulars of your society's officials are in good time. The absolute latest date for receiving same is Monday next, January 23rd; anything arriving after this cannot possibly be dealt with.

Allegations of Staining, etc. ("Apprentice," "Natural Colour and Nationality," etc.).—If birds are stained, they must be protested against at the shows and tested there. This seems to us far more to the point than writing to the Press afterwards. Further, no paper can publish letters such as those you send us, as they are libellous in the eye of the law, and would land both ourselves and the writers into expensive legal actions.

LLANELLY.

Sixth annual show of the Llanelly and Dist. C.B.S. held January 17th, Market Hall. This is a grand building for a show—so commodious that two or three thousand exhibits could easily be staged. There was a very good entry in all sections, so the exhibits made quite an imposing exhibition in the roomy building. Although confined to a one-day show, there was from the first no confusion; the birds were staged early, and re-arranged after judging, the cards were quickly placed, and everything was cleared up and tidy in capital time. Mr. Daniel John makes a good secretary, and was at his duties early and late. He was ably assisted by Mr. S. Jones. We noticed Mr. D. R. Jones, the chairman, among the willing band of workers, which also included such well known fanciers as Messrs. S. Jones, Gower Thomas, T. Jenkins, J. Gregory, jun., J. Gregory, sen., Ben Evans, S. Lewis, E. H. Williams, T. Bennett, and W. J. Harry, also D. Jenkins and D. A. S. Longden from Swansea; consequently there was no lack of assistance. The British bird section was a good one, and the birds far above the average seen at most shows. As was to be expected in Wales, the Goldfinches were real gems. The two leaders were well known birds, put down by that enthusiastic Finch fancier, Mr. Richards (Narberth). For quality the surprise of the show was the extraordinary class of Field-moulted Linnets. To sort these out was a "teaser," there being so many good birds of equal merit. The leader, put down by Mr. S. J. Nicholas, quite deserved his position, as he is something far beyond the usual, and was undoubtedly the best Linnet in the show. The cup for best Britisher went to Mr. D. A. S. Longden, who won it with his lovely Bullfinch, a bird of most marvellous richness of colour. Mr. J. H. Payne judged the Canaries, and Mr. H. Norman the Hybrids and British and Foreign birds.

Norwich Plainheads, although not numerically strong, were good in quality, several well known winners being staged. Mr. W. Davies captured the special with the winning clear yellow. Yorkshires made a grand display, the competition being very hot, several exhibitors from the Broad-nered County sending teams, with which they did well. Special for best went to gallant little Wales, Messrs. Morgan and Wilcox taking this with their well known unlighted yellow. Borders were good classes, and the quality was of the best. Mr. D. Jenkins put down a good team and took most of the prizes. The two local classes contained some nice exhibits, and the selling classes had a few bargains in them.

LINGFIELD.

Seven classes were scheduled at this show, held in the Victoria Institute, on January 18th, and of these two—Crests and Borders—were cancelled, the other five contained only twenty-one entries, a great falling off from recent years. Some nice quality exhibits put in an appearance, and it is a pity competition was not more extended. Mr. J. Stone once more acted as secretary, and made a most careful and courteous official; he was assisted by a good committee, and all the arrangements worked well. Mr. M. Crust judged.

CAGE BIRDS (1911) ANNUAL

All advertisements and other matter for our forthcoming ANNUAL, MUST reach us by first post Monday next, January 23rd, or same cannot be dealt with. Will secretaries who have not yet supplied particulars of their societies, kindly note this? Post at once.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW.

At the moment of going to press we receive a letter from Mr. Lythgoe, from which we extract the following: "In your review of the schedule of the Crystal Palace Show, you state all fanciers, whether affiliated members of the C.B.U. or not, are equally eligible to exhibit. There is nothing in the schedule stating that the show is under C.B.U. licence, and Mr. Ramsden writes me that he was not responsible for the paragraph. The Palace authorities have up to date not taken advantage of the offer to license the show. Nominations for the positions of President and Secretary should be sent in to me not later than the 25th inst."

Under the White Rose.

THE list of the season's shows arranged under the rules of the Yorkshire Union will draw to a close at Skelmanthorpo to-day, with Mr. C. A. House as Judge, and it is hoped that the venture will be a success, and as the Skelmanthorpeites are all good exhibitors. their show should be a grand final for the Union's competitions.

MOST of the Specialist clubs extend their patronage to the Crystal Palace show, and the result of their competitions will be decided at that fixture; therefore the report of the judging will be looked forward to with interest, though in one or two cases the runners-up will have all on to oust the present leaders.

THE other day I had the pleasure of a nice little chat with one of the prominent fanciers of the Hull Society, Mr. J. Calam. The day found me stranded in Hull for a couple of hours in the evening waiting my train home. I therefore made my way to George Street, and was fortunate to find Mr. Calam at home, and at liberty; and I was thus able to pass away the time in congenial company, chatting about birds, societies, and general matters in connection with the Fancy, though I was unfortunate in not being able to stay a short time longer; then I should have had the pleasure of meeting another well-known member, Mr. Geo. Harland, who had arranged to meet Mr. Calam only 20 minutes after my time to leave. Bettor luck next time! I was glad to hear that the society is in good circumstances and that their secretary, Mr. Ernest R. Ridley, is the right man in the right place.

MANY of the societies in this district are making arrangements for lectures, members' shows, rambles, washing exhibitions, etc., for the year, and the outlook is very promising. New members are fairly numerous and prospects are encouraging.

A FEW enquiries are already being made as to the prospects of there being trips to the Palace Show, and in due course I will make it known what arrangements are to be made for this annual outing, so that fanciers can undertake the journey together.

"STRAIGHT 'UN.'

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners-up.

*"Hullo, 'Orkie."

We have a Yorkshire cock Canary which is very tame. When it hears the baby crying he will sing at the top of his voice; then, when the baby hears the bird singing, it will stop crying, and will go up to the cage and say, "Hullo, 'Orkie!'"—Sent by Harry Palmer, 8, Bridge-street, Hakin, Milford Haven.

Calling Canaries By Name.

A lady was one day surprised to see a Canary fly through the window into her room. It was slightly injured, and seemed glad to find a shelter. Before long it became a perfect friend to the lady, who was an invalid. The bird would perch on the bed, or on the armchair to keep her company. It would eat out of her hand. After a while a mate was purchased for the bird, and now it has a good family—32 descendants, all of whom are as tame as the original bird. They come out of the cage when it is opened, they fly over to the lady at the slightest beck or call, and they all know their names, so that if one is called that one only will come to her.—Maud Haskins, 51, Seneca-street, St. George, Bristol. Age 12.

*A Clever Little Bird.

The Tom-Tit is the most amusing of English birds. In the autumn, some years ago, a young woman secured a cock Tom-Tit. She tited a bit of red silk around his leg, and turned him loose again. The following April the bird reappeared, bringing with him a mate having a bit of blue ribbon tied around her leg. The pair took up their abode in a big oak tree, soon swinging a nest, and bringing forth a brood. The lady watched the movements of the beribboned couple very eagerly, and what was her astonishment one day soon after they left the nest, to behold the young birds in a line, while the parents, with deft beaks and feet, tied a bit of bright cloth about the leg of each. The ingenuity of the Tom-Tit is well known, and it is probable that the first bird became so pleased with his decoration that he tied a blue ribbon to the leg of his mate, and wished to hand down the custom to his progeny.—Sent by W. Webster, 27, Boyer Street, Derby.

Wild-Bird Life.

Home of the Ptarmigan.

Seeing in a poulterer's shop rows of fluffy white birds, having curiously feathered feet, makes one's thoughts wander northwards to the sloping moors and heather-clad hills—the home of the Red Grouse. The white birds are the smallest of our British Grouse—the Ptarmigans—in their white winter dress—one of the most striking instances of protective colouration we have in our Islands. In the early Spring months the plumage of this bird is a speckly grey, with dark brown mottlings; this, again, is changing all the Summer, until in the Autumn it commences to get lighter, and eventually is clothed with white, excepting for the outer tail feathers, which are black. This gradual change of plumage harmonises perfectly with the bird's surroundings at each season of the year. The general tone of colour on the hills, when the hot Summer sun has scorched and dried up the rough grass and mosses, is totally different to what it is in the Spring, when the heather twigs and lichens are fresh in tone, and the blades of the young grass are forcing their way up from the old roots. When winter comes, and the hills are sheeted with snow, only the keen-eyed Eagle can detect the moving specks of white-bird life on its surface, and even he is at times deceived by the Ptarmigan's protective dress. If it were not so, the species would soon be exterminated. If white was its all-the-year-round colour, a single Summer would probably see an end of them. Or if, on the other hand, the Summer dress was retained, it would be impossible for the bird to exist on the eternal snow; its enemies would find it at once, for the Ptarmigan is essentially a ground bird, seldom using its wings from choice. This bird lives higher up on the mountain-side than the Red Grouse, and although seldom disturbed in its solitude, it is none the less exceedingly shy and wary. The intruder is detected long before he reaches the spot where a few are basking in the Summer sunshine, and possibly the only sight of these interesting birds he will get is a glimpse of their skimming over the rocks, silent and swift as an arrow; wheeling round the wind-swept slope, and across the barren hills, they are gone—vanished absolutely—and the observer is left to the solitude of the hills.

There was a great entry of 52, which we consider a record for a club contest; not only that, but there was a great gathering considering it was our first open contest, and I am pleased to say there was not a fault to find with the management. Four prizes for each class. 1st, for time, Topping (Blackburn); also set for first prize in quality, but as our conditions were that no one bird could win two prizes he decided to take the first for time, and give Mr. Randle (Warrington) 1st for quality. Training a Redpoll.

SIR,—I should be very glad if any of your readers would please tell me the best way to train a Redpoll to draw up its seed and water.

REEDING.

The Late Sheringham Show.

SIR,—Can anyone enlighten me as to the whereabouts of the officials of the late Sheringham Show, as I think it high time they paid prize money and specials, and I have written to the sec., but have received no reply. I should like to know if any other fanciers are "in the same boat." I think it very discouraging to young beginners like myself.

H. WATSON.

The Radcliffe and Dist. C.B.S.

SIR,—A meeting of the above-named society was held at the headquarters, Bridge Inn, on January 10th, when it was decided to have a six miles radius from Radcliffe Market Place. Will all the local fanciers please attend the next meeting, which will be held on Tuesday, January 24th, at 8 o'clock, when we shall be pleased to enrol as members all those who wish to join us.

Alleged Unfair Treatment at Guisborough Show.

SIR,—I made four entries in the Yorkshire classes at the above show, but never received my cage tickets, so did not send my birds, as I did not know whether the classes were cancelled or not. I also sent money for a marked catalogue, but have not yet received this. Perhaps they have not got them marked yet. I wrote the secretary; he replied saying, "You will have no money back." I may say they will have no more entries from me.

E. RADLEY.

The Crested Canary Club Patronage.

SIR,—As secretary to one of the shows (Plymouth) to which the C.C.C. patronage was given, I should like to express my regret that the splendid sporting spirit shown by Messrs, Rhodes and Ley in guaranteeing prize money has caused such a loss as pointed out by Mr. Clarke in your last issue. Without doubt, the entries in the Crest section at Plymouth and other shows have greatly increased, and I believe lasting good will be found to have been done for the Crest Fancy by the action of Messrs. Rhodes and Ley. But the weakness of the scheme is, in my opinion, the Yellow classes. Take Plymouth show as an instance, the loss on the two Yellow classes amounted to £1 10s. 6d., the whole loss £2 11s., and allowing for the £1 paid to the C.C.C. by the Plymouth Society, this would have cleared the two guarantors except for the Yellow classes. I have not the figures of other shows by me, but I believe the same would apply to most of them. I understood it was with the express idea of encouraging Yellow Crests that the scheme of guarantees was put forward, but apparently this colour has been so neglected from a show point of view that it will need very great effort to raise it to the same standard as the Buffs.

The Mystery of Siberian Goldfinches Dying.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to answer "Hybrid," re Siberian Goldfinches dying. I have had two Russian or Siberian Goldfinches, the same as "Hybrid," but I can claim to have cured them. The way I treated mine was as follows: As soon as I saw them go soft (or thick), I at once get twopennyworth of essence of senna and twopennyworth of castor oil. I mix half-a-teaspoonful of these two. I take the bird carefully in my hand, after reversing a pen-nib that is clean, and I take up a little at a time of the mixture in the nib, and force it into the bird's mouth. I keep the sick ones in a warm room. I make a milk sop and I feed the birds with this out of my hand. I also crush a few hemp seeds through a mill, and a few sunflower seeds. I add a little linseed to these, and give them in a small pot (so that I can change it twice a day, as I don't like to leave crushed hemp too long. As soon as I find they are getting better I give them a little inga seed. I take the birds in my haud and give them two mealworms, if they don't take them off a pin. Now in the drinking water I give 20 drops of the following mixture: Tincture of gentian one ounce, tincture of rhubarb one ounce. After the first day I change their water, and I add for the next day a piece of rock fuller's earth, well stirring it up, and I continue changing the water every day until the birds are recovered. I use boiled water for all my birds. I shall be pleased to answer "Hybrid" any questions he wishes to ask, as far as my experience goes. I would also have written a line or two on the Siberian or Russian hen Bully and German hen Bully, but am feeling unwell. I may, Mr. Editor, if you will allow me, in the near future. I trust that "Hybrid" will find these few simple remedies useful, and that he may still have his birds left and breed a few real good Hybrids.

Proposed New Cage Bird Society for Chester-le-Street and Dis.

SIR,—A few fanciers here are desirous of forming a society. Will anyone thinking of joining, kindly communicate with me? I shall be pleased to arrange a meeting place and date.

Wire-work Fly-traps.

SIR,—In a very interesting letter last week, a "Lover of British Birds" says he procures plenty of flies in summer by putting wire-work catchers all over his place. As I have never seen nor heard of any of these fly traps, and am greatly interested in keeping softbills, any information as to how they are made, or where they can be bought, would greatly oblige.

ANOTHER BRITISH BIRD LOVER.

Alleged Borrowing of Show Birds at Chester.

SIR,—It has come to my knowledge that a member of the Chester C.B.S., a day or so before the show on Dec. 27th, had a consignment of birds sent him, which he exhibited, and which won many prizes. If this is correct, and it seems to me to be, as it came from a good quarter, it must be very disheartening to other members, who show their own birds, and more especially so to the novices. I am sure if the subscribers get to know things like this they will stop their subscriptions. It is a pity members cannot show their own birds at a members' show without importing someone else's.

SUBSCRIBER.

The Crystal Palace Show.

SIR,—Schedules being out of print, I shall be obliged if you will allow me to refer applicants to the show advertisement appearing in this issue of CAGE BIRDS, which contains the full classification, also an entry form. Since the schedule was published I have received the patronage of the Cinnamon Canary Club, with usual specials; also two valuable medals from the Toronto Society, per Mr. J. S. Clarke, for members of the Crested Canary Society; also a piece of plate from a friend for most points in Mr. Dewar's Border classes. Specials Nos. 123 and 124 should read classes 90 to 92; 125, 126, and 128, classes 90 to 100. To save needless correspondence at the show, I hope all exhibitors will price their exhibits at the lowest price they are prepared to accept for same

J. W. RAMSDEN,
Show Manager.

A Goldfinch Problem.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to ask some of your readers, if they can tell me wherein lies the fault of my treatment of Goldfinches, for I cannot manage to keep them in proper health? I keep each bird singly in a cage 14 ins. by 10 ins. by 14 ins. high, with food and water vessels inside. The cages are cleaned every day, and I feed the birds as follows: Canary, teazle, hemp, and linseed, with occasionally a little thistle seed or gold of pleasure, etc. But they all of them, simply "gorge." I have had several this past year, and nearly all of them from well-known dealers, both country and London. I have tried house-moulted birds and field-moulted ones. I have been careful to ascertain what food they have been accustomed to, and have fed them accordingly; and when that seemed to fail, I have put them on the seeds mentioned above. I have bought them out of large cages and small cages, but do what I will, they are always eating. They will hop backwards and forwards on their top perches a few times, and then they begin at their seed. Needless to say, they do not sing. They get puffy, but do not die. I must own that they all appear in good health when I buy them, so the fault must be mine. But what is it? I might mention that I can keep delicate Foreign birds, and British Softbilled birds in perfect health, taking prizes with them at Shows. But Goldfinches are a failure with me.

"MARCHPANE."

The Fancy at Warrington.

SIR,—The Fancy in the Warrington district seems to be again taking a turn in the right direction. The membership of the local society is increasing at almost every meeting, and we hear that the Fancy is being taken up in quite unexpected quarters, so we may look forward to an open show next winter. The headquarters of the society having been rebuilt, has placed at our disposal one of the best rooms in Lancashire for the staging of from 300 to 400 birds. The place has excellent light, and is fitted with the latest ventilating and heating appliances, easy of access from both stations, and in every way suitable for show purposes. Mr. J. D. Leigh, who, owing to business pressure, has been quiet for two show seasons, is again with us. In the organising of shows his many years' experience will be helpful. We are fortunate in the possession of a hardworking and energetic secretary (Mr. G. Nelson), who, if supported by the fanciers in the district, will bring Warrington to the front again. We are holding a Pair Show on February 2nd, at which Mr. W. R. Knowles, of Earlestown, will judge. Novices in the district should never miss a show of this sort, as birds which never appear on the show bench at ordinary shows, are brought out, and much good information is to be obtained as to the methods of pairing to produce the show specimen. The criticisms of the old fanciers, the opinions of the judge, and the viewing of the specimens in question, form the golden opportunity of the novice. Two fine specimens of the Bramblefinch were caught here last week; it is very rare that these birds get so near to manufacturing centres.

C. DUKES.

Proposed New Society for Edinburgh and District.

SIR,—Fanciers and friends are reminded that a meeting will be held this Saturday (January 21st), in Cairn's Memorial Church Hall, Gorgie-road, at 7.30 p.m., when it is hoped there will be a large turn-out.

J. I. MACKIE.

Birds as Excess Luggage.

SIR,—Please draw your readers' attention to the fact that all lists of names must be either returned to me, or sent direct to Mr. Colley, 10, Stanley-street, Oat-street, Moston, Manchester, by Thursday, the 26th of January. Let me urge all to have their lists as full as possible—every name will count in having this grievance mitigated. There is little doubt but that the high rate charged is killing the Fancy; to my mind it is the cause of short entries at our shows.

J. PATTERSON.

The Inside of a Birdroom.

SIR,—Re Mr. A. Wright's request for information as to the best material to colour the inside of his bird-room, I strongly advise him to use nothing else but best quality washable water paint (not distemper), one of the best is "Duresco," which can only be obtained from painters' shops. As to colour, may I suggest to him to do the top white, and the sides and ends apple green (or any other tint that he likes better), I should like to say that the reason I advise "Duresco" is, that it is non-poisonous and non-injurious to birds; and it also renders woodwork non-inflammable and fire-proof (so far as any paint can). I use "Duresco" myself for my aviaries and cages. Another advantage of this material is, that you can wash it or varnish it, if required, which cannot be done with distempers.

JOHN ENGLAND.

Are Birds Fruit-eaters?

SIR,—I see Mr. John Canning states that the Starling is not a fruit-eater. I have seen them eating both pears and apples. I have seen from 20 to 30 in one pear tree near my door. We had to get them, or there would not have been any pears left, as the Starlings were making a clean job of them. These must have been fruit-eaters, any way.

MACK.

SIR,—I notice in CAGE BIRDS of January 7th that a correspondent, who signs himself John Canning, champions the cause of the Starling, Thrush, and Blackbird. They need a champion when I am in the orchard with my gun at cherry time, just before the fruit is ready to pick. There is, to my way of thinking, no more destructive bird than the Starling as regards cherries. The Thrush and Blackbird attack the whiteheart cherries voraciously, but do not play such havoc with the black varieties. But here Mr. Starling comes in; he revels in them, dyeing his head and throat purple with the juice, which may be seen when he is shot, and for further proof, he often falls when shot with a cherry half-way down his throat. The currants, strawberries, and plums suffer more than the cherries at the beaks of the Thrush and Blackbird, and this year the apples and pears, too, which fruit the Starling never touches. I have shot as many as 150 birds of these three species in a week, not on the ground, but on the trees, pecking the cherries as they are shot. Now, how can your correspondent truthfully assert that these birds do not eat fruit? I may say that when the cherry buyers purchase our crop, which they do when it is still on the trees, they employ a man to do nothing else but shoot the three species I mention, for a fortnight or three weeks before the fruit is ripe, as the trees, being altogether too big to net, they can protect their crop in no other way. I am a lover of cage birds, and keep over a score of Britishers, but at the same time, I cannot shut my eyes to the fact that Blackbirds, Thrushes, and Starlings are a scourge at fruit time if they do good all the rest of the year. I think your correspondent must have got hold of some funny fruit farmers, who do not "cuss" vividly at the Starling, if they grow cherries.

G. GREGORY.

The Disqualified Yellowhammer at the Scottish National Show.

SIR,—Yes, "Bath Fancier," this is (as you know without going into print) the same bird that was at your local show under Mr. Bull, and, as you say, he was protested against, and disqualified. But it was through you and your little clique that this was brought about. However, at the general (committee), after my explanation, they decided in my favour. Mr. Bull, whom you admire (and I also) and uphold as an expert judge of British birds, when judging gave the bird 1st and three specials, and it was not until late in the afternoon, after the bird had been pulled to pieces by you for upwards of three hours, that the protest was made. I was at the show between 2 and 3 o'clock, and was congratulated by the judge on winning. Why did you not open out then? It is not, then, singular that such an expert and experienced judge as Mr. J. H. Payne should give the bird 1st prize at Bournemouth, for Mr. J. Robson put him in the money at Battersea, and Mr. J. H. Roe at Torbay, also Mr. Battye, at Cardiff. How many of these judges have eyesight which is failing? Why should you think that I require to trim a bird which won last season 2 cups, 4th in a class of 19, at the Palace, besides winning about 10 1st prizes? Surely Mr. A. Silver or Mr. R. J. Howe would have found out whether the bird had been faked; or perhaps both these gentlemen have eyesight failing? I know how the bird's head feathers got damaged, and I did not keep it a secret. But why should I walk round and tell Dick, Tom and Harry that the feathers were damaged? As a matter of fact, I myself was ignorant of there being anything the matter with its head at the Bath Show, and could not understand it. But getting it home, I carefully watched the bird, and found out the cause, which I have made well known, and do not wish to explain to you. Now, "Bath Fancier," to prove my bird requires no faking whatever, as you allege was done, I am quite willing to challenge you by depositing £1 to £5, and the bird to be sent under one of the expert judges whose eyesight is not failing, and if be proves that the feathers which you say were cut for the purpose of making a clear yellow centre, is not a clear yellow feather without any black tints, I will forfeit the money to any charitable institution, provided you forfeit the same amount if it is decided in my favour. I am very fond of winning, and am also a good loser, but always lose with a good heart, and do not get together a little clique to find a way of securing prizes by meanness. Have you ever in your experience faked a bird for the show bench?

Proposed New C.B.S. for Carnarvon.

SIR,—I am desired by a large number of local fanciers to convene a meeting for next Thursday, Jan. 26, at Mr. Oliver's Hairdressing Saloon, Bridge Street, at 8 p.m. sharp, with the view of forming a new Cage Bird Society. Will all local fanciers endeavour to attend?

J. W. JONES,

Proposed New C.B.S. for Ashington.

SIR,—A number of fanciers in this large and rapidly growing district have decided to start a Cage Bird Society in connection with the various working-men's social clubs. We have decided to hold a meeting at the Universal Social Club, Hirst, on Saturday, Jan. 28th, at 7 p.m. Will those fanciers wishing to join kindly attend; or if unable to do so, if they will send their names to me we will be pleased to enrol them.

R. MIDDLETON,
3, Wellbeck Terrace, Hirst, Ashington.

The Late Bangor Show (Co. Down).

SIR,—I appeal through the columns of your widely circulated journal to the Hon. Sec. of this show, in the interests of the society and its members, to pay the prize money and specials won on the 17th Dec. The specials were on view on the day of the show.

HYBRID BREEDER.

The Recent Lancashire Colliery Disaster.

SIR,—The subscription list is still open for the widows of Mr. P. Green and his brother (better known as "Lady Green") killed in the recent colliery disaster. I have much pleasure in announcing that I have received the following: Globe Inn Linnet Club (Leigh), 11s. 6d.; James Birchall (Skelmersdale), 1s.; Mr. W. H. Topping and Family (Blackburn), 5s.; total 17s. 6d.

Is it Cruel to Keep Birds in Cages?

SIR,—After all that has been said and written on this subject there will still probably be misgivings in the minds of those faddists as to the question of whether it is cruel to catch or cage British birds. Every week one reads in the papers of heavy fines being imposed upon persons having in their possession recently caught birds, on the lame excuse of having a live decoy bird which is cruelly used. I would like to point out to these sentimentalists that from my own observations bird catchers are most humane, and it is not likely they would cruelly ill-use a decoy or brace bird which it has taken them time and patience to train to mount the stick at the slightest pull of the cord. If they insist (which evidently they are trying to do) upon abolishing and making it a crime to catch or cage British birds, then why not abolish the practice (which is cruelly carried to the extreme) of trapping animals or the shooting down of game, some to escape by being maimed with stray shot, only to die a lingering death? But that, presumably, is sport! These sceptics should have a look round at some bird fanciers' rooms or aviaries and note the happy little inmates, well fed, provided against cold weather and tended with loving care; they could then judge for themselves. Nature cannot look after them in their wild state; they have to fend for themselves, and in severe cold weather, through exposure and want of food, they perish by the hundred, and their little bodies remain on the ground to rot.

G MARGARITIS.

(Several letters unavoidably held over.)

I wish to thank all fanciers who replied to my advertisement in "CAGE BIRDS," re exchange of Norwich, as the applicants are too numerous for me to answer individually.—W. Roberts (Derby).

Kindly thank the numerous inquirers I have received in reply to my advertisement in "CAGE BIRDS." I would say to anyone, whatever they have got for disposal, that yours, "CAGE BIRDS," is THE advertising medium for it.—F. C. Carter (Wyke Regis, near Weymouth).

Kindly thank the many enquirers for the Norwich I advertised in "CAGE BIRDS." I have been a reader of your valuable paper from No. 1.—H. Jowett (Bradford).

We have finished up the year 1910 with a balance in the Treasurer's hands of £11 12s. 0½d., which has given great satisfaction; let us continue to work together for the good of our society, as unity is strength. BORDER FANCY C.C.

Annual general meeting held Corn Exchange Buildings, Edinburgh, Jan. 2, Mr. Richardson presiding over a large attendance. Sec. intimated eight extra medals had been granted this year, and there was a decrease in membership of eight. Result of contest at Hawick: Points for English and Welsh club, 20; for B.F.C.C., 217. The balance-sheet for 1910 was brought forward. The income for year with balance from 1909 was £51 17s. 9½d; expenditure £42 7s. 2½d.; leaving a balance of £9 10s. 7d., compared with £12 16s. 10½d. for 1909. This was considered satisfactory, and was passed. All the office-bearers were re-elected, also the following new delegates: Messrs. Arnot (Kirkcaldy), Hocking (Swansea), Deacon (Cockermouth), Dixon (Wigton), Phillips (Selkirk), Pearson (Musselburgh), Mossie (Ayr), and Peters (Buckhaven). The first motion was that no society get club patronage unless they have a club member as judge; seconded and agreed to. "That birds with rings on their legs be not allowed to compete at any show, either open or confined, if held under B.F.C.C. rules; an amendment that they be allowed was made, and after some discussion, the motion was carried. A motion that perches in show cages be put in all the same way was moved, and after some discussion was allowed to drop. A letter was read from a member in Ayrshire asking judges to pay more attention to club standard when judging; also a complaint about exhibitors putting cage Nos upside down on show cages. A few of the members expressed their views on these complaints, after which the letter was allowed to drop. The next motion was that the B.F.C.C. adopt the Green Canary Association's standard of points for colour and markings, and that the same standard of points stand for Clunamons. Considerable discussion took place. It was moved that a committee be appointed to meet, and go into this business; the following were appointed: Messrs. D. Hamiltou, J. Johnson, T. Arnot, H. Bennet, S. Bughass, J. Patterson, and Mr. Richardsou (president). The next general meeting will be had at Carlisle.—M. Jamieson, Hon. Sec., 3, Green Terrace, Hawick, N.B.

Through a prior subscription, the Old Folks' Fund was held over till the next meeting. The annual show balance-sheet, (showing a balance of £17 7s. 1d.) also the Commemoration Benefit Fund showing a balance of £5 12s. 11d., were read, and confirmed, the secretary giving numerous statistics, amongst them being the fact that the special prizes given by the Association and the postage amounted to more than the members' subscriptions of £25 12s. 6d. The auditor (Mr. C. Prior) reported that the Association still maintained its sound financial position. Amendments to the rules were made by J. Chard, J. Pooley, and C. Prior. The show dates for the ensuing year were as follows: Pair and Finches combined, Jan. 28; young bird, July 1; annual show, Nov. 17 and 18. SWANSEA AND DIST. C.B.A.

Annual meeting held Jan. 10, Market Coffee Tavern, Mr. A. E. Taylor presiding over a splendid meeting. Balance-sheet for last year was read by the auditor, Mr. G. Balsh, and was adopted. Election of officers: President, J. Rocke, Esq., J.P.; chairman, Mr. J. W. Ford; vice-chairman, Mr. W. J. Bancroft; committee, Messrs. J. Hocking, J. Steers, D. Jenkins, W. J. Jenkins, J. Gay, R. W. Date of next open show fixed for Nov. 8 and 9, but the question of judges for same caused some friendly discussion. Resolved that the secretary write the two decided on with a view to engaging them. An adjourned meeting will be held Jan. 24, when judges' replies will be read; also arrangements for the match pair show.—S. H. George, Sec.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Meetiug of the Council held Rawson Hotel, Bradford, January 14. Mr. F. Hammond (president) presided. The minutes of the previous meeting were passed as read, and correspondence dealing with Mr. P. Imeson's claim against the railway company for alleged damage to birds during transit, also a letter from the Shipley Society, saying they did not intend holding an open show next year, were submitted and accepted. The question as to whether it would be in order if Bradford City O.S. (who follow after Shipley in the list of Union shows) move up to the date vacated by Shipley, providing they arrange with the judge appointed by the Union, was discussed; and it was unanimously decided to allow them to do so. A letter from Mr. W. E. Fergusson, of Harrogate, with regard to alleged ill-treatment of exhibitiou stock by the railway company was read, and the reply written by the secretary was considered the only feasible thing that could be done at present. The consideration of a complaint by a member of Manningham C.B.S. against the Huddersfield O.S. for not sending his class ticket at their last show, was deferred until next meeting in order to allow Huddersfield to defend the charge. The order for the supply of novice gold medals was given to Messrs. Fattorini and Sons, Bradford. A grant of £1 was made to the committee of the Yorkshire prize distribution in order to defray part expenses incurred at the annual dinner and prize distribution. The action of the Bradford East Society, in allowing their show date next year to be acquired by the Cinderella Club Committee, in order that they may run an open show in Bradford for the benefit of the club's funds, was unanimously endorsed. The secretary expressed his desire that the matter sent in by the Union societies for placing on the annual ballot paper be gone through by the Union sub-committee, instead of by the usual method of placing each recommendation on the ballot paper as received; it was decided unanimously that the sub-committee go through all recommendations as sent in before same are placed on the ballot papers. Members of the Union will greatly oblige by signifying changes of addresses to the Union secretary.—H Hill.

MID-RHONDDA AND DIS. C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held Parry's Temperance Bar, Tonypandy (late Danix), Mr. Hy. Jelly in the chair. The Secretary suggested that those members who had not paid up their arrears for 1910 be not asked to do so unless they wished to, and should they wish to continue their membership for 1911 they be expected to rejoin and pay the usual entrance fee of 1s. The Secretary sympathised with those members who could not pay up owing to the strike. Proposed by Mr. Legg, and seconded by Mr. D. Thomas, that the following become members: Messrs. J. T. Lloyd (Tonypandy), J. Ancock, W. Gambould (Tonypandy), J. Griffiths (Treelaw), and T. Nash (Glifach Goch), making 5 new members, which we feel proud of; and several more have promised to join us. The statement of accounts was given by the Secretary. It came as a surprise to those present to hear that we had over £5 in hand. Mr. Kinstby complimented the members upon having the true fanciers' spirit, and said it required men of grit to stick to the ship when almost sinking and to bring her safely into harbour. Mr. Legg was thanked heartily for taking over the office of secretary when the late secretary (Mr. Yeo) left for Canada. Mr. Legg consented to keep on as secretary, with Mr. J. T. Lloyd as assistant secretary. All office-bearers for 1910 were heartily thanked for their services. The society thanks the Treasurer, Mr. Kinstby (Tonypandy) for the cup offered for competition at our members 'show, who said that he gave the cup with a free heart and would give other specials. Will all members kindly make a point of attending next general meeting, January 26th, when the schedule for the matched pair show will be drawn up? The Auditors' report was given by Messrs. Lloyd and D. Thomas. The Secretary was instructed to send every donor of cash or specials their heartiest thanks, and especial thanks to the Editor of CAGE BIRDS for the handsome framed plate presented. The election of officers: Mr. H. Jelby, Chairman; Messrs. W. Morris and J. Griffiths, Vice-Chairmen; committee, all members (23 in all). Treasurer, Mr. J. Kinstby (Tonybandy); Hon. Sec., Arthur H. C. Legg, 7, Primrose Terrace, Llwyncelyn Porth, Rhondda Valley, Glam.; Hon. Assist. Sec., J. T. Lloyd.—A. H. C. Legg, Sec.

Usual meeting held Diniug Rooms, 118, Glasgow-road, January 12th, Mr. Sheriden presiding. A letter was read from the secretary resigning office owing to business preventing him from attending. It was moved and carried to appoint J. Hart to fill vacancy for ensuing year. SOUTH WEST LONDON C.B.S.

General meeting, held Jan. 11th, headquarters, Plough Hotel, Clapham Junction, when a good muster of members were present. All the retiring officers were elected again for 1911. After a good discussion it was proposed by J. Jeffrey and seconded by Mr. Tilling that the annual subscription be 2s. 6d. Instead of 4s., as with this small subscription the society is bound to make great headway. No society in South London looks after the interest of the novices as the S.W.L. does, so novices, don't be afraid to come forward—we will help you to become champions. British bird fanciers are well catered for; the quality of the exhibits at our annual show speaks for itself. As the Border Fancy Canaries are beginning to get very popular in the south, we shall have special classes for them; so, fanciers, send me your names.—John Jeffrey, Hon. Sec., 209, York Road, Battersea, S.W.

NOTTINGHAM (Permanent) O.S.

Annual meeting, held Jan. 14th, the Grapes Inn. The members expressed the unanimous opinion that the special prizes awarded on pomts last year were the best ever seen at any local show. Decided, to extend radius to the County of Notts., the subscription to be 3s. per annum. First table show open to all will be held Feb. 11th, entrance fee 6d. per cage. Five classes will be provided—2 Norwich, 2 Crests, and 3 Brit. A good special will be given for most points in each sectiou; prize money on sliding scale. The society is getting stronger, having obtained several new members from the Hucknall district, thanks to the efforts of Mr. J. Smedley, who was successful in carrying off the premier special prize (a grand marble clock) last year. T. H. V. Hayter, Esq., was elected president, the new secretary being Mr. J. Bunn, 80, Westwood Road, Nottingham. The society expressed regret at the resignation of Mr. J. Walmsley, who has been compelled to give up the post owing to business pressure. However, our new pilot is a thorough fancier, and will no doubt fill the post to everyone's satisfaction.—J. Walmsley, late sec.

BRITISH ROLLER C.C.

Monthly meeting January 10. Mr. F. A. Lester was unanimously voted to the chair. Arising out of the minutes was the proposition to hold a show in London. The secretary reported that he had been unable to find a suitable hall. Messrs. Lester, Neugebauer, and himself had been to inspect the hall suggested, and it was agreed to be an ideal place, but, unfortunately, was too large; and as time is short, the committee have no other option but to leave it alone this year. As several country members have expressed a wish to be present at the annual general meeting, it was decided to hold same at headquarters on Saturday, February 4, at 6 p.m., so that members can avail themselves of the cheap excursions running to Loudon on that day. Two new members were elected—Messrs. W. T. Buffin and T. H. Taylor. This concluded the business part of the meeting. The members, who turned up in large numbers, proceeded to give their attention to the 20 birds that were preseut—some excellent birds, also a few having faulty notes, the idea being that members should hear faulty as well as good tours, so as to improve their knowledge of the song. Unfortunately, the Roller birds that were present proved shy, and did not sing, though we had the pleasure of hearing them sing the Koller tour at the previous meeting. At that time it struck us as being a double note tour, and in the song of the birds owned by some of the members years ago, and, if memory serves us right, was judged as a fault. We were given to uuderstand by Mr. Neugebauer that the Koller tour was being described at present, by the leading German breeders in Germany, as a combination of hollow roll, bass, and glucke, making a triple note of the tour. As the birds did not sing, the members could not form any definite opinion, but the general impression seemed to be that the tour was a combination of hollow roll and water glucke only. However, the other birds sang, and numerous questions were asked by the novices, and answered by the experts present. A vote of thanks was given to Messrs. Lester, Neugebauer, Randall, Roehl, and T. Slade for their kindness in bringing birds to the meeting. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded a very enjoyable evening.—J. W. Norris, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

First monthly meeting held Norfolk Hotel Cafe, January 10th, when a very large and enthusiastic number of fanciers assembled. Mr. T. Dawn occupied the chair. He pointed out that the great importance of that meeting, in his opinion, was really the foundation of what he hoped would prove one of the most successful societies in the British Isles. It was really the first meeting since the formation of the society. The rules with which they had to deal were really the foundation, as without good rules they could not have an up-to-date and progressive society. The suggested rules were then submitted by the Secretary. Each was dealt with separately. They were passed practically as read. The programme for the year was passed as follows: Feb., table show for matched pairs of Canaries; judge, Mr. J. C. Barnes. March, lecture on "The Yorkshire Canary," by Mr. W. Mundell. April, table show of Brit., 2 classes; judge, Mr. E. Smith; also paper on Brit. birds. May, arrangements for nest feather show. June, table show of For. birds, 2 classes; also lecture on Foreign birds by Mr. E. Smith. July, lecture on "The Norwich Canary," by Mr J. Woodall. August, lecture, "Preparing birds for exhibition." Sept., arrangements for all-England show. October, to commence at 7 p.m., washing exhibition by Mr. J. Bailey. November, question night. December, annual general meeting; election of officers, etc. On Sunday, June 18th, a ramble will take place in the Worksop district, which is one of the prettiest in England, and nowhere does bird life abound more. July 15th has been decided upon for the nest feather show. We are hoping for a big entry, as we are giving fixed prize money, 4s., 2s., 1s. (no sliding scale this time, boys!). On Sunday, July 16th, another ramble will take place, and friend Fletcher is going to take us into Derbyshire. November 3rd and 4th is the date of the great event of the year—the All-England Show, to be held in the Cutler's Hall. Judges, Messrs. J. H. Roe and C. Houlton. Although the society is only one month old, we have got the promise of 3 silver cups to be won by members, one given by Mr. Mennott, one by Messrs. T. and H. Bishop, and one by D. Mullins, Esq., ex-Mayor of Rotherham. A lengthy discussion re our headquarters ended eventually in our deciding upon the Rose and Crown Hotel, Wingate. Two rooms are placed at our disposal, one for committee meetings and the large clubroom for monthly meetings, table shows, etc., and by special arrangement no refreshments have to be served in the clubroom on meeting nights. Don't forget, meetings are held the first Tuesday in each month. February 7th is the next meeting night—pair show of Canaries. Fanciers, bring your birds with you and pay your subscriptions. You will be proposed same night and allowed to compete for all prizes.—John A. T. Woodall, Correspondent.

SHETTLESTON AND DIST. C.B.S.

Annual meeting held Houston's Restaurant Jan. 14, Mr. Marr presiding over a good turnout. Office bearers elected: President, Mr. D. McFarlane; vice-presidents, Messrs. G. Henderson and M. Semple; committee, Messrs. Mackay, Duncan, Christie, Hendric, McGuiness, Cougan, and Marr; secretary and treasurer, A. Berry. The balance-sheet was submitted by the auditors, Messrs. Mackay and Christie, showing a good balance in hand. Agreed, to hold a table show of British birds, two classes, Goldfinch and Lesser Redpoll, Feb. 11, Houston's Restaurant, 6 o'clock. The secretary was instructed to ask Mr. Lennie to act as judge. Fanciers in the district wishing to compete can have full particulars from me.—Andrew Berry, Sec.

BIGGAR AND DISTRICT.

Meeting held Mrs. Wilson's Hall, West End, January 11th, to arrange a club show, duly fixed for February 1st. The following were elected office-bearers: President, Mr. J. Shand; vice-president, Mr. R. Murray; secretary, Mr. Wm. Ormiston, jun.; treasurer, Mr. G. Mitchell; committee, Messrs. J. Dobbie, F. Anderson, A. Campbell, A. Selkirk, and T. Renwick. Last year's balance-sheet was read and was considered satisfactory, showing a balance in hand of 4s. 3d. Nine classes were added to the schedule, making 14 in all—8 for Brit., 2 fed, and 1 non-fed Nor., and 3 for the "wee gems." Mr. J. Mason (Peebles) will judge the Britishers, and Mr. McFadzen (Lanark) the Canaries. Biggar is making rapid and most satisfactory strides towards the pinnacle of success. Many new fanciers have "sprung up" in the district. Membership is confined to a radius of five miles.—Alexander Bryden.

ROCHDALE (Good Intent) O.S.

Annual meeting held January 4th, when we had a grand muster of members. In the unavoidable absence of our President, our Vice-President (Mr. W. T. Banks) presided. A review of the year's work was given, but I am sorry to say that we had a slight loss on our open show. The Financial Secretary's and Treasurer's reports were passed as satisfactory. Election of officers: Our respected President (Mr. T. H. Collinge) was again elected; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. Gashell, G. Adams, W. T. Banks, J. Battye, J. Lord, R. Brown, and C. Pleasance; Committee, Messrs. Lees, Newill, Coupe, Holt, and Faulkner; Auditors, Messrs. Pleasance and T. Holt; Treasurer, W. Adams; Secretary, Mr. E. Hartley, 3, Rock Cottages, Dyehouse Lane, Smallbridge. We had the pleasure of adding five new members to our books. We arranged two inter-club shows with Heyworth, which are now in progress, and are arousing great interest in the district owing to some well-known open winners being in the possession of the members who have bred them. Decided, that we await further news re the Cage Bird Union, it being left in the hands of our C.B.U. delegate to deal with the matter and report later when the subject of the open show will come under discussion also; and we hope all the members will rally round and attend the meeting. On account of ill-health, I have had to give up practically all my birds and all else for a time.—Wm. Adams, Late Sec.

MUSSELBURGH O.S.

Third annual meeting, held Jan. 14th. The president, Mr. W. R. Dunn, occupied the chair. Balance sheet read and passed, and the prize money was paid. The election of office bearers for the year 1911-12: Mr. Dunn, in a neat little speech, said he felt he could not again accept office, for business reasons. Mr. Dunn was urged to reconsider his decision, and accept office, but declined. The following were appointed: President, Mr. J. Pearson; vice-president, A. Hoyle; treasurer, Mr. T. Storie; committee, Messrs. W. R. Dunn, J. Barr, T. Taylor, C. Watt, A. Moffat, D. Moffat, G. Storie, and J. Little; Messrs. J. Smeaton and J. Lawson were appointed auditors. The following motions were tabled for meeting, Feb. 28th.—No. 1, J. Barr: "That a membership fee of 2s. 6d. per annum, and 6d. per entry, be charged." No. 2: J. Smeaton: "That joint members, paying as one member, be abolished, and each pay as a separate member." No. 3, Mr. Dunn: "That a canvasser be appointed to collect donations and specials—someone not connected with the society." Members who are unable to attend the next meeting, please note that votes by post will be accepted, providing the voting papers are in the hands of the secretary not later than Feb. 24th. Agreed, to hold a smoking concert, the date, place, etc., to be settled later. The following new members were admitted: Messrs. R. Hay, S. Stewart, Crearer and Hume. Date of annual show, Nov. 25th.—Wm. Nisbet, Sec.

THE SHOWS.

SLIGO.

Sligo C.B.S. tenth annual show, held Gillooly Memorial Hall Jan. 11th and 12th. The hall in one of the finest in the British Isles, for an exhibition of cage birds, being very lofty and well lighted all round. The birds were nicely staged by the show manager (Mr. E. J. Tighe) and his staff, and they deserve great praise for the manner in which they carried out their work. The birds were fed and watered, and to keep the public from handling them, a wire railing was placed round the room to protect the exhibits. Mr. C. J. Mulligan, the hon. sec., was in attendance both days, and he stuck to his work like a Trojan. The committee, who were all willing workers, are as follows: Major Pollock, Verdon, Reilly, Smitb, Gallagher, Devins, Richardson, Howley, O'Reilly, Osborne, Lambert, Williamson, Ross, M'Cormick. There was here a collection of the best representatives in the whole of Ireland, birds coming from both the north and south. The Norwich were a fine lot, some grand birds being exhibited by fanciers living in Belfast. The Yorkshires were small in number, but the quality was well represented. Mr. Devins's old yellow was special for best in show. We also liked Mr. Hawkins' cinnamon marked yellow. The Britishers turned up well, but we think we have seen better quality here. The Linnets and Goldfinches did not come up to our expectations. The following gentlemen were the winners of specials: Messrs. Devins, Connell, Faith, Valse, Gallagher, Hawkins, Mulligan, Williamson, Dawson, O'Hara, Tighe, Mulcahy, J. Lavery, and Arnstein. The attendance during the two days the exhibition was open was very good, and nothing but praise can be given to the hard-working committee in their endeavour to make the show a success. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) made the awards.

PROVINCIAL ROLLER C.C.

Third annual open singing contest held Textile Hall, Bury, January 13th and 14th. The show was a record, there being more entries than at any previous contest held in England, whilst the quality was of the best. Mr. A. Percival, the secretary, had all the arrangements well in hand. The hall is all that can be desired for a contest, being very well lighted and nicely heated. The judges were Messrs. Massey (Bolton), Lyons (Blackburn), and Walton (Leeds).

Visitors turned up very fairly (considering the damp and foggy weather), and amongst them we noticed Messrs F. Barnett, T. W. Walton, and several others from Leeds, Messrs. Groves and Ives, from Grimsby, Messrs. Wirth and Smalley, from Liverpool, and others from Crewe, Southport, Blackburn, Wigan, etc. Mr. A. Foulds has the honour of holding the P.R.C.C. trophy, a valuable silver cup; Mr. T. Twigg won the cup presented by Mr. Lester for best bird in Class 4, and Mr. Iver Hanbury the cup presented by Mr. R. Kremner for best bird in Class 2. A good number of the birds were taken away by the owners on the Saturday; those left over were dispatched on the Monday shortly after noon. The prize money has, we understaud, all been paid, and the winners of cups, medals, etc., will receive same in the course of a few days.

STAVELEY.

Second annual show held January 14th. The large club-room attached to the Speedwell Inn provided capital accommodation for the staging of the exhibits. Entries came up well. The President is Mr. T. Kay, and the Vice-President Mr. S. Bunting; both are enthusiastic well-wishers of the Society. The committee consists of a band of well-known and willing workers, praise being due to Messrs. H. Smith, A. Dodd, J. H. Weeks, J. Askew, W. Lancaster, J. Lancaster, W. Bradley, H. Holden, and H. Gregory; each and everyone gave useful assistance. The stewards were Messrs. H. Gregory, J. H. Weeks, J. Lancaster, T. Kay, A. Dodd, and J. Askew. The management throughout was most excellent, and the staging was of a very neat description. Cards were displayed quickly as each class was adjudicated upon. A truer set of fanciers it would be a difficult task to locate. Mr. C. Brammall, the worthy secretary, is the right man in the right place, and under his tuition Staveley Society is bound to progress. Mr. G. Dodd (the host) is heart and soul in the affairs of the Society. Specials were as follows: Handsome challenge cup (members only), captured by Mr. A. Dodd, with a very fine trio of Norwich; same owner claiming special for best Nor. in show, with a lovely cl. yell. cock. Best Yorks (a magnificent mkd. yell. cock), Messrs. Blackburn and Mitchell. H. Sheldon, standing 1st in the variety class, took the special; best Brit. (a very choice Linnet), Mr. J. Lockwood; best member's Yorks, Mr. R. Wilson; Nor., Mr. A. Dodd; For. (open), Mr. W. Baxby. The judge was Mr. J. C. Barnes (Sheffield), and his placings were well received.

BATHGATE.

Bathgate and Dist. C.B.S. 17th annual show held January 14th in the old venue, viz., the Corn Exchange—a hall which in all respects it would be hard to beat, possessing as it does a high and lofty roof with plenty of light couing therefrom, and allowing all the exhibits to be seen without any inconvenience The staging was neatly arranged round the three sides of room in three tiers, with a stretch of same pattern running down the centre of the floor, leaving plenty of floor space for the visitors who generally patronise this event in large numbers. We were disappointed to learn that the entries had not come forward as usual, the total mustering 500 in all, or something like 200 down on last year's. Of this deficit 100 is accounted for by the heavy snowstorms experienced during the past week in the North of Scotland, not one entry being received from that quarter. The Crest section was a failure, a total entry of 7 being received over the 4 classes provided for them, and the executive were forced to amalgamate them into one class Norwich Plainheads, although down on last year's total, were a very good all-round lot, the pick of the lot being the winning unflighted hen staged by Mr. R. Martin (Kirkintilloch), and the winning buff cock belonging to Mr. W. R. Finnie (Edinburgh). Mr. A. McFarlane (Glasgow) also had a grand team forward. In point of numbers the Border Fancy section was the worst in the show, but the quality of the birds was very good, the cream of this variety being present; and there was not one bad one in the lot. A large share of the prizes crossed the border, all accounted for by Mr. J. S. Wilson (Workington). The Mules, British, and Foreign birds all over were a good collection, although we have seen larger displays at Bathgate in many of the classes. Messrs. McCaw and Sykes judged these sections, the former taking the even numbers, and the latter the odd. In the Clear Ticked and Variegated Mule class Mr. McCaw passed the well-known clear Linuet-Canary Mule ("Perfection"), the property of Messrs. Duncan and Logan, as a Canary, and this caused quite a sensation among the exhibitors. However, the judge, after carefully examining it, failed to see the cross and passed it as stated. The classes throughout were well contested, many well-known winners again doing battle. Possibly the Glasgow show of next week would tend to reduce the entries a shade, but taken all over, they were good, and the awards of the judges were, on the whole, well received. On counting the points gained for the Bald challenge cup, for most points over the show, we make Mr. Hoyle the winner with 55 points, being hotly chased by Messrs. Patterson (Chirnside) who totalled 54 points, while P. McQuiston, who had also a grand team of Britishers forward, and Mr. A. McFarlane, followed with 52 and 51 points respectively. We were pleased to note that the two classes for Foreign birds had been reinstated, and would like to have seen them a bit better supported, as they are no doubt the centre of attraction. We found some of the old faces still to the fore among the officials, these doing their best for their society. We also noted some new faces; and all were anxious to do what they could to help. The President is just Jas. Livingstone, and nothing more. It was he who wrote to the Press at the beginning of the season bidding good-bye to all bird shows; but still here we find him the same, as diligent and as enthusiastic as ever, which he is likely to be to the end of the chapter. The Vice-President, Mr. E. Cain, is also well known, and lends a willing hand. In Mr. Alex. Nicol the society has found a worthy successor to Bob Bald in the secretarial way, and he had a good grip of all matters connected with his onerous duties, being ably assisted by Mr. J. Nicholson, an earnest recruit. We were sorry to learn that the worthy Treasurer and late Secretary, Mr. Robert Bald, had been laid up with Influenza, and we were more than delighted to meet the redoubtable Robert in the afternoon, although he was even then hardly himself. The judges were: For Norwich, Mr. J. Dick (Kirkintilloch); for Border Fancies and Yorkshires, Mr. A. Gilchrist (Coldstream); for Mules, British, and Foreign birds, Messrs. R. McCaw (Kilmarnock) and Crossley Sykes (Musselburgh), all of whom succeeded in pleasing the majority, grumbling being practically at a discount.

BUCKIE.

With the exception of Keith, the show season in the North of Scotland was drawn to a close at Buckie off January 11th, when the thirteenth annual show of the Buckie Association was held in the Fishermen's Hall. Considering the show is late in the season, there was a fairly good entry in the Canary section, some really fine exhibits being shown. Great praise is due to the secretary, Mr. A. L. B. Melvin, along with an energetic committee, under the guidance of Mr. N. Robertson, for the manner in which everything was conducted. Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh) judged.

PLUMSTEAD AND WOOLWICH.

Plumstead and Woolwich C.B.S. fourth annual show held the Schools, Beresford Street, Woolwich, January 12 and 13. Thanks to the efforts of the secretaries, Messrs. Dibley and Meades, there was a capital cutry, and the big room was nicely filled with exhibits. The chubby Norwich were very well represeuted. Mr. T. Irons (Northamptou) secured special for best bird iu this section. The quality was outstandingly good. Mr. Rennle put down his two unfighted Yorkies that have been so much admired this season. Several men from the North gave their charmers another run before the Palace Show. Mr. H. H. Tower's yellow hen was much admired, her position and type being about perfect. The two classes for Borders filled fairly well. If the southern breeders are so strong as to require a club, they should certainly show it in a more practical form by supporting classes when provided. Fourteen Borders in two classes is not at all encouraging. The British bird section was undoubtedly a good one, some really high-class birds being on view. The management was all that could be desired, and was in the capable hands of Messrs. Dibley and Meades, the secretaries, who were ably assisted by Messrs. Macmillan, Woolyar, G. Smith, Allen Hazell, Hall, jun., and J. Smith. The Hall was clean and tidy, free from draught, and comfortably warm, and the birds carefully attended to. Mr. Robson judged the Canaries, and Mr. Silver the British and foreign birds and Mules.

IRVINE.

The recently reconstructed Irvine and District O.S. brought off their second annual show, 14th January. This was really the best of the smaller shows, if we may be allowed to call it by that description, we have had the pleasure of attending for some time. They have been extremely fortunate in their choice of office bearers, the popular Provost of the Ancient Burgh (Provost Borland) taking a deep interest in their welfare; he personally supervised the arrangements and welcomed exhibitors and visitors. The hon. secretaries and treasurers, Messrs J. Borland junr., and A. Black, junr., were particularly hard working and obliging in the performance of their arduous duties, and so successful were they in their endeavours that we could not find a single fault with their arrangements. They had the assistance of a committee of experienced fanciers, and we hope their labours met with the financial success they so well deserved. The show was held in the New Drill Hall, which is admirably adapted for the purpose. The British bird classes were above the average in both quantity and quality, and rarely have we seen such outstanding competition. Mr. Mossie adjudicated in the Border Fancy classes; he is evidently a master hand and has nothing to learn in this particular variety. Mr. C. Campbell judged all other classes, and, like his brother judge, made no mistakes.

LUDLOW.

Show held Town Hall, January 12th. Owing to the two previous open shows proving failures, the executive decided to curtail the open classes this year, which they did, only providing four. These were poorly filled. The local classes, however, were well filled, and contained some nice exhibits. The president (R. de Courcy Peele, Esq.) kindly provided a silver cup for competition among the members for best Canary; this was secured by the secretary, Mr. Woof, with a good Yell. Norwich shown in nice trim, being closely pressed by the winning Yorks. shown by Mr. Hughes. The secretary, Mr. Woof, discharged his duties well, and had everything in apple-pie order. Mr. A. C. Brotherhood judged.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE. The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

Silk's Champion Norwich.

Do not buy cheap, so-called champion strains; take advice from a Norwich specialist. I keep no other variety. My aviaries have some of the most choice specimens of Norwich in the British Isles. Blood tells despite what you hear to the contrary. I have a genuine life experience in this most popular variety. Being, as all the cage bird Fancy knows, an expert on this variety, and one of the largest breeders (please note breeder), I can supply pairs or single birds; the finest value obtainable. Pairs from 20/- to 60/-; single birds from 10/- to 40/- each. I keep no 10/6 pairs, which are a waste of time and money. Fanciers requiring something which will breed really high-class specimens should send to the fountain-head. Refuse other so-called just as good strains. Kindly state what price you are prepared to pay, to save unnecessary correspondence. I will guaranteee for satisfaction, or return cash in full; all birds on three days' approval.

I KNOW IT'S RUDE

to point, but I must point out to you the exceptionally good value I offer in Roller Canaries. I care not how good other advertisers say their birds are, I distinctly say mine are better, and to prove this I want you to have a Roller from elsewhere and a Leipzig Roller from me; test them side by side for a week, and if mine is not far the best return it, and I will refund every penny of your money. I am the only importer in England of Weber's Leipzig Rollers, and now have a grand lot all in full song day and gaslight, with long hollow and double rolls, sweet silvery trills, waterbubble runs, piccolo trills, soft roulades, jug-jug of Nightingale, bell, harp, gong, and flute notes, etc., and guaranteed entirely free from any harsh or objectable notes whatever, price 7/6 and 8/6 each; special bandmasters, which excel in the hollow and bass rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. I also have a magnificent collection of pure Seifert contest Rollers, in glorious song, price 15/-, 20/-, and 30/- each. These are of real Seifert blood, and have hollow, hollow bell, hass, schockel, and glucke notes to perfection. Leipzig Roller hens, 2/6 each, 4/- couple. Special Roller singing cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each. For those who like loud noisy songsters, I have a splendid lot of Hartz cocks, in full, vigorous song, price 5/6 each; Hartz hens, 2/- each, 3/- couple. All sent on full week's trial at my risk, either on receipt of cash or "Cage Birds" deposit system, and money returned in full if every satisfaction not given. I care not how hard a man is to please, I guarantee to do so if humanly possible, as the following letters will show:—"8, South Eaton Place, London, Dec. 28.—Sir,—Rollers have turned out a treat, and want a lot of beating at price. I am very well satisfied. — Yours, A. Frederick." "1, Leicester-st., Phibsborough, Dublin, Dec. 26th.—Sir,—I am well pleased with Hartz cock you sent. It soon started singing. Thanks for satisfactory business.—Yours, Wm. Wynne." "2, Brachead Place, Saltcoats, Dec. 24th.—Sir,—Leipzig Roller arrived safe, and I am well pleased. It sings lovely. Also the first one you sent is a grand bird. I would not sell it for double the amount.—Yours, J. Taylor." "245, Cowley-rd., Oxford, Dec. 23rd. Sir,—The two Rollers arrived safely and I am very pleased with both. They are singing lovely, six o'clock in morning or twelve at night, they don't care, they sing just the same.—Yours, A. Tombs." "London-rd., Alderney Edge, Dec. 22nd.—Sir, I thank you for Roller received; it gives every satisfaction. Thanking you very much for sending such a good bird.—Yours, G. Birkin." "Dowell-st., Honiton, Devon, Dec. 22nd.—Sir,—Bird arrived safe and well. I am extremely obliged to you for sending such a beautiful songster. It sang soon after arrival, and has improved since.—Yours, A. Hussey." "60, Vivian-st., Tylorstown, Pontypridd, Dec. 22nd.—Sir,—Received Roller alright, and am very pleased with it. He is a champion singer; started soon as unpacked, and keeps on day and gaslight.—Yours, Isaac Davies." "12, White-st., Felling, Dec. 20th.—Sir,—Received Leipzig Roller carefully packed, and started singing, and is the sweetest Roller I ever heard at the price.—Yours, W. Ward." All birds are stamped on wing, "Hans Waher, Leipzig," and I am the only man in the trade that can supply you with them, so if you want a Roller that will sing 24 hours a day, send to me, and you may rely upon having one. (See British bird column.)

The Roller is a lovely singer and I am highly satisfied with him. We were much set up with going round your place, and we were very much delighted with the birds. We have never seen so many before. It is a real treat for anyone to go round your place. It would do any bird fancier good, I don't care who he is or where he comes from.—Henry F. DYKES' YORKSHIRES.

Read a few more opinions received to-day. In fact, I am receiving similar letters almost every post. "13, St. Aidain's-crescent, Annfield Plain, Jan. 23rd, 1911.—Just a line to let you know the Yellow Yorkshire hen I got from you last breeding season has done well for me. I showed her, and she had 1st at Leadgate (class of 12), and 1st at Annfield Plain. I bred two nests from her, and she reared eight young, two of them winning 1st for me at Annfield Plain. So I think no one could wish for better results. I shall require more birds in a few weeks, and shall certainly give you my order.—G. Lane to L. Dykes." "47, Frodingham-road, Scunthorpe, Jan. 23rd, 1911.—Received bird in good condition, which gives great satisfaction, as others I have had from you have done. There are other members who require stock birds, and you will surely receive their orders, as the honest way you treat your customers is worthy of anyone's recommendation.—J. Keech, Treasurer Scunthorpe C.B.S., to L. Dykes." I could fill a page with letters similar to above, but space will not allow me to do so; but same are filed for inspection at any time.

My Yorkshires have been bang at the top all the season, and for years past have won thousands of prizes, cups, medals, and specials too numerous to mention. See show reports. As the show season is now almost finished I have several of my winners for disposal. If you want a winner, or stock birds to breed winners, send full particulars, and I will do my best to please you. I shall be pleased if you will allow me to send you one (or more) on approval against any others. Note following prices, and remember, Yorkshires (not mongrels), that for length, type and quality cannot be beaten. I have them in clears, ticked, green marked, Cinn. marked, and a few pure greens. Champion long, slim Yorkshire cocks, at 5/6, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/- each. Lovely quality hens at 3/6, 4/6, 6/6, 8/6, 10/6, 12/6 each. Pairs, carefully matched, at 8/6, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, 30/- per pair. Travelling cages, 3d. Also a few chubby Norwich, and some clinking Crests and Crest-breds at reasonable prices. Come and see them for yourself, or send post card for free illustrated price list.

Easy payments arranged, and birds sent off on receipt of first payment. All on a full week's approval, at my risk.

Place your orders with the old reliable Breeder, Exhibitor, and Judge, who breeds his own winners, and has won over 300 cash prizes, cups, medals, etc., during the present season, at most leading shows, and remember I am the only one exhibiting of the name of Dykes, so am not claiming credit that is due to someone else.

TO THE NOVICE!

A PAIR OF NORWICH PLAINHEADS, YORKSHIRES, OR HARTZ MOUNTAIN ROLLERS, PROPERLY MATCHED, AND THE COCK ON SONG, AT 8/6 AND 10/6.

AMATEURS

ANY OF THE FOLLOWING, BREEDERS WILL FIND A GOOD INVESTMENT:—

Special Matched Pairs of prize-bred Norwich Plainheads at 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, and 20/-. Crested ditto, 15/-, 20/-, 25/-, and 30/-. Yorkshires, 10/6, 12/6, 15/-, 20/-. Border Fancies, 10/6, 12/6. These are the best value ever offered. Cages, 3d.

For every other variety send for the largest, completest, and the First Illustrated Canary price list ever published, and do not be gulled with imitations, which will bring only disappointment and delay, for I Have the Birds I offer; that means a good deal more than some people recognise.

I also offer, suitable for above pairs, a good, serviceable breeding cage, fitted complete, price 3/6; ditto, fitted with sand trays, and sanitary utensils, 5/-.

Remember that I personally match these up myself, and exercise the same care as if they cost pounds, and just as I would do if I were pairing for myself. In fact, I always make it a rule to thoroughly satisfy in selection—then I am sure I shall satisfy my customer, i.e., if satisfaction is possible. Now, this may not sound like anything very particular, at the same time it is of the utmost importance to the purchaser, as everything depends upon this matching as to what results are likely to be; hence, you want it done by someone who not only knows what is right and what is wrong, but also someone who takes an interest in doing so, to get the only best results possible from the class of birds purchased.

Splendid Songster.

72, St. George's-road, Bristol, Jan. 19th, 1911.—I am very well satisfied with the bird. He is a splendid songster, and I hope to give you another order in a few days.—R. Woods to W. Rudd.

Delighted.

4, Sumatra-road, W. Hampstead, London, N.W., Jan. 18th, 1911.—I wish to say how delighted we are with the Canary we had of you. He sings splendidly, and seems in the best of condition. Shall recommend anyone to you.—H. Johnson to W. Rudd.

Something of a Record which can be Verified.

Kilkee, Co. Clare, Ireland, Jan. 16th, 1911.—I am writing this thinking you may like to hear something of a record of a pair of birds I had from you four years ago. I paid 12/6 for the cock and 7/6 for the hen, and I have been breeding with them for the four seasons. I have not kept a proper record of each bird reared, but the hen has laid three and sometimes four clutches of eggs each year, and nearly every egg has been fertile; but the most remarkable thing is that all the birds reared have been cocks. She has not given me a single hen for the whole of the four seasons (and she has only had one die in the nest, or rather dragged out, and did not see it in time). If anyone who should happen to see this doubts the truth of it, I can give proof of it being correct by persons who have seen the young, and also know how most of them have been disposed of. This is not the only pair I have had from you, as you know, and I must say that all the birds I have had have been good value for the money, and some have gone into pounds, and all this is combined with civility, promptitude, and instruction when asked for.—E. Southend to W. Rudd.

An Unsolicited Fact Worth Noting.

28, Rutland-road, Hove, Jan. 17th, 1911.—The pair of Yorkshires arrived quite safe, and am perfectly satisfied with them. Shall want another pair later. —W. Steele to W. Rudd.

An Unsolicited Fact Worth Noting.

14, Chandler's-hill, Marsh-lane, Chesterfield, Jan. 21st, 1911.—I thank you very much for sending my pair of Yorkshires so soon. I am very pleased with them. My friends say I could not have been better suited anywhere.—F. Foster to W. Rudd.

Two Gems.

40, Bridge-end, Leeds, Jan. 22nd, 1911.—Birds arrived safe and well. Am very pleased with them. They are two gems. Many thanks for your good judgment. The cage is the very thing I wanted. Shall always patronise you.—T. Dawson to W. Rudd.

Your Motto Seems: Quality up! Price Down!

Hungerford Villa, St. Paul's, Cheltenham, Jan. 18th, 1911.—Bird arrived quite safe. I was much surprised to hear it singing the same day of its arrival. I consider the bird an excellent one. Your motto is: "Quality Up! Prices Down!"—F. C. Venn to W. Rudd.

Lythell were admitted members. Mr. F. Rhodes moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. W. Morement, our retiring assistant secretary, for his work during the past year; we were very sorry to lose him. Mr. J. S. Clarkson seconded, and it was carried. Mr. Morement, in reply, said he felt sure that in Mr. J. Roe they would have a good substitute. Mr. F. Ludbrook moved and Mr. F. Hammond seconded, in a pretty speech, a vote of thanks to the secretary. The latter mentioned the splendid work of the secretary, Mr. F. Rhodes, referring to the way he had stuck to his work through thick and thin, and there was not in the Yorkshire Union a better or a more capable secretary. Mr. Rhodes thanked them, saying that he felt more satisfied at seeing the society in such a splendid position, and he would do his best to add to it. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Wharton (chairman) was passed, also to the delegates.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Annual general meeting at headquarters on January 4th, Mr. J. Burke (vice-chair) presiding. Secretary reported that as there were still many sums owing to the society (including members' subscriptions), he was not in a position to present a balance-sheet that evening, but he estimated there would be a shortage of fully £8 to be made up by the members. This was soon solved when Mr. A. J. Smith returned his prize money to the society, others quickly following suit with all or part, and the non-winners, not to be outdone, all promised or gave towards the deficiency, and when the meeting broke up only another £3 was left for the absent ones to make good. The next item "To decide whether we remain affiliated to the Cage Bird Union," led to a lively discussion. Many members thought we ought to support the Union's efforts in their appeal to the railway companies by remaining affiliated; while others wanted to know what the Union had done. It was pointed out that this society had benefitted in the past by preventing clashing of show dates locally. Then, as regards mixed shows, better attention was now given to the cage bird section, while the fear of punishment had no doubt deterred exhibitors from dishonest practices. The Midlands generally being free of complaint on this heading, Secretary said that he found one of the members had shown at Bromsgrove Show, which was not affiliated to the C.B.U., and he was reporting him. Upon a vote the Union's supporters won by nearly a two to one majority, thereupon Mr. A. J. Smith stated he should resign membership (Rule 22 being the stumbling block), to the great regret of all, as he was a splendid worker and always ready to assist financially. The members hope he will reconsider his decision. The Secretary reported that according to his figures, our society had won the Inter-Club Challenge Cup (on view at the meeting), having scored 282 points; Wolverhampton being second with 277½ and West Bromwich third with 182½ points. Mr. P. Victor Williams having gained most points for winning society would have possession of the cup until show season. Rumours of alleged wrong-doing have been circulated among a section of the members. The first allegation was that a member, who it was reported had won first prizes many years ago, had this season shown in novice Norwich classes. The second, that another member had been exhibiting in another fancier's name in the novice Yorkshire classes; but proofs had not been forthcoming, and as the alleged defaulters were present, he (the Secretary) thought it proper that these members should make some statement. This they did, and the meeting decided that the explanations were quite satisfactory and accepted them. After a vote of sympathy had been passed to our Chairman (Mr. Broadhurst), who has not yet recovered from the operation for appendicitis; and of thanks to Mr. Webb for use of club-room; also thanks to officers for services during the past year, the election for 1911 took place, and resulted: President, J. A. Eckersley, Esq.; Vice-Presidents, Messrs. W. W. Butler, J. Webb, H. C. Wilkins, A. Broadhurst; Chairman, Mr. J. Burke; Vice-Chairman, Mr. G. E. Hillett; Treas., Mr. J. Harvey; Secretary, Mr. de Maillet was pressed very hard but declined office, offering to assist his successor when required, and Mr. S. Mole, late assist. secretary, was thereupon elected unanimously. Committee: Messrs. Derry, Dipple, de Maillet, Hughes, J. H. Jones, F. Peace, Walton, and Wright. Before the meeting closed five nominations for membership were received, and we hope to arrange a series of lectures, etc., shortly for the benefit of the younger fanciers.—J. H. de Maillet, Retiring Hon. Sec.

A letter was read re the calling in of our cups. Decided, to write Mr. Johnson re same. Our annual show date was decided for the second Saturday in November. The Secretary was instructed to call a committee to arrange an agenda of a course of lectures for the year. Wildsmith; auditors, H. Hawkins and J. G. Stephenson; committee, H. C. Carter, H. Robinson, J. G. Stephenson, and H. Hawkins. The balance sheet for 1910 was submitted and passed, showing a balance in the treasurer's hands of £8 18s. 3½d. Decided to hold annual show Nov. 11th; it was considered that our October date was too early. Decided, that a similar programme be drawn up as last year, for our meeting nights during current year. Pair show fixed for February 25th. The secretary was instructed to write a letter of condolence and sympathy to Mrs. Cleminson, on the sad loss she has sustained in the death of her respected husband. Six new members joined.—R. S. Black, Sec.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Annual general meeting held headquarters, the occasion being the auditors' report and distribution of members' specials. The auditors, Messrs. H. J. Mennard and H. Newby, spoke of the very able way in which our late hon. sec., Mr. Chambers, had carried out the society's business. Mr. Chambers then read the balance-sheet, which showed a balance in hand of £5 0s. 11d. Great praise is due to him for this result. Prizes were presented to the successful exhibitors scoring most points with six-starred birds at our members' shows and open shows. Proposed and seconded, that Mr. Salmon become a member; also that in future all rules be strictly enforced. The following are the officers elected: President, F. Somers, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.; vice-presidents, W. Turton, Esq., and W. Greenwood, Esq.; chairman, Mr. F. Farrar; vice-chairman, Mr. J. P. Moir; committee, Messrs. W. H. Norton, Owen, Hall, H. Smith, Fowler, Dews, Baldwinson, Newby, Flint, and Bristow; hon. treasurer, Mr. E. Norton; assist. hon. sec., Mr. Leo. Smith; hon. sec., W. A. Wilson, 75, Bayswater Mount, Roundhay, Leeds.—W. A. Wilson, Sec.

REDRUTH F.A.

First annual dinner held December 5th, the President, Mr. Nicholas Trestrail, presiding over a large gathering. After the loyal toasts, the chairman gave "Success to the Fanciers' Association," and eulogised the services rendered by the hon. sec. (Mr. T. Sherman), who had laboured indefatigably in bringing the association to its present satisfactory position. Their show last month was a good one, and deserved the excellent patronage it received. He hoped and believed it would become still more prosperous. In response, Mr. T. Sherman said that although the Association was only in its second year, it was being worked on lines which should encourage fanciers in and around Redruth. He regretted having to report a slight decrease in membership, which he attributed to a number of members having left for abroad. The cage birds at the recent show were only 83, as against 103. The total entries numbered 241, as against 279. He anticipated an increase in the future, as a result of the extra special prizes which they would be in a position to offer. This could not fail to add to the keenness of competition, and give zest to breeders. They were greatly indebted to the President and Mr. G. H. Kistler for their gifts of specials. The show was well supported financially, and their funds had benefited substantially. Mr. S. J. Tippett (treasurer) also replied, and submitted a report showing that the show yielded a net profit of £5 3s., which, added to the sum already in hand, made a total balance of £13 15s. Mr. G. H. Kistler submitted "Kindred Societies," and Mr. L. Winn replied as member of the Council of the Redruth Exhibition Society. Mr. J. R. Dungey gave "Redruth Fanciers Show." Mr. W. Kemp, chairman of the committee, replied. An interesting programme of music was contributed by Messrs. G. H. Kistler, T. Jenkin, S. J. Sherman, J. Trestrail, W. Kemp, and J. Clemo.

HARTLEPOOL C.B.S.

Sixth annual general meeting held Y.M.C.A Rooms, Whitby Street, Jan. 11. The chairman, Mr. J. Robinson, presided. Report and balance-sheet presented by the secretary, Mr. E. Woodhead, and were considered very satisfactory. Decided, to limit membership to those residing in the Parliamentary Borough of the Hartlepools. The annual subscription was reduced from 4s. to 2s. 6d., and the members hope this will induce more fanciers to join. Officers elected: President, Lord Furness of Grantley; vice-presidents, S. W. Furness, Esq., M.P., G. E. Hope, Esq., Councillor T. E. Edgar, Councillor Hy. Mason, Major Thomlinson, and Alf. Young, Esq.; chairman, Mr. I. Robinson; hon. auditors, Messrs. J. Ronald and W. Appleton; hon. secretary and treasurer, Mr. E. Woodhead; all members form the committee. Votes of thanks to all those who had rendered services during the past year were passed, and replied to. Decided, to hold next annual show October 28; Messrs. H. W. Battye and J. Maddison have been engaged to adjudicate. Meetings are held on the first Wednesday each month, in the Y.M.C.A. CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, held Jan. 11th. Mr. Grant presided over a large attendance. The following officers were elected: President, W. Theobald, Esq.; chairman, Mr. Grant; vice-chairman, Mr. D. Lewis; asst. hon. sec. and show manager, Mr. W. Bewsett; hon. auditors, Messrs. T. J. King and J. Boulter; hon. auctioneer, Mr. J. H. Boulter; hon. sec. and treasurer, Mr. A. S. Treasure—all re-elected except Mr. Lewis, who takes the place of Mr. Harvey. The secretary said he regretted being unable to produce the balance sheet, but owing to unavoidable circumstances, it was not quite ready; but there was a balance on the right side. The rules were discussed, and two or three minor alterations made. A draft of the syllabus for 1911 was read over. An interesting list of competitions, lectures, and shows is being arranged. Mr. Child proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the officers, making special reference to the open show, which was a record in every way. This was seconded by Mr. Stevens, and carried with acclamation. Mr. Grant briefly responded, and the secretary mentioned that the society had doubled its membership during the year, and that five new members had been elected that evening. It was announced that Mr. Payne would judge the pair show.—A. S. Treasure, Sec.

ATTERCLIFFE AND DIST. C.B.S.

Annual general meeting, held headquarters, Horse and Jockey Hotel, Mr. Havenhand, president, in the chair. The following were elected for 1911: L. Havenhand, president; W. Walker, vice-president; H. Justice, treasurer; W. Richinson, secretary; committee, Messrs. Welbon, Johnson, Richards, Highley, Watson, Grainger, Berry, and Hollingsworth. The balance sheet was submitted by the auditors, Messrs. Havenhand and Walker, and it was unanimously passed as correct, showing a balance in treasurer's hands of £5 14s. 10d. The rules were then revised, several alterations and additions being made; all members attending meetings will be advised of them. It was left to the committee to draw up a syllabus for 1911, to be submitted to the next meeting, February 9th. Decided, to hold table show for breeding pairs (one class each for Nor., Yorks., and Muling Pairs), all members sharing together when the society will add 1s. per class, and Mr. H. Justice (our worthy host), will add 2s. per class. H Justice and L. Havenhand offered 10s. each for a series of table shows, the dates, etc., to be decided later. Any person wishing to join can do so by writing the secretary, or at our next meeting, February 9th, when all fanciers will be welcome. We hope all members will bring at least one pair of birds. Mr. J. Perry was appointed critic.—W. Richinson, Sec.

KENT COUNTY C.B.A.

The Dover "Yorkshire Fanciers' Cup" (or, rather, solid silver double handled tankard, for that is really what it is), has been subscribed for by a few local fanciers, to encourage the breeding of the Yorkshire Canary. Before becoming the absolute property of any competitor (which, by the way, is not confined to subscribers), it has to be won three times, not necessarily in succession; but it is stipulated in the rules which govern the competition that the birds must be bred in Dover and by Dover residents. The first competition took place at the Dover F. and F.S. show, held in November last, in the Market Hall, Dover, and a goodly number of fanciers met at the house of a fellow fancier, who resides not a thousand miles from Esplanade Hotel, which faces the Prince of Wales's Pier, Dover, for the purpose of making the presentation to the winner. Not only were Yorkshire fanciers present at this function, but there was a sprinkling of Norwich, Lizard, Mules, and Scots Fancy devotees, all eager to do honour to the comrade who had won the trophy for the first time. All the more credit is due to Mr. Lockett, as amongst the competitors were breeders of the variety who had spent more than double the years at the job than he, nor had a long purse been brought to play a part, as he is a working man, who for a number of years has got his living at the bottom of the sea, and oftener than not sixty or seventy feet below its surface. I understand he has very seldom had to buy a bird to improve his stock after his initial purchase, but has gained his present position by intelligent selection and by determination, backed up by an ideal fancier's wife, who, by the way, knows a Yorkie when she sees one as well as "the best of 'em," and can do the tubbing with consumate dexterity. Mr. E. C. Rayner, in a well chosen speech, made the formal presentation, after which Mr. Lockett in his usual quiet and unostentatious fashion suitably responded, and was evidently deeply touched by the ovation accorded him by all present.—Geo. Sanderson, Hon. Sec. of the K.C.C.B.A.

Annual general meeting, held St. John's School, Paley Road, Jan. 14th, Mr. J. Firth presiding. There was a splendid attendance. C.B.S. is having a show of pairs of Crests and Plainheads at monthly meeting to be held at Headquarters, on February 6th, when I hope to see a real good muster of fanciers, writes Mr. Fredk. The 1910 balance-sheet of the Leicester Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. discloses the fact that the credit balance has, during the year increased from £3 4s. 7d. to £9 15s. 6d., which is a highly satisfactory and creditable result upon which the secretary (Mr. J. E. Wood), and the society's other officers may be congratulated.

The 1910 balance-sheet of the Midland Roller C.C. shows the club to be in a sound financial condition, the balance in hand (£12 12s. 3½d.) being £6 4s. more than the amount brought into the accounts from the previous year. This reflects the greatest credit on Mr. J. H. Willows, the hon. secretary, and his fellow officials.

The proprietors of the "Fanciers' Handbook and Diary" (Messrs. Syme and Co., 24, Church Lane, Hornsey, London), inform us that they are prepared to send copies to readers of CAGE BIRDS for fourpence, post free, the usual price being 1s. It contains advice useful to fanciers, and many recipes for bird-catching, feeding, making bird-lime, hints about skinning and stuffing birds, etc.

The annual report and balance-sheet of the Western Counties O.S. (Plymouth), afford encouraging reading. The society is in a flourishing way, the balance in hand being increased during the year from £33 9s. to £40 6s. 6d. We congratulate Mr. Thos. Pope (the secretary), Mr. C. Dart (the chairman), and members generally on this excellent issue.

OBITUARY.

I am sorry to have to inform you of the death of Catherine Thomson, wife of Mr. Andrew Pryde (one of our esteemed members), writes Mr. William Proudfoot, sec. and treas. of the Glasgow West End C.B.C. The sympathy of all our members goes out to him in his sad bereavement.

I am sorry to inform you, writes J. F. Smith (Scarborough), of the death of the wife of Mr. Charles Shaw, an old and respected member of the cage bird Fancy. The deceased lady was only taken ill on Saturday night, dying early the following Monday morning. Mr. Shaw will, I am sure, have the sympathy of his many friends in the Fancy.

Mr. THOS. MILLIGAN (Falkirk).

It is with the deepest regret that we have to announce the death of one of our members, Mr. Thomas Milligan, who was employed in Carron Iron Works, and on January 14th, while at work met with a fatal accident, writes Mr. R. Hamilton, sec. of the Falkirk and Dis. C.B.S. Mr. Milligan was engaged cleaning boiler flues. Through some mistake the water tap which is used for cooling purposes had been screwed on, and while in the flues he sustained serious burns to the body and legs. He was removed to the infirmary, where he died two days later from the injuries. He was a keen Border Fancier, always ready to help in any work of the society. He was also a member of the Stirling, Polmont, and Falkirk Good Intent Societies, who all share their sympathy with the loss of one so young in the Fancy. He leaves a widow and six children.

Kindly note I have changed my address to 6, Eden Vale, Sunderland, to which address all communications should be sent, writes Mr. G. Davidson, secretary Northern Lizard Canary Club. I have now a nice little bird-room, and am anxiously awaiting the coming season, when I hope to do well.

The first annual balance-sheet of the Croydon and Dis. F.A.—that for the year ended December 31st—is a distinctly encouraging document, showing, as it does, a balance on the right side of £10 10s. 11½d. There was a profit on the first annual show of £5 18s. These figures reflect considerable credit on Mr. A. C. N. Hewens, the secretary, and his fellow officials.

The new East Ham C.B.S. has made wonderful progress, writes Mr. B. C. Smith (the club reporter). Mr. Alderman Brooks, J.P., has become president, and Mr. H. Norman, the well-known judge and artist, vice-president. The secretary in place of Mr. H. B. Rout, who acted pro. tem. is Mr. Frederick Fox, 12, Sherrard Road, Forest Gate, E., to whom all applications for membership, etc., should be addressed.

Mr. B. Hollins, of the Zoo, George Street, Hull, asks us to request his correspondents to enclose a stamp with their communications which call for a reply. I have, he writes, received over 1,100 letters in answer to my last advertisement in CAGE BIRDS; but I do not think there was one stamp in a hundred. I make a point of replying to all who write, but I cannot do so at this rate. I am obliged to all who have replied.

The City and Suburban Society Pair and British and Foreign Bird Show at the Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, Marylebone, W., is the rendezvous for to-day (Saturday). In the spacious hall will be illustrated the correct pairing of Canaries; equally, too, will the British section (from the collection of London's well-known fanciers) be found interesting. Near tube and underground railways; Baker Street buses pass corner of street. —Advt.

Much readable and instructive matter is to be found in the January issue of the "Avicultural Magazine." Mrs. Gregory contributes an article on "Some Pheasants, and a Jay," which is beautifully illustrated. Mr. L. M. Seth-Smith writes some "Random notes on birds and nests in Uganda," and Mr. Reginald Phillipps concludes his notes on the breeding of the Painted Finch. "G. A. M." and "Curator" write on "Bird-keeping in Liguria," and the Zoological Gardens respectively. There are other interesting contributions in the issue.

Many thanks for depicting my Clear Buff Norwich cock in the supplement of CAGE BIRDS Birthday Number. I consider him one of the best I have had during my 50 years as a Canary breeder. He has won: 1st at Carlisle, 1909; 1st Wolverhampton, 1909; 1st Northampton, 1909; 1st Cambridge, 1909; 2nd Norwich, 1st Wimbledon, 1st Cambridge, 4th L.C.B.A., 1st and special Plumstead and Woolwich, 1st Luton, 1910. He is closely related to my old winning natural coloured buff I so successfully showed last season and in 1909.—T. Irons (Northampton).

R. A. Newley, the reliable, is entrusted with the disposal of stocks of four well-known breeders of Norwich, prices 20s., 30s., and 40s. pair; rare chance for those commencing a stud, or wishing to infuse new blood. All birds are from good winning strains. R. A. Newley also wishes to notify old and new patrons that he is not having his stall, as in past years, at the Crystal Palace Show, owing to pressure of business; but he will be at the Palace each day of the show, and will be glad to meet patrons. Only address: 24, Stockwell Green, London, S.W.

A FREE TRIP TO THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW.

Result of our Birthday Number Competition.

The competition put forward in our recent Birthday issue, for which a free trip to the forthcoming Crystal Palace Show was the prize, seems to have been a highly popular one, judging by the very large number of readers who entered. A huge pile of coupons has come to hand.

The task set was that of forecasting the total entry received at the 1911 Palace Exhibition, the figures supplied to us by Mr. J. W. Ramsden, the show manager, being used in deciding the competition. Mr. Ramsden's list gives the total entry as 2,600. Here are the figures, section for section:

Only one competitor succeeded in hitting upon this precise number, viz.,

Mr. E. H. Jeacock,
4, Lamb Street,
Coventry,

and we congratulate this fancier upon the acumen displayed which has resulted in his becoming eligible to spend a day at the famous Palace fixture as the guest of CAGE BIRDS.

Although Mr. Jeacock was the only person to fix the entry at 2,600, he was run exceedingly closely in his forecast by Mr. J. Booth (Blackburn), whose total was 2,601, Hard lines! Several other competitors were only beaten by very small margins, notably, Mr. W. Clough (Sutton Mill), 2,595; Messrs. L. James (Burslem), and J. Sheppard (Small Heath), 2,596; A. Widdowfield (Tyne Dock), 2,597, and Miss Flemons (Northampton), 2,597; A. E. Huyton (Blundellsands), 2,598; W. T. Jones (Brynamman), and T. Marwood (Northallerton), 2,603.

Will Mr. Jeacock please communicate with us, stating the day (Friday, Saturday, Monday or Tuesday) upon which he purposes paying his visit to the show?

Should any other competitor claim to have given the figures, 2,600, correctly, he must write us to this effect at once, as any demand for a scrutiny on this ground cannot be entertained unless it reaches us by first post Tuesday next, January 31st.

Will fanciers and secretaries kindly note that I have been elected hon. secretary of the Bangor and Dist. F.S., and all communications regarding this society should in future be addressed to me, writes Mr. W. Aitken, 1, Belmont Street, Bangor, N. Wales. Any fancier wishing to join may do so by forwarding the entrance fee of 1s. Will all members please note that a members' show will be held on February 18th, and that schedules will be ready shortly. Mr. F. Milliard, 58, Orme Road, Bangor, has been appointed show secretary, to whom communications should be sent for the members' show.

Allow me to bear testimony to the merits of CAGE BIRDS as an advertising medium. I don't advertise much, and what little I do wouldn't be missed; but I thought as a certain old woman once thought, "Every little helps," so I sent another journal a small advert. two weeks running with a sort of "help a lame dog over a stile" feeling. I'm no philanthropist, I can't afford to be. One can't keep on sending the same advert. in to a paper week after week on the indefinite chance of a reply, simply because one has a large mind (ahem!) and believes in a certain motto. The following week, the same advert. appeared in CAGE BIRDS, in the paper, with the result that it took all my tobacco money to answer the applications; and as it happened to be just before Christmas, I had to give the postman a larger tip than usual in consequence. Just my luck.—T. Johnson (Southport).

Dainty Calendar in Colours—Free.

Every copy of this week's "Poultry World," dated January 27th, contains a superb calendar upon stiff card, printed in three colours, eyeletted, suitable for hanging up. The entire issue contains many interesting and helpful articles, besides numerous photographs, and a capital selection of "Forum" letters on all topics of the hour. Those of our readers who are interested in poultry-keeping should obtain a copy of this grand issue (out to-day) price one penny, of all newsagents.

Presentation to a Scottish Fancier.

A complimentary dinner was recently given to Dr. J. C. Syson, by the Glasgow Medical Golf Club, of which Dr. Syson was the founder, and has been honorary secretary and treasurer since its inception. The members of the club, as a token of regard for his enthusiasm and labour, presented the doctor on this occasion with a writing bureau, a silver clock, silver vases, and a silver cigarette box, and to Mrs. Syson a gold watch bracelet. Dr. Syson, as our readers are doubtless aware, has interested himself in the welfare of the Yorkshire Canary in Scotland, and with care and consideration, has collected a very fine stock of this variety. His specimens have been exhibited in Scotland during the past two seasons, and have met with considerable success.

A huge number of congratulatory letters has reached us concerning our recent great BIRTHDAY ISSUE, and, space permitting, we shall hope to publish a selection from these next week.

ROUND THE SHOWS.

SKELMANTHORPE.

This was the last of the shows of the Yorkshire Union for the season 1910-11, and the entry was not anything great, and the large room of the Working Men's Club looked rather empty when we walked into it on Saturday last. Skelmanthorpe is not one of the most get-at-able places, it being on a single line branch of railway, with only half-a-dozen trains a day. The room in which the show was held is most ample for a show of 500 or 600 entries; there is plenty of light, and freedom from draughts; the committee are all well-known fanciers, and men who support the other Yorkshire shows in good sporting fashion. We therefore agree with them that they have cause to complain of the poor support accorded to them by other societies in the Union. Apart, however, from this, we think the committee are somewhat to blame, the Gods help those who help themselves we are told, and had our Skelmanthorpe friends made full use of the advertising columns of CAGE BIRDS, we think the result would have been more satisfactory than that which was brought about by depending on the Union members. Other societies in the Union might also consider this aspect of the case, also the distribution of schedules. Unless frequently reminded, men are apt to forget dates and places, and in the present rush of shows, those which advertise the most are those which receive the best support. If the entry was poor the quality was not, and several of the classes were remarkably good, especially that for novice buff hens. It contained 18 entries, and some of them were real beauties; the open unfi. buff cocks were also a fine class; in fact, taking the classes through, the buffs were, as classes, better than the yellows. Mr. S. Morley made an obliging and energetic secretary, and he was most ably assisted by a good hard-working committee, at the head of which was Mr. J. Hellewell. Mr. C. A. House judged.

LONDONDERRY.

First annual show of the Londonderry P.C.B. and B.S. held Union Hall, Derry, January 19th. In every way it proved a great success. In the cage bird section alone there were about 240 entries in 26 classes. The quality of the exhibits was all that could be desired, and competition was very keen. The hall is spacious, well lighted, free from draughts, and splendidly adapted for a show room. The show was well attended during the day, and we predict from "gate" fees the balance will be found to be on the right side. The Norwich section contained some very typical specimens. The Yorkshire section contained some real gems. Mr. McQuade's yell. Yorkshire cock is worthy of special mention. Mr. Kincaid's hen also is a good one. Mules were very fair. In the British bird section some gems were put down. Mr. Mulligan's Goldfinch is a capital one, and Mr. Coyne's grey Linnet would be hard to find fault with. Mr. J. M. Wilton and Mr. A. T. Goligher, the hon. secretaries, were ably assisted by a willing band of workers. Members of the committee: Messrs. Moore, M'Menamin, Kerr, Falconer, Bond, Gilfillan, Baird, Glenn, Morrison, Scott, Taylor, Gallagher, Hyndman, and Cargill. The cards were placed by Mr. P. Pettigrew (Glasgow), and his awards gave every satisfaction. Messrs. Lowry and Scott acted as stewards, and gave valuable assistance.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

KEITH.

Annual show of the Keith C.B., etc., Association held Longmore Hall January 18th. The hall is of grand size and suitable for a show of the kind. The cage birds were staged in a room by themselves, the room being very comfortable and well lit from the sides. The exhibits were ranged in double tiers round the sides, leaving ample room in the centre for visitors. Entries came up fairly well, and the quality of the exhibits was very good. Iu Mr. Charles Ralley the Society possesses a most energetic and hard-working secretary, and we always found him most courteous and obliging, and under his careful management everything passed off without the slightest hitch. He was ably backed up by a hard-working committee, all being thorough fanciers. The show was well patronised by the public. Mr. J. Sandison (Aberdeen) judged.

WEST STANLEY
(Co. Durham).

Third annual show, held Jan. 21st, I.L.P. Hall, Stanley, a place in every way well adapted for the purpose. Entries came up well, totalling 237, nearly the same as last year. The quality throughout was really excellent, many grand birds of outstanding merit being staged; this was especially noticeable in the Norwich, Border, and British bird sections. The staging was neatly arranged round three sides, three tiers high, and the whole made a very creditable display. The whole of the arrangements were in the hands of the genial secretary, Mr. W. Elliot, and in this gentleman the society possess a most able and energetic secretary, courteous and obliging to all, and under his care everything passed off in the most satisfactory manner. He was well supported by a grand body of fanciers, consisting of Messrs. E. Atkinson, J. Bentinct, W. Boyd, T. Burdon, W. Butter, J. Calvert, J. H. Elliot, T. Forster, J. Emmerson, W. Forster, R. Goodchild, R. Humphrey, J. Hunter, M. Mason, J. Murray, K. Peart, E. Slater, W. Stewart, W. Turnbull, Fox, Wilson, Gowland, and Crosby. The beautiful silver cup, presented by Mr. J. Langsdale, for most points with six nominated birds, was won by Mr. W. Butler, the same exhibitor securing special for best bird in show with a clinking unflighted yell. Norwich cock; Sandiford's medal went to same exhibitor. Silver medal, presented by Mr. W. Butler, for most points (donor not competing) was won by Mr. E. Atkinson, while specials for best 2nd Yorkie and best 3rd Border went to Mr. T. Burdon and Mr. J. H. Elliot respectively, the latter gentleman practically sweeping the deck in the Border classes. Fine weather favoured the occasion, and the show was well patronised by the public. The attendance during the afternoon and evening was very good, and we noticed many well-known fanciers there from the surrounding districts. We understand that the sale of tickets in connection with the prize draw was fairly good. Mr. A. Brown judged, and his awards were well received.

LARKHALL, N.B.

The Larkhall O.S. annual show held Jan. 21st, Public Hall. Presdt. of Committee, Mr. W. Hamilton; Vice-Presdt., Mr. J. Archibald; Committee, Messrs. J. Anderson, W. Hamilton, J. W. Clelland, A. Kerr, Wm. Lambie, T Welsh, A. Strang, J. Newlands, M Miller, A. Longmuir, and R. Cummings; Treasurer, Mr. J. Kerr; Minute Sec., Mr. T. McEwan; Secretary, Mr. James McEwan. The hall is lofty and spacious, with plenty of light and entirely free from draughts. Cage birds were staged in lesser hall. There were fifteen classes for cage birds, the total number of entries here being in advance of last year's, and the quality throughout of a high standard. The arrangements of the show were all that could be desired, and reflect much credit on Sec. McEwan and his splendid committee of hard workers. The Society, from the Hon Presdt. downwards, extend a hearty welcome to their number of Hon. Presidents in the person of David Wilson, Esq. (Dunoon) a native of "Larkie," and the son of a former Hon. President who did much for the Society. The judging was got through in good time, and the awards seemed to meet with general approval. There was a large turn-out of visitors and fanciers. The dinner, which took place, as in former years, in the Raphel Hotel, was presided over by well-known and much respected townsmen, Robert Lambie, Esq., J.P., and J. C. Burns, Esq., J.P. Mr. McLay (Kirkintilloch) judged the cage birds.

Making Canary Breeding Pay.

How a beginner is achieving this end with just ordinary Songster Canaries.

F. J. YOUNG (Walworth).

Although I was an absolute novice when I took up the Fancy, an account of my experiences and of how I am now making my Canaries something more than self-supporting may no doubt be of interest. When I started reading CAGE BIRDS many of the practical articles seemed too "advanced" for my understanding, while I thought I should never even know the names of the various seeds and their uses, or the differences between the various sorts of Canaries!

How I Started.

During the summer of 1908 I had an old cage given to me, and after it had knocked about for some time I thought I would get a bird to put in it. So one day, seeing a man selling "genuine Hartz cock Canaries" at one and threepence a time, I bought one. When I had had it some time I began to suspect—and rightly, too—that it was a hen, but not knowing much, I bought another "cock" for one and sixpence; this, however, sang not a note. Soon afterwards I was down "Club Row"—that well-known rendezvous of London birdy men—one Saturday night, and, seeing cock Roller Canaries at 5s. each in a shop window, and all singing fit to burst their throats, I thought I would get one. I picked out the one I considered the stoutest singer, and bore him home in triumph, convinced and satisfied that I had got a real cock Canary at last.

A few days after this a friend gave me what he called a "heavily variegated Yorkshire Canary," that "sang lovely," while in his possession, and was "undoubtedly a cock." Not knowing how to tell the sex by the external appearance of the bird, I took his word for it, and bought a Yellow Yorkie hen to mate him with. This variegated "cock" was about the most "mopy" bird I ever knew, and after a week or so I knew I had another hen, for it began to get "nesty," and carry bits of feather, etc., about in its mouth. All the time I had it it said tweet-tweet, about once a day!

On discovering the bird was a hen, my friend gave me in exchange a good Norwich cock, and I paired this bird with the Yellow Yorkshire hen; at the same time putting the Roller cock with one of the German hens. I got them used to each other in a divided cage, and when they were quite friendly and I saw the cock was feeding the hen, I let them run together. All this time I had kept my birds—five in all—hanging on the wall in the kitchen, and this is where I hung my breeding cages.

A few days after pairing up I gave each couple of birds a nest bag—of course I had already supplied them with nest pans and linings—and for a day or two they amused themselves with making a nice litter in the cage bottom. Then there was a change; the hens set to work and soon made themselves a neat nest apiece, and then started occupying it for all they were worth!

A Disaster.

When I had got the two hens settled on eggs, I removed the cocks to separate cages, as they were too "lively." On the evening of the thirteenth day I put a potful of hard-boiled yolk of egg mixed with breadcrumbs to a proper consistency—crumbly moist—in each cage, and next morning I cautiously had a look at the nests, and was greatly delighted when I saw the Yorkshire hen busily engaged in stuffing four capacious mouths on the end of four ridiculously long and slender necks. The German hen got three chicks out of her three eggs, but to my disgust they died.

Four days afterwards the other youngsters commenced to die. The hen was left miserable and forlorn, and a few days later she, too, gave up the ghost. I felt discouraged, naturally, but I thought I'd have another try, so I purchased a Norwich hen and put her with the cock of the same variety, and I put the Roller cock with the other German hen, which I had not tried.

Then I cast about to find out the reason of my birds dying, but was quite at a loss. I was feeding them properly, they had not been interfered with in any way, and I had looked after them entirely with my own hands. Still, the fact remained that they had died for no apparent reason whatever. At last a friend whom I had told of my loss, asked me where I kept my breeding cages, and I told him "in the kitchen." He then asked me if they were near the ceiling, and I told him "yes, quite 7ft. from the floor." "Ah," he said, "it's the fumes of the gas that killed your birds."

So next time I put one of the German hens and the Norwich hen in the front room, where there was no gas, and they brought up four and three youngsters respectively, while the hen I left in the kitchen hatched out three young, and they died next day. This proved my friend to be right, so now I am careful about gas fumes when breeding.

At the end of the season I had eighteen young birds "on the sticks," besides the five old birds, so I considered myself repaid for my trouble, and the loss of the birds in the early part of the season. Since then I have gone on swimmingly.

I think the hens got on better without the male birds when sitting, as the latter only help to keep the hens away from the eggs longer than they otherwise would be.

Plenty of grit, and fine crushed egg shell (fowl's) I give during the period of laying; also a good pinch of niger seed to the hens.

When the young birds are about eight or ten days old I remove them to a clean nest, as the old one rapidly gets fouled all round the outer edge.

Hybrid Breeding: Its Pleasures and Difficulties.

By E. COLLINS (Barnstaple).

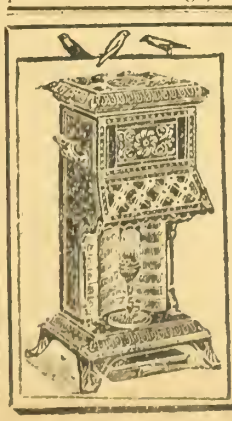
So far I have never placed upon the show bench a Mule or Hybrid which I have not bred myself, or a Britisher which I have not myself moulted and brought into show condition. But this is no guarantee that I shall not purchase a likely winning Hybrid in the future, if at any time I can obtain one at a reasonable figure, for no breeder of Hybrids is likely to do much exhibiting who depends entirely upon the Hybrids he himself produces; and the moulting of these birds is an art in itself. Those among my readers who had the privilege of seeing the magnificent team of Hybrids put down by Mr. Williams, of Liverpool, at the Crystal Palace Show of 1908 will know how much depends upon a successful moult if we are to meet with any great success upon the show bench. No matter how good a Hybrid it may be our good fortune to breed, it will not do much winning unless it is staged to the very best advantage. It is a recognised fact that most of our big exhibitors of Mules and Hybrids will not be troubled with the breeding and rearing of them, choosing rather to buy the ready-made article which in the process of a moult in the hands of these "adepts in the art of moulting" is transformed into a first-class show specimen, ready to go forth into the exhibition world and bring fame to its owner. There is, however, more pleasure in the one Hybrid bred by the exhibitor than in the ninety and nine which have been purchased for the purpose of exhibiting.

For the purposes of this essay I will divide my subject under four heads: (1) Cages and Fittings; (2) Selection and general management of Finches paired for breeding; (3) Management of Canaries; and (4) The Hybrid.

The Cages and Fittings.

I deliberately choose to write under this heading to commence with, as I consider that it is a matter of the greatest importance; for, remember, from a humane point of view we should do everything possible to make the lives of our birds as bright and as happy as possible in confinement; and incidentally, while so doing, we are increasing our chances of success. We should keep only as many birds as we can properly attend to, and it is our duty to see that they are well housed and well cared for. It is far better to keep only one pair of birds in a well-made, roomy cage, than to have a dozen pairs huddled into as many small, ill-made cages without that room for exercise which is so necessary if our birds are to be kept in a healthy condition. I know of several breeders who have under their charge three or four times as many birds as they ought to have considering the time they have at their disposal, with the result that both birds and cages present a sorry spectacle. I feel very strongly on this point, and would urge my readers to keep only as many birds as their leisure time will allow them to properly care for. I say unhesitatingly, and without fear of contradiction, that we have no right to subject our birds to the misery and suffering which would be brought about by neglect of the simple rules of health. Birds kept under such conditions become a constant source of worry and disappointment to their owners. Moreover, your birds will amply repay you for any little extra trouble you may bestow upon them. Let strict cleanliness be the rule in the bird-room and aviary. Bottles and perches should be washed, the bottoms of cages cleaned out, and seed sifted regularly.

Before deciding on the kind of cages to be used for the Finches, there is another question to be settled, and that is whether the Finches are to be kept in an indoor room or out-of-doors. I have given both plans a fair trial, and I do not hesitate to give my verdict in favour of the outdoor treatment. Depend upon it, there is nothing like fresh air for your Britishers. But, of course, in this case you will require larger cages, for the birds must have plenty of exercise when kept in the open air. You must also see that they are protected from the attacks of the feline tribe, for you are not likely to meet with any great success if the birds are continually worried by cats. I will here describe the kind of cages I use for Hybrid breeding, and also the plan I have adopted to keep off the cats, and to prevent any bird escaping should it by any means get out of its cage.



The Feeding and Nesting Arrangements.

My cages are each 4 ft. 6 ins. long, 2 ft. 6 ins. high, and 1 ft. 9 ins. deep from front to back. Each cage can be divided into two compartments by sliding partition, and there are two wire fronts, so that there is no difficulty in cleaning, removing eggs, or nest box, as the birds may be shut off while these operations are going on. Each compartment is supplied with a drawer 1½ inches deep. During the breeding season these drawers are kept full of coarse pine sawdust to prevent the eggs being broken if dropped from the perches. At all other times I use grit and sand for the bottoms. While using sawdust, grit should be supplied in tins hung to the inside of the wire fronts near to the perches. There should always be a good supply of grit and cuttle-fish bone, for the eggs of Britishers in captivity are thin-shelled at the best of times, and to neglect this matter would be to court disaster.

During the winter months I use only three perches in each cage, one at either end about twelve inches from the floor, and one in the middle in a higher position so that the birds may get plenty of exercise. As breeding time draws near, the middle perch is removed, and two more perches are added, one on either side of the wire slide, so that the birds may get used to each other if it is found necessary to part them. At this time the perches should also be brought to a lower level—about two inches from the sawdust—so that the eggs shall not get broken when dropped from the perches. The cages for the Hybrid pairs are arranged under a lean-to roof of wood and felting, supported in front by four posts, and at the back and sides by thick walls. The whole of the front is covered with ½-inch wire netting, with a door at one end. This structure is 18 feet long, 8 feet high, and 6 feet from back to front, and affords excellent shelter and protection for its inmates. The cages are always perfectly dry, whatever the weather may be, while their inmates are safe from attacks by cats.

The seed is supplied in two long drawers, one at each end of the cage, and running from front to back; each of these is divided into compartments so that each kind of seed may be supplied separately. This method of supplying the seed prevents a lot of waste, as if the seed is mixed, the most of it is thrown to the cage bottoms, and never eaten at all. For some time I used the ordinary glass bottles for drinking purposes, but I found that while using sawdust, large quantities of it got into the water-bottles; therefore I found it necessary to adopt some better method, and after a few experiments I hit upon a plan which has proved very successful.

Wild Bird-Life.

Blackbirds in Winter.

After the first rush of the autumn migration, wild birds settle down to spend the winter in practically the same locality, that is, unless the weather should set in exceptionally severe, when they move as circumstances require, to more favourable ground for feeding purposes. In the early autumn the gardens and meadowland round the writer's house were swarmed with migratory birds; these all moved on some time ago, excepting a few Blackbirds, Thrushes, and the usual stay-at-home species, such as Robins, Hedge Sparrows, Tits, Jackdaw, Rooks, etc. The majority of Blackbirds and Thrushes frequent the meadow land, but one of each species can be seen at any time of the day on the lawn busily hunting for worms. These two birds never associate; in fact, the Blackbird generally drives his fellow worm-hunter as far away as he can, and likes to have the whole of the lawn to himself, although it is a fair size, and there is plenty of room for dozens of birds. As a rule, the Thrush is much more addicted to worm-eating than the Blackbird, but this particularly dark coloured one, apparently takes nothing else, for he seems to be all day long tugging away at another find. The Blackbird is also keen on slugs, but for some reason appears to care nothing for house snails, at least the writer has never seen this species cracking them. They do not, even in a captive state, seem to care for snails, although birds in captivity will frequently take to food that they will not look at when free. Blackbirds are particularly fond of frequenting orchards. A half-decayed apple has a special fascination for them, and they will return time after time to feast on it, until it all disappears. Country lads know all about this taste for fruit, and many a fine bird has fallen a victim to the cunningly set trap baited with apple. During the winter months, wild birds are not so delicate in their feeding as in the spring and autumn, when insect life is abundant. Many traps are successfully baited with potato, bread, and scraps of any kind from the table, or even meal from the chicken trough. If individuals are to exist during the winter months, they cannot be over particular as to how they do it. To eat and live appears to be the only duty of wild birds just now, and this apparently takes up so much of their time that one rarely hears a few notes of bird music.

CANARY QUERIES.

A Triplet.

No Nom-de-plume.—(1) The sample of canary seed sent is of fair average quality, but if this sample is taken direct from your stock bulk I should rather suspect that mice have access to it. It has certain indications that way. (2) Treat the birds that waste the seed as you say and show a somewhat depraved appetite as follows for a fortnight: For staple diet a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every day for a week and every second day in the next week give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, sprinkled with soft sugar, and every second day a pinch of maw seed and a morsel of banana. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and in the second week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. (3) Feed these two birds on a staple of plain canary, and give each half a teaspoonful of rape separately every second day. On the alternating days give bread and milk as mentioned above, but with the addition of two drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it each time. In the drinking water give the rhubarb and salts as above for two consecutive days, and afterwards the gentian mixture as above every second day for a week. This should put them right. Do not habitually give any drug in the water.

Another Trio.

H. J. Y.—(1) First of all see that this bird is in a bright, comfortable position, quite free from draughts and extremes of heat and cold. Also examine cage carefully for red mites, and if any are found adopt stringent measures to oust them at once. Then feed and treat the bird as advised to "A. Watson," except that you add six drops of syrup of rhubarb to the water with the Epsom salts, and give it for three days, and on the alternate days afterwards, when giving the gentian and steel, give twenty drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and two of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together. (2) Feed this hen on a staple of plain canary, and give separately a small teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts rape, inga, and millet three times a week. In the drinking water give twenty drops of chemical food twice a week for a month. When ready for mating, smash up a little old mortar into coarse powder, and keep a supply in her cage. You would find in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d. post free, from our manager, full details for feeding and preparing for mating. (3) Give this hen a diet of plain canary only, with a liberal supply of watercress if available. In the drinking water give twelve drops of syrup of buckthorn every second day for a week. In the next week give six drops of tincture of gentian and four of aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Then begin again, and repeat the two weeks in the same order.

Developing Soundness.

C. H. T.—You will certainly go the nearest way to achieve your object, and establish a thoroughly sound and robust strain, by barring those specimens that sneeze and rattle at night from the breeding cage, so far as rearing young from them are concerned. But there is no reason whatever why you should not mate them, and employ them as feeders for the young of other birds, as you suggest. These birds are often very efficient feeders, and there is practically no risk of the health and soundness of the young they rear being affected in any way. Their own progeny, however, when reared, very frequently inherits the weakness of the parents, and becomes early affected with the same trouble. If the trouble is a temporary, and passing, one, which, of course, would alter the complexion of the case, the following treatment will quickly remove it. Staple diet: A mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar; on the alternate days, twice a week, a pinch of maw; and on two other days a morsel of banana. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whiskey, six each of oxymel of squills and sweet spirits of nitre, and two of eucalyptus all, well shaken together, every second day for a week, or fortnight if necessary.

Wasting Seed (M.C.).—See reply No. 2 to "No nom-de-plume," and feed and treat your bird the same entirely as therein advised.

Tumour on Beak, etc. (J.H.).—Feed and treat your bird as advised to "A. Watson," until the moulting has stopped, and if it does not then seem quite well treat it for a month as advised in reply to "F.A.D." Of course, you may begin at once to touch the growth with iodine as advised to "F.A.D.," and it is quite likely this may be disposed of by the time the moulting is stopped.

Some Improvement (N.K.J.).—Am glad to hear the bird is better. Continue the same treatment as previously advised as regards feeding, but give the medicine two days in every three for a week, every second day in the next week, then omit it altogether for a week, and begin again in the same order as long as seems necessary to effect a cure. I would not advise you to breed with this bird in any case, even if it appears to recover completely. Many thanks for appreciative remarks anent "Our Canaries."

Yorkshire Hen (Yellow Hen).—In addition to the staple of plain Canary, give half a teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days for the next week give a morsel of bread sopped in cold milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts daily for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week. A grape broken open may also be given for a day or two.

Continuous Laying (Birdes).—Keep the hen in a fairly large cage. Give a staple diet of plain Canary seed only, with a half teaspoonful of summer rape separately every second day, and a spray of watercress or morsel of banana on the alternate days. Twice a week give a small piece of bread and milk with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts three times in one week, and afterwards give 20 drops of Chemical Food every second day for a month. If the hen is kept in a fairly warm room, free from extreme fluctuations, you would do well to mate her in about a month's time.

Damaged Leg (J. W. C.).—It is impossible to say with any degree of certainty what is wrong with the leg without seeing it, but judging from your description I should certainly say the leg was broken during the episode with the cat, up in the so-called thigh position, where it would not be very noticeable, and the trouble has failed to rectify itself properly; perhaps by the bird being too much disturbed and "stirred up," instead of being allowed to remain as still and quiet as possible. If this is correct, you can do nothing at all for it now. If a valuable bird, you might show it to a veterinary, who might possibly do something for it, though, honestly, I doubt it.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Age of Decrepitude (W. C. B.).—No hard and fast line can be laid down as to the age when a cock should stop breeding. It is purely a question of health and stamina. Some cocks will continue to fill eggs well on into the teens of years, whilst others are worn out long before their tenth year. The reproductiveness of the vast majority probably wanes rapidly after the fifth or sixth season. But any cock that is strong and healthy, fairly active, and shows a desire to mate at the proper time, may reasonably be expected to fill eggs irrespective of age considerations—within reasonable limits, of course.

Mopy Yorkshire (J. C. W.)—You are feeding the bird too highly for the time of year. Keep him in a comfortable, but not necessarily very warm, place, out of reach of draughts and impure air. Give a staple diet of plain canary seed only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days give a spray of watercress if available, three times a week, otherwise give a morsel of banana as a substitute. Once a week give a small teaspoonful of crushed stale sponge cake sprinkled with maw seed. Limit the diet solely to this for a month. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for another week.

A Peculiar Case (J.A.). — Sorry, but I cannot imagine why the bird should go on systematically losing its claws one after another without more definite particulars to judge by. Is it the claw only—that is, the toe-nail,, so to speak, or the whole toe that is lost? I should suspect some injury. Is it probable that the bird gets a claw fast in the wires, or about perches, and wrenches them badly in its struggles to get free; or have you carefully examined the feet to see if a hair or similar ligature has got twisted tightly around them. Look into these things carefully, and then write again, giving full details, and describing the appearance as closely as you can. Meantime, keep cage and perches perfectly clean, and smear the feet daily with carbolised vaseline.

Moving Birds (No name, Cobridge). — You did wrong to move the birds to the kitchen, as they would have done much better in the other room until the weather was milder. Now, if the aviary is out of doors, as I suspect, though you omit this important detail, it is certainly not wise to move them from the kitchen to this place. Your best plan is to wait for a spell of mild weather at, or about, end of February, before making this next move. Meantime, feed the birds quite plainly, and cut down the extras to a minimum. Keep as far as possible, consistent with freedom from draughts, from the fire. Slowly burn a teaspoonful of coffee away on a few embers or hot shovel in the aviary, and shut it up for an hour or two. Then open and well it. That will remove the smell of paint. If not quite removed first time, repeat operation next day. A tablespoonful of strong vinegar evaporated on a hot shovel would produce a similar result.

Canary Moulting (E. Wallis).—See reply to "A. Watson" for Yorkshire dropping feathers, and treat your bird as therein advised, which will fully meet your case.

Literature (Beginner).—"Profitable Canary Breeding, by A. Retich, which our manager could send you for 9½d., would meet your desires. In due course the subject will also be dealt with more fully in "Our Canaries," now publishing in monthly parts.

Moving Birds (F. Thompson).—If, as I assume, the room where the birds are now kept has no form of artificial heat applied to it, it will be quite safe to move the birds to the outside building in the course of a month or six weeks from this time. Wait until a snap of nice mild weather occurs about the end of February or beginning of March, and then take advantage of it to make the change. Meantime, give the building a thorough preparation so that it will stand some little time afterwards before it is necessary to disturb the birds for another overhaul. See that it is well ventilated, but quite free from cold draughts.

Yorkshire Dropping Feathers (A. Watson).—You omit to say whether the bird moulted properly last autumn or not, or how you keep and treat it, so I cannot tell you the cause of this moulting. To remedy it, keep the bird in a fairly warm place, but do not overdo it; see that the warmth is equable, and that the bird is quite protected from cold draughts, and is free from red mite attacks. Give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple diet. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of crushed stale sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion, well mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, teazle, and millet. Add a pinch of Epsom salts to its drinking water for one day only, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian and four of tincture of steel every second day for a fortnight, or until the moulting stops.

Rollers Losing Feathers (H. H.).—Examine your cages well for the presence of red mites, and if this pest is found have a thorough overhaul to eradicate it before the breeding season arrives. Also see that they are kept as free as possible from draughts, and extremes of heat and cold, and that cages are not near or over burning lights in the evening, nor too near the fire. Allow birds to bathe freely in mild weather. Give both hens and the cock a pinch of Epsom salts, and ten drops of lemon juice in the water for one day, and afterwards feed and treat generally the same as advised to "A. Watson," except that you omit the hemp, and make the staple to consist of two parts canary to one part rape. Give the same medicines to the hens for a week only, and to the cock for three days only. If there is any bare place to be seen on the cock where he pecks at his leg, smear it slightly every second day for a week or so with Lano-cyllin, if available—otherwise, use carbolised vaseline.

Senile Decay (Serin).—As you say, the bird is by no means young; this is probably what he is troubled with. He would do better now in a moderate-sized cage, than flying in a large aviary with others. You did quite right to remove him. Keep him in a cosy place, but not too warm, and see that it is well ventilated, and not near the fumes of burning lights in the evenings, nor exposed to great fluctuations. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple. Every second day for a fortnight give a morsel of bread sopped in cold milk, drained, three drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw seed and a morsel of banana. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny piece for three days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week.

Feeding and Mating (A Beginner).—(1) No, it is not advisable to feed Norwich, or any other bird for that matter, solely on mixed seed, or stock kept for breeding, a staple of plain canary seed only is best throughout the greater part of the year, with all other items given separately in the way frequently advised here. (2) This depends entirely on what you want to breed, and, as often stated in this column, the birds' parentage plays a considerable part in what it will produce. If you want to get back to pure Cinnamons, you should mate the cock with a self cinnamon hen bred from two pure Cinnamons, otherwise it would make a useful bird to cross back to pure Norwich that wants a little more colour and quality of feather. (3) If you must have a mixture as a staple diet after reading No. 1, three parts canary to one part summer rape will be the best, with no other addition, which will only induce waste. or seven pounds, say, 5½lbs. of canary to 1½lbs. of summer rape.

Ventilating Aviary (T. B., Pendlebury).—If, as I assume, there is a clear space of six inches between the floor and the ground, you could not have a better or cheaper form of ventilation than the ordinary perforated metal place placed in the centre of the floor, with vanes for closing the hole to any desirable extent to suit existing conditions. You would have to cut out a small square of the wooden floor, and if you have any solid covering on the floor, such as linoleum, a piece must also be cut out of this exactly over the ventilator, so as to leave the latter fully exposed. This forms the ingress for pure air. Get one with quite narrow slits or small perforations to prevent vermin getting through also. The exits for foul air you should place in each end at the back, and near the highest part. A small venetian arrangement of slats (described in last reply), set in a frame about 8ins. by 6ins., fitted in each end, would be about best. If this is too difficult make two small frames this size, with a strip of wood half an inch square, and tack on to each side a piece of perforated zinc arranged so that the holes are not opposite each other, and fix one in each end in the position above described.

Feeding Canaries (E. B.).—If you are going to breed with these birds, the best staple diet for the next few weeks will be plain canary only. In addition, give separately a pinch of summer rape every second day, and about once a week a small piece of sponge cake, or a little egg food, or bread sopped in milk, whichever happens to be most handy. Once or twice a week give the hen a pinch of inga, and the cock a pinch of hemp and inga mixed. These extras may all be given as opportunities offer in the egg drawer, or if the cage has no such appliance, just drop them on top of the canary seed in the seed box. The sponge cake or bread and milk you can easily stick between the wires. A spray of watercress or morsel of sweet fruit will do good occasionally. If birds are not for breeding, you may give a mixture of three parts canary to one part rape as a staple. Then mix a small quantity of two parts each hemp, inga, millet, and one part each teazle and maw, and give a pinch of this about twice a week, with a scrap of soft food and green food, or fruit, as above, once or twice a week. The natural colour of a Canary's breast is a dark or purplish hue, so you do not want anything to cure that. If the colour is anything abnormal, which I doubt, better write again and describe it fully.

Growth on Beak (F. A. D.).—I fear the bird is in a thoroughly bad way, apart from the growth on the beak. Touch the latter with the tip of a feather dipped in tincture of iodine each day. When it drops off lightly, smear the mandible all over with carbolised vaseline each day for a few days. Wipe off any surplus so as not to leave enough for it to soil its plumage. Keep cage and perches thoroughly clean; the floor covered with clean gritty sand. Keep in a nice bright position, free from draughts and fluctuations, and in a cosy place, not necessarily very warm, nor yet on the cold side. Feed on a staple of plain canary. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of rape and a morsel of banana or green food, and on the alternate days a piece of bread sopped in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Give also a pinch of maw seed. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and in the following week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumbo, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Feed as above for a month.

Breeding Queries (Redcap).—(1) As you are clearly a novice in the matter, know nothing of the pedigree of your birds, and have no special object in double-cresting, I would certainly advise you to keep the Crested hen over this year unmated, rather than mate her with the Crested cock. This kind of mating should only be done with a particular object in view, which you cannot have. (2) A Crestbred bird is a non-crested specimen having close blood relationship to Crests. They have much more profuse feathering, particularly on the head, than Plainheads. The orthodox method is to mate a Crested bird with a Crestbred specimen, and in the result the progeny are likewise—some crested and others having no crests, being what are termed Crestbreds. Both varieties commonly occur in the same brood. (3) Yes, these hens are in rather too forward condition. You should cut off the extras from the diet for a short time, and give a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for a couple of days. (4) From a clear yellow mated to a marked buff you will breed clears, ticks, and possibly some variegated, both yellows and buffs. The proportion of ticks and variegated will depend upon the amount of dark blood in the parents. The same results may be expected from a clear buff cock and a marked yellow hen.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Parrot Indisposed.

L. E. P.—With many Parrots this regurgitation of food and re-swallowing same is quite a natural habit, and when kept in pairs this is regularly done, and they feed each other with the regurgitated food. A single Parrot in a cage often indulges in the habit when in the presence of anyone it is fond of. On the other hand, if it amounts to actual sickness, then it is the result of slight indisposition. At any rate, to make sure, it will do your bird no harm to have a dose or two of Dinneford's magnesia—one teaspoonful to the ordinary sized drinker, every fourth day, and on the intervening days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Continue this treatment for a month, but in the case of the yoldings becoming watery loose, the magnesia must be discontinued; only a crock or china drinker must be used during this period. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuits, and a few nuts; also cuttlebone, grit, and water.

Feather Pulling.

G. A. B.—Your bird is a Roseate Cockatoo, and its diet must consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, and a few nuts (shelled walnuts are best), also cuttlebone, grit, and water. Give your bird Dinneford's magnesia and Parrish's Chemical Food under the same conditions as advised to "L. E. P." in this issue, only in your case it must be conditioned till the bird is fit again. In your case you must also spray with either a dilute solution of quassia, or a weak solution of fir tree oil, in the latter case do not get the solution into the bird's eyes, and keep out of draught till dry. You are giving too much hemp. A better mixture would be: Two parts each Canary and white millet, and one part each hemp, oats, "paddy" rice, dari, maize and sunflower seeds; the whole to be well mixed and a supply kept in the cage continually. You will need to presevere with the treatment, and the bird should gradually recover tone. It would be well to report progress in two or three weeks.

Aviary Queries.

J. E. B.—The aviary of which you give sketch should be a success, but as I see you have already started with Budgerigars, the only birds other than Parrakeets I can advise you to keep with them are Red-crested, Virginian, and Green Cardinals, all of which are doubtful breeders; if you keep these you will have to supply soft-food, ripe fruit, and a few insects; they will also help themselves to the seed mixture. As to Parrakeets, you can keep with the Budgerigars pairs of Rosella Parrakeets, Cockatails, Madagascar and Blue-winged Lovebirds. Black-cheeked Lovebirds are very beautiful, and breed, but do not always agree with Budgies and other Lovebirds. The Parrakeets named would require seed, ripe fruit, and green food, with a few pieces of biscuit occasionally, in addition to grit, cuttlebone, and water. I advise two seed mixtures:—1, Canary and White millet in equal parts; 2, crushed oats, paddy rice, hemp, and sunflower seed in equal parts; also a few millet sprays, particularly in the breeding season.

Parrot in Bad Feather.

A. J. Rowell.—It would have helped me greatly had you stated what kind of a Parrot yours was. Its diet should consist of seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts (shelled walnuts are best), and dry plain biscuit, cuttlebone grit and water for drinking and bather should be regularly supplied. It will be a work of time and patience to materially improve the condition of your bird; it has evidently been wrongly treated and got into quite a low condition and consequently does not talk. Every fourth day in lieu of the drinking water give a mixture of two parts water to one part Dinneford's Magnesia, and on the intervening days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, continuing this treatment till relief is given. You must also spray the bird with a dilute quassia solution twice weekly, keeping the bird out of draught till dry. Instead of the seed mixture you are using, the following would better meet the present conditions: Two parts each

(by measure) Canary and white millet, and one part each oats, "paddy" rice, hemp, and sunflower seeds; well mix and keep a supply continually in the cage. Do not on any account give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food. While giving drugs use only a crock or glass drinking vessel. Please report progress a few weeks hence.

What Parrot? (Constant Reader).—If I may take the feather enclosed as the average length of the tail feathers, then it is a Yellow-naped Amazon, as stated last week, and I think this naming is correct. However, I am keeping your description by me, and during the next few days I will look up the Mexican species and will duly report. In any case, the treatment advised in our previous reply will meet the case.

Food for Zebra Finches (R. Riley).—Young Zebra Finches are reared largely on seed, also unlimited green food, particularly green seeding grass, and a little soft-food—several good ones are advertised in our columns, or the following would meet the case:—Equal parts ants' eggs, crushed biscuit, and crumbled sponge cake. During the nesting season keep up a supply of spray millet. Treated as above the young should be reared without trouble.

Foreign Songsters (A. Lodge).—All the Serins are handsome birds and would meet your case; the Green Singing Fiuch is a good sougster and very handsome in its garment of olive green and yellow; the Grey Singing Finch is a better sougster, but plain, being clad in various hues of grey; the Alario Finch (not often on offer) is another good songster, and a striking bird in a garment of black, cinnamon, brown, and white. The Pekin Robin is another good songster, and beautiful, but it requires soft-food, ripe fruit, and a few insects; all the others named are seedeaters. All should come within the limit value you name. Foreign Finches require Canary, white millet, and spray millet seeds; but no harm will be done if the British and Foreign Finches partake of each other's mixtures.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

To Mate with Goldfinch (O. C. S.).—If your Goldie is a medium sized British Finch, get a cobby (Norwich type) yellow hen Canary of fair size, but not too bulky. It does not much matter whether she is clear or marked, but if you want good coloured dark Mules, then it will be best if she is a heavily variegated bird.

Identity of Bird (Joseph Hughes).—The bird you describe is the Corn Bunting (often termed by catchers and dealers the "Bunting Lark"). This species is of no particular value, as it has no song worthy of the name, and often takes a deal of steadying, so that it appeals to but few bird-keepers as worth troubling with as a cage pet. A really fine specimen moulted into show form, is of considerable value, however, to an exhibitor.

Buzzard and Bustard (A. Rutter).—There is a vast difference between the Buzzard and the Bustard, the former being a bird of prey (as you know), and the latter a large land bird (though very much smaller, it has some kinship with the Ostrich). The Bustard is now extinct in a wild state, so far as England is concerned, though examples are to be found on certain private estates. It is celebrated for its extraordinary note—a loud "booming" sound, which can be heard for a very considerable distance.

Death of a Goldfinch (Puzzled).—Evidently pneumonia caused the death of the bird; the disease developed into a very severe form. It is impossible to ward off bronchial troubles entirely, owing to the extremely delicate, sensitive nature of the respiratory organs of birds; even a sudden change in the weather may spell disaster to some one or other of our pets. The bird you describe is the Hedge Accentor (commonly called the Hedge Sparrow).

Pecking the Cage Back (W. L.).—This seems to me a harmless sort of habit (many Linnets develop a fondness for continually "tap, tapping" at the cage wires), but if you object to it as a "positive nuisance," then give him a month or two in an all wire cage (such as a Border Fancy Canary showcage, which would be very convenient for the purpose). He may by then have forgotten his little foible.

An Argument (T. R. D.).—So far as I know, it is certainly not a fact that the cock Bullfinch will breed freely with hens of another species. But this is very different to saying that he will not breed at all in captivity. No such statement has ever been made by me. I have myself seen several cock Bullfinches that have bred in captivity. 2. Your friend is wrong. Hen Canaries most certainly can successfully rear Bullfinch Hybrids (Linnet-Bullie, Greenie-Bullie, etc.). As a matter of fact, the majority of Bullfinch Hybrids are reared by hen Canaries. A perusal of our article pages (or of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL) should convince anyone as to the accuracy of my statement.

A Waxwing Moping (E. W.). — Pity you put "Canary" on top of your query, this causing a week's delay owing to your communication being sent to my colleague, Mr. St. John, who looks after the Canary department. I presume the bird is a newly-imported one, and, if so, then in my opinion you have not been feeding it correctly, which may account for its going out of condition. The excrement of all berry and fruit eating birds, such as the Waxwing, is naturally copious, and more or less watery. At first you should have given a liberal daily supply (at least a tablespoonful) of well scalded grocer's currants (first-class quality). These are greedily eaten by Waxwings, and form an admirable substitute for the berries upon which they feed in a state of nature (the birds actually take them for berries, no doubt). They must always, however, be thoroughly soaked in very hot water and drained; if given as bought they pass through the bird's system practically undigested. Very few will eat fruit (banana, etc.), at first; the taste for this is acquired later on. As a stock food try "Melox" (or any other similar kind of dog food) soaked in boiling water and reduced to a crumbly consistency by the addition of the insectile food you name. The currants should be well mixed into this. If the bird is still alive, give a strong tonic—half-a-teaspoonful of compound syrup of hypophosphates, B.P. (Fellow's Syrup) in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water—until it pulls round. Any high class chemist will supply this tonic. If the bird has contracted pneumonia on the journey to England (the cause of heavy mortality amongst all imported species), then I am afraid its case is hopeless.

A Quartette (Normandy).—1. It often happens that a bird will learn one phrase, or just a few notes, of a tune, and then "stop short." In Bullfinches, quite a number of these "broken pipers" are found—the perfect pupils are comparatively few. The whole tune should be played oevr slowly and distinctly. 2. The article on Hybrid breeding by Mr. Collins (now being published) should be a valuable guide for you. 1 like a cage 30 to 36 inches long by 16 high, by 12 to 18 wide. 3. The hen Yellow Bunting carries very little yellow in her dress; she lacks most of the yellow found on the head and throat of the male—is a very dull coloured bird, by comparison. 4. If you want to try for hybrids, mate a steady cock Reed Bunting with the hen Yellowhammer.

In an Aviary (Greypate).—Yes; I think you can depend upon getting some young birds of one kind or another. I should have one hen Greenfinch only, however, in the place. Java Sparrows are sometimes quarrelsome and mischievous towards weaker birds; your aviary is of good size, though, and a pair may do no harm therein. You can always remove them, if occasion calls for this being done. I strongly advise you to give the three or four most important seeds in separate vessels (say canary, teazle, summer rape, sunflower and hemp); this is by far the most economical method. You could give a dish of ordinary mixed (or niga, maw, linseed, etc.), or wild-seed mixture, once or twice a week, or accordiug to the needs of the various seasons. For the Canary, keep her in a warm room, and give a small teaspoonful of the following mixture in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water; one ounce each of glycerine, oxymel of squills and ipecacuanha wine.

POST MORTEMS.

F. Simpson.—Parasitic enteritis, or inflammation of the bowels, induced by the presence of tapeworms, caused death of Tanager. The symptoms you describe would arise from inflammatory action and heightened temperature.

Bertha I. Simpson.—Death of Budgerigar arose from pneumo-enteritis, brought about by cold. The bowels were very acutely inflamed throughout their whole extent, and the lungs participated. Death under such conditions occurs rapidly with very little warning. In other respects the bird was quite healthy and well nourished.

E. C. Deakins.—Asthma is a chronic affection, and seldom causes death by itself, but birds so affected are generally more susceptible to variations in surroundings and sudden changes of temperature. What it really died of was pneumonia, the symptoms being synonymous and mistaken with those of asthma. The latter is often associated with heart affection, any excitement produciug gasping and hurried breathing, lasting varying times, and followed by periods of quiescence; but the former is rapid in its onset, and acute in character, symptoms more urgent, and in the majority of cases rapidly ending fatally.

Mrs. Mackay.—Peritonitis from rupture of the oviduct, due to inability to expel a shell-less egg, with consequent escape of contents into the peritoneum, caused death of Budgerigar. You probably noticed the distended appearance of the body caused by the presence of the egg. On opening the body this was readily seen, together with quite a large tear in the walls of the oviduct. The peritoneum was badly inflamed, both parietal and visceral. Had you diagnosed the condition in time prior to the rupture, steaming over hot water might have aided in expulsion, and saved your bird. Cold and dampness producing inertia, or weakness of the muscular coats of the oviduct, combined with the flaccidity of the shell-less egg, are the principal factors in the causation of this disease.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

The Yorkshire (G. Thomson).—We have duly noted your remarks; thanks.

Secretary's Address (Constant Reader).—The secretary of the Highgate, Hampstead, and Dist. C.B.S. is Mr. C. W. Law, 9, Oak Villas, Archway Road, Highgate, N. This society is the nearest, we think, to your address.

THATTO HEATH AND DIST. O.S.

Fourth meeting, held Jan. 9th, Nutgrove School. A pleasant evening was spent. Five new members were enrolled, and the club's prospects are very bright. We have already made nine new members, and from our members' reports there are yet more to join. I will be pleased to give any bird fancier full particulars who has not had an invitation from our members (there are many fanciers in the district whom we have not had the pleasure of meeting)—if they will kindly communicate with me or come to our next meeting, Feb. 5th, 8 p.m.—R. G. Tyson, 29, Elm-road, Thatto Heath.

ECCLESHILL C.B.A.

WOLVERHAMPTON C.B.S.

Annual meeting held Jan. 12th, headquarters, Duke of York, Princess-street, Mr. F. J. Weaver presiding over a good attendance. Millencamp, J. W. Hunt, H. E. Rowley, Ike Jones, J. Barrett, W. Harrison, J. Nock, E. Hall, and R. Hyde; auditors, F. Price and W. Hampton; secretary, J. Gibbons. Final scores for the inter-club cup competition were presented; result: Birmingham, 282; Wolverhampton 277½; West Bromwich, 182½. Well done Birmingham; we must congratulate you on such a performance, and also that good, true fancier, Mr. P. Victor Williams, who, we are pleased to hear, holds the cup for the year. But considering our society altogether is only 20 strong it is uot much of a defeat, so please keep your eyes open, Birmingham, next year.—J. Gibbons, Secretary.

New Cage Bird Society for Barnoldswick.

SIR,—We have formed a new society, namely, the Barnoldswick Cage Birds Society, and our headquarters are at the Liberal Club. We have a comfortable meeting place, and we shall be glad if all the fanciers in Barnoldswick will join us. Our next meeting will be held on Tuesday, December 31st, at 7.30 prompt.

Alleged Borrowing of Show Birds at Chester.

SIR,—Seeing the letter in CAGE BIRDS of 21st January, as secretary of the Chester Cage Bird Fanciers' Association, I should be very glad if "Subscriber" would bring the matter he writes about forward at the next monthly meeting of the society, Feb. 8th (Nag's Head Cocoa House, at 8.30 p.m.). If he cannot attend, will he please furnish me with particulars which I will place before the meeting?

Even-marked Borders at the last Crystal Palace Show.

SIR,—Quite a sensation has arisen amongst a few of us in the district of Hamilton about the above question. While I say it was Mr. Shearer who won at the Palace with a buff even-marked hen, yet the report of the Scottish National reads "Fifth, Meekley, Palace winner." Now, Sir, we leave it to you to settle. I have been a constant reader of CAGE BIRDS since the very first issue, and I could not do without it now, and wish it every success.

WILLIAM WALLACE.

[According to CAGE BIRDS report of the 1910 Palace Show, Mr. Shearer was 1st with a buff, and Mr. Meekley 2nd with a yellow, in the even-marked Border class.—ED.]

Presentation to An Irish Secretary.

SIR,—Kindly allow me space to remind many of those to whom I sent out circulars that the list of subscriptions to the Carroll Testimonial organised by the Yorkshire Canary Society of Ireland will shortly close. I regret to state that the response to our appeal to the Irish Fancy (for whom, in his position as hon. sec. of the Y.C.S., Mr. Carroll has done so much) has not been as liberal as it might, and that many of the leading exhibitors have not come forward with their subscriptions. We intend, however, to close the list before the annual general meeting, and I hope that by then the names of all the principal Irish fanciers will be found in it. Subscriptions may be sent to me at 52, Connaught Street, Dublin, or to Mr. Holley, 66, Fitzroy Avenue, Drumcondra, Dublin.

An Appeal for an Old-time Blackburn Linnet Association

SIR,—It is with great regret that we learn there is a danger of the National Quality Linnet Singing Association, Blackburn, coming to a close, which we think would be a great blow to Linnet fanciers, as it is the premier Linnet Club of this part of the country, seeing that it was established in 1840. We think that it is every Linnet fancier's duty to help to keep going such a club, with the reputation it holds. Mr. J. W. Jones has added five more members, and we are prepared to do the same this year, but we want other fanciers to take the same active part as we are doing, and try to bring the association back to its old standard. We hope to see other fanciers have something to say in reference to the above club, which has held such members as Mr. G. Rostern, who was compelled to go abroad, and Messrs. R. Leaming and W. Bentley, independent of other good judges of Linnets who remain. We think it is every fancier's duty to do their best to keep a club going that stands second to none in England for quality. We write this with all due respect to the present members, who we know are doing their best.

Proposed Roller Canary Club for North Lincolnshire.

SIR,—Owing to the continued and increasing interest taken in the Roller Canary, it has been proposed that a branch be formed in the Grimsby district, which, it is hoped, may develop into a flourishing North Lincolnshire Roller Canary Society. That this very fascinating variety is rapidly establishing itself among bird keepers we need not go for proof beyond the show of the Provincial Roller Canary Club, held at Bury, Lancashire, on January 13th and 14th, where, I understand, there were something like 250 entries in six classes, whilst at other exhibitions this season, it has not been uncommon to find from 50 to 60 in some of the classes, whilst 6,000 to 7,000 closed rings have been issued to its members in London and the provinces by the British Roller C.C. during the past year—proof sufficient, I think, of the popularity of the breed. The song of the Roller has in recent years attained a perfection all its own in this country, with its low, soft changes of a variety of truly melodious song tours. It is a veritable "musical-box," and its devotees are pleased to see it taking its undoubtedly proper place. For the information of those not familiar with the Roller Canary, I may add that it is a very hardy, symmetrical of form, and variously coloured; it is, too, easy to rear and the birds are largely used by keepers of other varieties as "fosters," on account of their good qualities as feeders, etc. No colour-feeding, no "Order of the Bath" are required before exhibiting, and the "Guid Wife" is cheered by its music whilst engaged in her multitudinous household duties, instead of having to cover up the cage to curb "Master Dick's" ear-splitting "Chop, chop, wheat, wheat," until she is quite beside herself. The support of a number of well-known Roller men has already been promised, and as Grimsby has hitherto held its own among fanciers generally, we must march with the times by establishing, like other large centres in the provinces, a properly constituted Roller Society. I shall be glad if those interested will drop me a line, when I will arrange to call a meeting.

The Late Sheringham Show.

SIR,—As I was an exhibitor at the above show, I was interested in seeing Mr. H. Watson's letter in your last issue, re payment of prize money. I received my winnings the day after the show, but in my case it was only cards, viz., two "vhc's" and one "c." What I should like to know is—Did the owner of the birds which, it is alleged, a certain official carried to the show, receive his prize money? I hope no-one will tremble at the question of A Plaint from Wigan Linnet Singers.

SIR,—I have a few words to ask as to the reason the Linnet fanciers from Leigh and Warrington cannot patronise the club from Wigan? I think it is not fair for the latter to be treated as they have been lately—the others promising to come to the matches, but never coming near. Now, how can they expect our own members to go to their matches after spending their money in prizes

A. PARKER,

A Goldfinch Problem.

SIR,—I wonder whether "Marchpane" gives his Goldfinches plenty of flowering groundsel and allows them to bathe freely? A little spray millet is a very good thing to give them now and then, as it keeps them occupied. If a good supply of thistle-heads and teasels is gathered, in a thoroughly dry state, in Autumn, they will keep almost an indefinite time, and it is a pretty sight to see these beautiful birds rifling the fluffy contents of these, their two favourite foods in a state of nature.

(Rev.) G. H. RAYNOR.

SIR,—Kindly allow me to answer "Marchpane." I see he leaves out of his mixture Niger, maw and rape seeds. These three seeds, I think, are very beneficial to cage birds. I have kept Goldfinches for the past six years and I always mix my own seeds, not forgetting the three seeds mentioned above; and I have never had the birds gorge themselves or get out of proper health. So if your correspondent would try these three seeds in his mixture I think it would make all the difference.

Proposed New C.B.S. for Small Heath (Birmingham) and Dis.

SIR,—As there are many in the above-named district who are anxious to form themselves into a Cage Bird Society, I shall be glad to receive names and addresses at once to add to about twelve already received. We have many novel suggestions to bring forward for increasing the interest in the keeping, breeding and exhibiting of cage birds, especially all the various kinds of British birds. The meeting place will be announced not only in CAGE BIRDS, but in two Birmingham journals (Saturday editions). Proposals for a suitable room for meetings will be welcome. Fanciers, please remember, there is only one Cage Bird Society in the City of Birmingham, so we want the Small Heath C.B.S. to be a real live go-ahead club, and it is for you to make it so. So "roll up" with the names, come out of your shells, and give me a helping hand.

Alleged Unfair Treatment at Guisborough Show.

SIR,—I think Mr. E. Radley likes to run to the Press to air his grievance, and cannot wait to see what the society will do, for Mr. Radley will have got his entry fee back by this. As for stating that I wrote and said he would not get it, he does not state facts. What I said was, that he would not get it from me, for he ought to know that no secretary can return entry money without the society's consent. And if he had sent his entries sooner, he would have had more time to let me know that he had not got his tickets for the cages. He even let me know that he had not got them a day after the show was over, which was no earthly good. As for cancelling any classes, if he had read the rules he would have seen that we did not do that; and as for marked catalogues, we do not have these. He did not state whether marked or not, and he got one which was not marked. Then I sent him one after, which I marked myself, as he wanted it marked. In future, when he writes to the paper, I hope he will always keep to the truth.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION AND THE CRYSTAL PALACE SHOW.

The following letters have passed between Mr. Lythgoe, secretary of the Cage Bird Union, and ourselves:—

Dear Mr. Carl,—I see in your review of the Crystal Palace schedule in last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS you state "all fanciers, whether affiliated members of the C.B.U. or not, are equally eligible to exhibit." There is nothing in the schedule stating the show is under C.B.U. Licence, and Mr. Ramsden writes me that he was not responsible for the paragraph. As the Palace authorities have not, up-to-date, taken advantage of the offer to licence the show, I am, as secretary, constrained to state that the show is not open to exhibitors who are at present members of societies affiliated to the C.B.U.

GEO. W. F. LYTHGOE.

Dear Mr. Lythgoe,—I am in receipt of your two letters this morning. In the second letter referred to you have left this matter of the Crystal Palace schedule review too late. I have printed your letter with the exception of the one sentence that the show is not open to exhibitors who are at present members of societies affiliated to the C.B.U. Mr. Ramsden states in his advertisement in this week's CAGE BIRDS that "the show is open to all," and in the face of that advertisement I cannot see my way to publish your statement that his show is not open. As a matter of fact, I think you have wrongly worded your letter. What you mean to say probably is that if exhibitors who are members of societies affiliated to the C.B.U. show at the Crystal Palace Show, they are liable to suspension, or some action on your part, but you see here on Thursday morning there is no time to communicate either with you or with Ramsden, and I have simply to exercise my own judgment in the matter. I have consequently printed the whole of your letter, as I tell you, with the exception of this one sentence.

F. CARL.

Dear Mr. Carl,—I was somewhat taken aback on reading your letter to see you were leaving out the essential part of my communication re the Palace Show, and more so to read your reason. Perhaps now the Palace entries are closed, you will be good enough to publish the whole letter, together with your reply, and this explanation, so that any exhibitors who have been misled into thinking the Show as held under the C.B.U. may see you are the party responsible, and is not through any omission on my part. It will seem extraordinary to your readers that you should have to write Mr. Ramsden before you could publish a letter from me. In the little telling pars you have inserted, anent the Union, you have not always been careful to write me first as to the truth of them, or the propriety of inserting them, though the matters would have lost nothing by being held over a week, but rather might have saved injury to some of our shows. [I do not know what Mr. Lythgoe is referring to.—F.C.] It seems altogether absurd to give as an excuse, the fact of the Palace Show being advertised "open to all." Other non-union shows have used these same words, and "open to the world" in their advertisements in your paper, without having any special interpretation from you—and I have been content to leave it at that—but when you put yourself out of the way to read these words as meaning, open to all, whether members of the C.B.U. or not, I had no other course but to state the contrary, after first ascertaining that a licence was not being taken for the Show. What I think you meant to say, was, that the Show was not open to C.B.U. members, but as the secretary has not written stating this, make your entries, and if he notifies us before the entries close, that the show is not open to such members, we will leave that part out, at any rate that has been the effect. I, on my part, said exactly what I meant to say. It was not possible to send you the intimation earlier, as so late as the Monday, I heard from Mr. Ramsden, that if I would send him certain particulars, he would have the question of licence considered again, and I had to wait for his reply before posting my letter.

GEO. W. F. LYTHGOE.

Mr. Lythgoe seems to think I have acted unfairly to my readers and to the C.B.U. over this matter. It is my duty to point out to him by way of justification, that there is such a thing as legal action for damages, and had I printed without proper enquiry or consideration, even at Mr. Lythgoe's request, and over his signature, any statement that would financially damage the Palace Show, the whole responsibility would have rested upon my shoulders. Those who know Mr. Ramsden know that he is not the sort of man to suffer mis-statements or injustice without retaliation. And what time did Mr. Lythgoe give me to even consider the problem? His letter reached me second post on the Thursday morning, after all my pages had been made up and passed for press, and had I not been anxious to be fair to my readers, I would have told Mr. Lythgoe his communication had reached me too late that week. I again repeat, Mr. Lythgoe's statement that the show was not open is absolutely incorrect. The Show is open. It is the privileges of C.B.U. members that are restricted—a big distinction, and a big difference. If Mr. Lythgoe, on the eve of the show, chooses to delay his letter to me because of certain correspondence with Mr. Ramsden, what has that to do with me? He could surely have written me on the subject, and then wired later cancelling the letter if the negotiations came to nothing. But no, I hear nothing of the alleged error until after the issue has closed, and when it involved me in extra expense to print the correction. As for my alleged responsibility to exhibitors, I maintain I have printed nothing that was not perfectly accurate. I have for week after week stated that the C.P. Show was not under C.B.U. rules. According to the constitution of the C.B.U., it is not open for the C.P. Show to have a licence, therefore the only conclusion members of the C.B.U. could come to was that they were eligible to exhibit at the C.P. Show, but only at their own risk—which, considering the spasmodic and uncertain suspension of rule breakers in the past practised by the C.B.U. is reduced to a very small point. No fair-minded or sensible man could come to any other understanding of the position.

F. CARL.

White-winged and Two-barred Crossbills.

SIR,—A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still. Mr. Frostick still thinks his bird is the Two-barred Crossbill Loxia bifasciata. Well, let him. Since writing my notes in which I suggested that the bird in question might be the American White-winged Crossbill Loxia leucoptera. I have had the opportunity of examining the collection of skins of both species in the Natural History Museum, and I am thereby quite confirmed in my opinion that the bird is leucoptera and not bifasciata. In every one of the adult skins of leucoptera the three inner secondaries are very conspicuously tipped with white. The other secondaries, the primaries and the tail feathers have the slightest possible edging of buffish, and the greater and median coverts have long white tips forming two distinct bars across the wings. The length is about six inches. L. bifasciata is a considerably larger bird, being quite seven inches long. The three inner secondaries are very slightly tipped with white, the expanse of this varying in different specimens, but never being so conspicuous as in the American bird. The primaries and tail feathers are very distinctly edged with buff, and have quite a different appearance to those of Mr. Frostick's bird. The nape feathers and the scapulars in bifasciata have dark centres and pale edgings, giving these parts a decidedly mottled appearance, very different from the slightly marked back of the American species. Further, the colour of the latter is in the adult specimens rich crimson, while in the European bird it is rosy pink (this allowing in both cases for deterioration of colour in the dead feathers). I would just like to say that the drawings which passed as my own, and are criticised by Mr. Frostick as being very bad, were copies of mine, my own having been drawn in too light an ink and with too fine a line for reproduction in your paper. In the copy drawing of the wing of the two-barred Crossbill the distinct pale edging which I tried in the original to convey does not appear, and some of the point of the distinction is thereby lost. Also, in the copy you publish of Messrs. H. Goodchild and Norman, three distinct white tips to the tertiaries which first put me on the track of Loxia leucoptera are not shown at all. Barring the omission of these white tips, the latter drawing is a perfect representation of the wing of the American White-winged Crosshill as displayed by the specimens in the Natural History Museum. Whatever may be the merits or demerits of the drawings in Morris's work which are deprecated by Mr. Frostick, I can testify that that of the White-winged Crossbill truly represents the bird, as might have been expected in a picture by the daughter of one distinguished naturalist and the wife of another. I am not aware that I have said anything to justify Mr. Lewis's suggestion that I perhaps imagine that Mr. Frostick imported the bird himself. No one doubts that it was caught in England. So were the American Robin and the Black-headed Siskin shown at the recent L.C.B.A. show. Did that fact make them British birds? Anyway, would Mr. Frostick's bird be less valuable or less rare if it were provd to be the American White-winged? I think not.

HENRY J. FULLJAMES.

The New Cross (London) and District C.B.S.

SIR,—A meeting for the formation of the above-named society was held on January 19th, with a grand result, there being a fine gathering of fanciers. And some good business was done. Monthly meetings are to be held on the first Thursday of each month, at Bond's Coffee Rooms, 397, New Cross Road, New Cross, at 7.45 p.m. Subscriptions 4s. per annum. The first show will be a pair show, which, no doubt, will be held the latter week of February. The officers for 1911 are as follows:—Mr. T. H. Alwin, chairman; Mr. G. Hill, vice-chairman; Mr. T. Pope, treasuror; Messrs. Barton and Hearn, joint secretaries, and a good committee. We shall be pleased to welcome any fancier desirous of joining.

The Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A.

SIR,—I am sure the keepers of Scotch Fancy Canaries will be delighted to know that friend Wright, of Greenock, and his colleagues have consented to carry on the Scotch Fancy Canary National Derby O.A. for another year. My object in writing is to stimulate breeders of Scotch Fancies to extend the membership, which might easily be done if members in cities and towns were to get an additional member. Fellow breeders, that is a reasonable aim, and I hope an effort will be made in this direction. It is to be recollected that the more members booked, the greater the prize money throughout. The meeting being so long in being held, it was feared that the show was to be given up. Breeders have the future of the Glasgow Derby in their own hands to raise or let it fall. It is one of the best shows I visit, and I should be sorry to see it wrecked by the indifference of the breeders.

Railway Arrangements for the Crystal Palace Show.

The Midland Route from Bradford.

SIR,—In connection with the cage bird show at Crystal Palace, the District Superintendent, Mr. J. A. Turner, of the Midland Railway Co., informs me that they are running a train to leave the Bradford Midland Station on Friday night, February 3rd, at 10.45 p.m., with one, three or four day bookings; also one leaving the Bradford, L. and Y., to St. Pancras, via Thornhill and Midland route, at 7.40 a.m. on Saturday, February 4th, due in London at 12.5 p.m. Reserved accommodation will be made for all those desirous of travelling by the above route if they will kindly forward their names on to me or to Mr. Turner, District Superintendent's Department, Midland Railway, Bradford, at their earliest opportunity.

SIR,—Kindly mention in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, that we are making arrangements for visiting the Palace Show, and should be pleased to hear from any fanciers in this district who would like to join us.

SIR,—I have much pleasure in announcing, on behalf of the Swansea C.B.S., that the Great Western Railway will run a cheap day excursion train on Saturday, Feb. 4th, leaving Swansea at 2.5 a.m., arriving in London at 8.0 a.m. for the Crystal Palace Show, returning from London at midnight. Will those fanciers from South Wales who intend going up for the day kindly send me a post card at once, so that I can make arrangements for a saloon, if a sufficient number can be obtained to join with those of the Swansea and District fanciers?

The Disqualified Yellowhammer at the Scottish National Show.

SIR,—Mr. Russell states in his letter of last week that the general committee of the Bath and District Fanciers Association decided in his favour. Allow me to place the facts before you. At a general committee meeting, the cage bird committee men were asked to retire while the remainder of the committee thoroughly discussed the matter. The decision arrived at was that a vote of censure be passed on Mr. Russell, but that he be paid his prize money in full owing to no rule being in the schedule or rules with reference to the faking or trimming of birds. With reference to Mr. Russell's challenge: Surely after a bird has been disqualified twice in one show season something must be wrong with it. This is my final letter on the subject.

BATH FANCIER.

SIR,—Respecting the Yellow Bunting disqualified at Bath and the Scottish National, I was pleased to see someone detected the alleged trimming of the bird's head as well as me. No doubt Mr. Russell thinks the letter in your issue of the 14th was sent by me, but it was not. I know Mr. Bull gave the bird 1st and three specials at Bath. But is it not true that after the objection Mr. Bull and twelve of the committee were fully satisfied the bird was trimmed? Mr. R. says that after his explanation the committee decided in his favour. Why? Because they never had a rule to the effect, therefore trimming was allowed. Mr. Russell was asked to allow the bird to be sent to your Mr. G. E. Weston, but refused. Why? I will ask any exhibitor if they have had a Hammer moult out a spangled head centre in August, and be clear in November. Mr. Russell says he knows how the bird damaged its head. No matter what sort of a cage it is in (or aviary), will the bird cut its feathers off straight at the tips to make a perfect centre? Why are the V markings not damaged likewise? I suppose the bird scratches his head in the centre! I can tell Mr. Russell there was no clique in the Bath Society of British Bird Fanciers. Can it be true that this bird was awarded 2nd prize in another name at a recent Welsh show? It's a marvel!

S. E. JONES.

The Cage Bird Union.

SIR,—Kindly notify in your valuable paper CAGE BIRDS that the Peterborough Cage Bird Association has resigned from the Cage Bird Union.

H. POPPLE, Hon. Sec.

SIR,—When will the executive of the C.B.U. stop doing senseless things? Is it not a curious coincidence that in one issue you announce the suspension of Mr. G. C. Ley (and others) by the C.B.U., and in the next that he, having with Mr. Rhodes, guaranteed the Crest Club against loss under his scheme for the past season, has put his hand in his pocket to the tune of £10, for which he is, with Mr. Rhodes, justly lauded by Mr. Clarke (the C.C.C. secretary). The C.B.U., therefore, tries to dishonour one whom the Crest Club, and, indeed, the whole Fancy, delight to honour. Who is the sufferer?

ONE WHO KNOWS.

The Distribution of the Nightingale.

SIR,—Perhaps I may be permitted a few words of explanation re the small sketch-map which appeared in last week's number. When the perfect bird-book comes to be written, I think it will contain a series of maps showing the distribution of each species. In other words, I think the idea is sound, and it was very good of our Editor to allow me to attempt to sketch a "Nightingale-Map." I coloured the winter area black and the summer area grey with a neutral tone of white, but I see that in the reproduction the shaded lines representing the summer area have got smudged with black (owing to the lines filling up with ink in the printing process), thus in some copies of CAGE BIRDS representing the Nightingale as inhabiting England and France during the winter, besides smudging over certain portions I had left unshaded, such as Cornwall, etc. I see clearly that such maps ought to be on a larger scale and reproduced by a different method. If I drew another such map I should tint it with two distinct colours (such as green and blue): by thinning down these colours one could show in which districts the species was scarce and in which it was plentiful. Also I think, on reflection, that the division between the winter and summer areas should not be a straight line (as I drew it), but should show the actual southern limits of the nesting area. Thus, in the case of the Nightingale, it should be somewhat semi-circular, starting from a point on the West Coast of Morocco, trending northwards towards the sea coast and sweeping more southwards as it reached Egypt.

Proposed New Cage Bird Society for Edinburgh and District.

SIR,—I have much pleasure in announcing that a meeting of the above was held on 21st January, when it was resolved to form a new cage bird society for Edinburgh and District with a radius of twelve miles—open to all comers within the radius. The conditions of membership are simply an entrance fee of 6d., with an annual subscription of 2s. 6d. per member, which entitles members to ten free entries at annual show (additional entries 3d. per bird), a free copy of rules, free ticket to annual show, and privilege of competing for specials. There is no booking of hens. It is anticipated there will be a large influx of members for such a nominal subscription, which undoubtedly appeals to all working men fanciers and to novices. Fanciers affiliated with any other cage bird clubs or societies are not debarred from becoming members. A further meeting is to be held on February 4th, at 7.30 p.m., in Cairns Memorial Church Hall, Gorgie Road (adjoining Hearts Football Park), for the purpose of electing office bearers, fixing show date, etc. The total membership to date is 15. Fanciers and friends who find it impossible to be present at meeting and are desirous of becoming members may forward their names to me, when I shall also be pleased to give any further information desired.

Proposed New C.B.S. for Eastwood (Notts).

SIR,—I am desired by a large number of cage bird fanciers in the Eastwood District to announce a meeting that is being called for Saturday, February 4th, 1911, at the Three Tons Inn, Eastwood, at 7 p.m., to form a cage bird society, when all fanciers are heartily invited to attend. Will those fanciers who have promised to become members please look up other fanciers, and let us have a real good meeting?

VERY INTERESTED.

SIR,—Having been informed that there is every prospect of a cage bird society being formed in Eastwood (Notts) district, I think this absurd, seeing that the Codnor Park and Dist. C.B.S. is within three miles of Eastwood (which has good train service). The C.P. and D. has a radius of 20 miles for membership. Then there is Ilkeston within a few miles of Eastwood. Can one wonder why so many societies are in difficulties, when there are so many societies within so few miles of each other? What I suggest, and am confident would be beneficial to Eastwood and Codnor Park, is for the societies to come to terms and amalgamate together as one society (Codnor Park and Eastwood). The Codnor Park has a membership of 32, and has a prospect of six more new members next meeting night. Can Eastwood find as many? If so, and we can arrange to join each other as one society, we could boast of being one of the strongest societies in Notts or Derbyshire. I can say without fear of contradiction that the majority of the Codnor friends are willing to join in with our Eastwood friends, and make one good society, and to hold meetings and shows alternately in each district (Codnor Park and Eastwood). I have been informed of a meeting being called at Eastwood on February 4th at 7 p.m., when I hope to be there; also, I hope to take a few members of the Codnor P. and D. with me. Will the C.P. and D. members try to be there (Three Tons Inn, Eastwood), and assist me?

J. H. MITCHELL,
Hon. Sec. C.P.C.B.S.

Proposed New Linnet Club for Brandon Colliery and District.

SIR,—A meeting will be held at Mrs. Burrell's Colliery Inn, Brandon, Durham, on Saturday, Feb. 4th, at 7 p.m., to form a Linnet Club for fanciers within a 15-miles radius. Will all fanciers please attend or send in their names to the secretary, who will supply them with full particulars after the meeting?

The Late Bangor (County Down) Show.

SIR,—On opening my CAGE BIRDS, I was surprised to read the letter of "Hybrid Breeder," in which he alleges that our society has not paid over the prize money and specials won at our recent show. We paid out the prize money and specials both to members and non-members on the night of the show, and to the best of my knowledge our secretary (Mr. Pidduck) sent on the amounts due to the very few exhibitors who did not attend in person. I am treasurer of the society, and responsible for its funds, and as I am recognised as a man of probity and good standing in the locality, I cannot permit any mis-statements of this nature, as it reflects upon my personal credit. I have never heard of any claim, or even of any dispute, in regard to prize money, and I assure "Hybrid Breeder" that if he writes to me personally, or to our secretary, his case shall have immediate attention. After this warning, if he makes any further libellous statements under cover of a nom-de-plume I will consider his letter as a reflection on my personal character, and shall instruct my solicitor to apply to you for his name and address. I am afraid there must be some vindictive motive, probably due to jealousy, in his writing to you, before applying in a business-like manner to the proper quarter for the money which he alleges is due to him. Allow me to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Geddes, of Larne, for his kind and appreciative letter, both in regard to myself and our show, which appeared in your issue of the 7th inst.

D. E. ALEXANDER.

[We need hardly say that had we considered "Hybrid's" letter to be anything more than just an enquiry as to prize money due, it would have found no place in our columns. We regret that Mr. Alexandor (as treasurer of the society) should read into it a reflection upon himself—of his "probity and good standing" there can be no question. If the secretary states that all prize money has been paid and specials sent out, then there is seemingly some misunderstanding with regard to "Hybrid Breeder's" plaint.—EDITOR.]

The Mystery of Siberian Goldfinches Dying.

SIR,—I have been greatly interested in the letters in your two recent issues on the subject of "Siberian Goldfinches." Previous to the last two years I had only kept British Goldies, and rarely, if ever, lost one, so almost thought myself an expert on keeping Goldies. I'm not so proud now, as, having purchased several expensive Siberian Goldies, I have never been able to get one through the moult. I have tried no end of medicinal remedies, but they have been of no avail. Personally, I do not believe in medicines, as a rule. The only remedy I have ever found to be beneficial to an ailing Goldfinch has been a dose of Epsom salts. An experienced fancier in Scotland tells me that he was never able to moult Siberians until he used Parrish's chemical food. He gave about twelve drops in the drinking water before and during the moult. I have not tried this remedy yet, as I only received this information recently. However, I intend to try it this next season, and I pass the advice on as I received it. In my humble opinion an outdoor aviary should be the solution of the difficulty, and as I have now erected a small one, I intend trying to moult a Goldie outside, and another indoors on the above-named treatment. When Siberian Goldies go wrong at other times than during the moult, I attribute the cause to the feeding on inga seed before the birds get into the hands of the public. The inga seed being very rich causes a diseased liver, and though the symptoms do not always appear for a time, they are bound to come eventually. Now, if kept in an outdoor aviary, the birds get plenty of exercise and the liver trouble is checked, though not altogether eradicated. Consequently, soon after being caged again, after being in the aviary, the disease (or whatever it may be) asserts itself again, owing to the limited exercise in the cage. I have had only a short experience with an open ontdoor aviary, but in future I intend to moult all my wild birds outside. As there are quite a number of enthusiastic fanciers here in Walsall (members of our newly-formed society) who are keen on acquiring all the knowledge that can be gained, especially on the above subject, I hope to hear from your readers why very few house-moulted Siberians are for sale.

ANNUAL DINNER OF THE LONDON & PROVINCIAL O.S.

It was not a large, but an extremely festive and select gathering of metropolitan fanciers that gathered together on the occasion of the L. and P.O.S. annual dinner, held at the Horse Shoe Hotel, Tottenham Court Road, W.C., on Thursday, Jan. 19th last. Mr. G. Crabb filled the chair with his accustomed facility and dignity, placing the various speakers at their ease and introducing the items of entertainment with well-selected words. The repast was on the usual generous and carefully-considered scale, and all present enjoyed themselves immensely. The following list will give some idea of the company present: Mr. Crabb, Mrs. Crabb, Mr. T. Heath, Mr. H. K. Picard, Mr. W. Martin, Mr. Geo. Clatworthy, junr., Mr. Will E. Brown, Mr. O. George Webb, Miss Phyllis Rowell, Miss Alice M. Clarke, Mr. Edgar W. Law, Mr. Chas. W. Law, Mr. George Jeffrey, Mr. J. Oldaker, Mrs. Oldaker, Mrs. Law, Mr. V. H. Todman, Mr. George Clatworthy, Mr. W. Shearer, Mr. Geo. Gardner, Mr. H. Goodchild, Mr. T. Miller, Mr. Hazell, Mr. L. J. Richardson, Mrs. Richardson, Mr. Mortlock, Mrs. Mortlock, Mr. Robson, Mrs. Robson, Mr. T. R. Trower, Mr. John E. Clark, Mr. W. Gilbert, Mr. Geo. Thurling, Mr. R. J. Pretty, Mr. F. S. Matthes, Mr. C. T. Maxwell, Mr. G. H. Conzens, and Mr. F. Carl.

Having done justice to the good things provided and drunk the loyal toast with musical honours, the guests were treated to a rare exposition on the pianoforte by Mr. Jeffrey, and an interesting address from Mr. Crabb, who, in proposing the toast "Success to the L. and P.O.S.," dwelt on the interesting events of the past year, and made an appeal to members to support with all their powers the forthcoming Palace Show. He referred feelingly to the regrettable but unavoidable absence of Messrs. Ramsden and Dobson, and hoped both gentlemen would soon be restored to their regular state of health. The L. and P.O.S. had not had a very exciting year, but had pursued the even tenour of their way with their usual energy and spirit. Mr. Tringham had given place to Mr. Law in the position of secretary, and he hoped each present member would endeavour to aid the efforts of that gentleman by "catching a pal," and making him join the flock. They had had the misfortune to lose their president, Lord Decies, through untimely death. Touching on the subject that he confessed was a favourite of his, he asked for specimens of prize birds to be sent him after demise, with the object of being included in the L. and P.O.S. collection of stuffed birds. Mr. Crabb further referred to the very satisfactory balance of £10 6s. 2d. to the credit of the Society, and expressed complete gratification at the maintenance by the L. and P.O.S. of a thoroughly creditable financial position, free from debts and anxieties.—Mr. Mortlock, responding to the toast, paid a tribute to Mr. Crabb and the other officials for the work they had accomplished.—Mr. Carl proposed the toast of "The Ladies," and Mr. Conzens made a bright and felicitous reply.—Mr. Oldaker gave the toast of "The Visitors," and Mr. Anderson responded. The musical part of the evening was very agreeably carried out by Mr. Geo. Jeffrey, Messrs. Brown, Martin, Clatworthy, West and Hart. Messrs. Rowell and Clarke. Altogether the L. and P.O.S. may be cordially complimented upon the unqualified success of its latest dinner, and Mr. Law is entitled to our congratulations for the masterly way in which he controlled the arrangements of a most enjoyable social function.

Kindly thank the many readers of "CAGE BIRDS" who answered my advert. for Rollers. I could only reply to those who sent a stamp, as I had replies from all parts of England, also from Ireland, Scotland, and Wales. Wish "CAGE BIRDS" every success.—R. SWIFT (Leeds).

I wish to thank all fanciers who replied to my advert. in "CAGE BIRDS," as I had over 40 applicants for Finches too numerous for me to answer individually. J. L. THORNTON (Halifax).

Notes from Erin.

SLIGO Show proved one of the greatest successes of the season. Messrs. Mulligan and Tighe are to be heartily congratulated upon their great achievement, and on the manner in which they worked the fixture.

DERRY Show, by all appearance, has come to stay. Although the classification was not encouraging, the show was well supported by the prominent fanciers. It is to be hoped that next season the classes will be well increased, and that they will hold their show under the patronage of the specialists clubs. This season, too, their show dates were but badly advertised, and many would-be supporters knew nothing whatever about a show being held, they not even receiving a schedule. Now, it stands to reason that a show must be advertised and brought before the public generally if it is to be a success.

MRS. TAYLOR is to be congratulated on her success at this show. With fourteen birds out she secured three 1sts, four 2nds, three 3rds, three v.h.c., one c. and four specials. It will be seen that every bird was honoured with a card. Surely this is a record of which any of us would be proud, and as this is practically Mrs. Taylor's first season at open shows, she must feel pleased with her achievement. This should be a great encouragement to novices generally. CLOSED RING.

In the Courts.

Parrot Performs Before the Bench.

An amusing case was heard at Suffolk Assizes on January 20th, when Mrs. Garrod, of Western Road, Brighton, sued William Saunders, a bird fancier, of Ipswich, for the recovery of a Parrot, a grey African bird, said to be valuable. Mrs. Garrod declared that when selling her house in Soane Street, Ipswich, she took the Parrot in lieu of an extra £25 she wanted. The Parrot was to be kept by defendant for 2s. a week, but he gave it up to a Mrs. Bird, a greengrocer, who claimed it after seeing it in the shop of the defendant. It was claimed that the bird could whistle, could imitate fowls and ducks, and call "Rats."

Mr. Elliston (counsel for the defendant) said the bird used to say: "Poor Joe Pardon, this 's enough to make anybody swear."(Laughter.)

Mrs. Bird said the Parrot could whistle "Jack and Jill went up the hill.' She saw the bird first after losing it in defendant's shop, and after going to the police station with Mr. Saunders, she fetched it home. On reaching some it said: "It's enough to make anybody swear." (Laughter.)

The Parrot was brought into court, and Mrs. Bird got it to perform tricks. The jury came to the conclusion that the bird belonged to Mrs. Bird, and judgment was entered for defendant. —"Daily News."

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners-up.

*Following An Example.

A man liviug here has a Parrot, which one cold day last month was watching some little girls giving some crumbs to some Sparrows in a bush. The Parrot went and got some crumbs also. He flew out of the window and went to the bush where the girls were, and put some soaked bread by it for the birds, and then flew away. He did this for several days afterwards. —Sent by David T. Dyer (age 14), Mountain Hare, Pencoed.

Lost and Found.

My father and a companion kept some money in a hole near a rabbit-hutch. One day, in going to get 6d., to their dismay they found all the money gone. Each blamed his sisters for hiding it, which they denied. A year afterwards a high fence was blown down, when all the money lost was found and had been lying along the top rail. It had been carried there by a Magpie which belonged to my father.—Duncan McTellan (age 8), Angrey, Barrhead Road, Pollokshaws.

*My Little Friends.

Not very long ago, when the snow was on the ground, three little Sparrows came hopping up to our door to find something to eat, but they flew away disappointed. When I saw they were gone, I got a piece of bread, and crumbled it on the ground. Then I watched through the keyhole of the door. The little Sparrows soon came again, and with them a Robin and a Wagtail, and they ate their meal very heartily. This I did every morning, and soon the five birds became my little friends.—Sent by Doris Whiting, Brockford, nr. Stowmarket, Suffolk.

Useful Enamelling Frame.

Sent by Mr. T. Burns, 30, Hammond Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Here is a sketch of a frame which readers will find very useful when enamelling loose wire fronts any size, particularly show-cage fronts. It only requires four pieces of wood—two pieces 24 inches long, and two pieces 18 inches long. The top cross piece is to be nailed on; the bottom cross piece to be left loose. Then take a bradawl and bore a hole at each corner, and four others about an inch apart, using a nail or wood peg dropped in any hole as required. Bore four holes ¼ deep in top cross bar, and four holes in the bottom cross bar ¼ inch deep, for holding loose fronts in position while enamelling. This frame can be moved with ease to get the light upon it in any position.—T. Burns.

An Aviary Flight Perch.

Sent by J. Lowe, 25, Watkin Street, Swansea.

I send you a drawing of an ideal perch for a flight in an aviary. It can be easily cut out by anyone who can use a fret saw. Any wood can be used to cut these perches. They look splendid in a flight, and do not take up much room. I have already fitted up an aviary with them belonging to a friend of mine. Two birds, I may add can rest on one perch. The bracket I cut out of 3-8 in. wood, and I affix it by means of a screw, as shown in sketch. The perches are 5 inches long, and can be taken out easily for cleaning purposes.—J. Lowe.

The Crystal Palace Show.

Full Particulars of the Entry and Some of the Special Attractions.

A total of exactly 2,600 entries has been obtained for the Crystal Palace show, to be held on February 3, 4, 6 and 7 next. On Tuesday evening last CAGE BIRDS' representative was again, by the courtesy of Mr. J. W. Ramsden, the popular show manager, granted an interview, and given an opportunity of seeing how this year's entry compares with previous totals. And a striking comparison it proved, for our representative found that only on two occasions —in 1901 (the first year of Mr. Ramsden's management), when the entry was 2,633, and in 1909 (the "Jubilee year") when it reached the maximum of 2,832—has this year's total of 2,600 been beaten. We are asked to state that this magnificent result has been achieved in the face of opposition from more than one quarter.

The total number of exhibitors is 702, which includes a large percentage of new and "one bird" exhibitors. Entries have been made from as far away as Fort William, Peebles, Banff, Inverness and Belgium.

The entry has its disappointing features as well as its pleasing ones. The Scotch Fancies and Belgians, and the class for Magpies, Jackdaws, Jays and Choughs, on account of the paucity of the entries, are cancelled. Norwich Greens are somewhat poor in number, as also are the foreign birds, the latter owing, we were given to understand, to the fear on the part of English exhibitors of a possible "Continental invasion." These disappointments apart, there is nothing but of gratifying moment to record.

We give below the entries in the Canary classes:

The Canary Classes.

Norwich Plainheads (Champ.)	183
Ditto Ditto (Novice)	98
Crests, Etc. (Champion)	101
Ditto (Novice)	17
Yorkshires (Champion)	298
Ditto (Novice)	169
Yorkshire Greens	54
Norwich ditto	26
Cinnamons	29
Lancashires	22
Lizards	25
Border Fancies	193
Frills	14
A.O.V. Can. (Champ.)	10
Ditto (Novice)	12
Limit Classes (Canaries)	199

There is a magnificent increase as compared with last year's total in the champion Norwich section, although there is a slight decrease in the novice section. The champion Crest classes were cancelled at last year's show, the entries being so poor; but this year the entry here is no fewer than 101. The number of novice exhibits in this section remains the same. The Crests, taken all over, are, Mr. Ramsden said, the finest lot the Palace has seen for some years. Border Fancies last year were good in number, but this year they are better still, being 36 ahead. Yorkshire, too, show a gratifying increase in the number of entries. In the champion section the total is 298 in the 16 classes provided; and in the novice section there is a total of 169. The champions are 78 more than last year, and the novices 54.

The Mules, British and Foreign Birds.

The Mules and Hybrids this year number 151 in the champion section, and no fewer than 48 in the novice classes (scheduled this year for the first time), making a total of 199. A noticeable feature of the novice Mule section will be the astonishing number of Hybrids, including specimens of the latest crosses.

In the champion British bird section (with the one class cancelled as stated above) the entry is excellent. Mr. J. F. Dewar's four classes (Bullfinch cock, ditto hen, Goldfinch and Linnet) have drawn an entry of 119; Mr. Allen Silver's nine classes (the remainder of the hardbills), 175; and Mr. W. Swaysland's ten classes (the remainder of the British birds), 121. The British Limit class "pulls" a total of 14. The novices have come up well in the British bird section, the six classes (judge, Mr. H. Norman) drawing no fewer than 88 birds.

The foreign birds total 102, and include a number of very rare and interesting specimens.

Some Attractions.

The chief attraction at this year's show, at least so far as the general public is concerned, will undoubtedly be a "talking Canary," a genuine specimen of which will be on view in the A.O.V. Canary (champion) class. This bird is for sale at £20, which sum Mr. Ramsden thinks will soon be forthcoming. The bird, we were informed, talks like a Parrot. Among other phrases which it says distinctly are "Dear boy,' "Joey, you're a dear," "Kiss your missus, pretty boy."

Another conspicuous feature of the show will be the large number of rare-feathered birds, these including a pied Sparrow, a pied Linnet, a pied Thrush, a white Goldfinch, a white Bullfinch, a white Redpoll, a black Hawfinch, and a black Bullfinch. Three white Canaries have been entered for the A.O.V. class.

Mr. J. W. Ramsden, of 11, Josephine Ave, Brixton, S.W., again has the sole management of the show. Letters intended for him should be addressed direct to the Crystal Palace during the Show. All exhibits, it should be noted, must be at the Crystal Palace on Thursday, February 2nd; if they are not, they will have to be marked "too late for competition."

We are asked by Mr. Ramsden to state that he has received a form from Bournemouth entering three Mules in the novice section; but no name and address are enclosed. He will be glad if the exhibitor will communicate with him.

When our representative called on Mr. Ramsden, he found him busily at work on the catalogue, getting it ready to send off to the printers. He was receiving quite invaluable assistance from Mrs. Ramsden, whose keen interest in the successful and able management of the show is second only to her husband's. Mr. George Ramsden, too (a son of the genial J. W. R.), helps his father a great deal—a silent but certain worker.

The annual judges' lunch (tickets for which are obtainable from Mr. Ramsden at 2s. 6d. each) will take place in the Grill Room of the Palace (covers at 1.45 p.m.) on February 3rd, when Mr. Geo. Crabb will preside.

Club Meetings.

Clubs wishing to hold meetings during the show should make early application to Mr. J. W. Ramsden, who has the letting of the boardroom, and other convenient rooms, for this purpose. But no more rooms are at liberty for the Saturday. The Crest Club meeting is on Saturday, at 3 (room, see CAGE BIRDS stall) and the National British Bird and Mule Club at 6.30, in the Board Room. The Cage Bird Union meeting will be held at 3.30. The Southern Norwich P.C. meeting at 3.0 in the Press Room.

Results of the Judging.

TELEGRAMS or other communications asking for results of the judging cannot be answered by the show authorities. Under these circumstances CAGE BIRDS will be pleased to supply exhibitors with the result in any class upon compliance with the following rules:

1. Fully stamped and addressed postcards or telegraph forms must reach us, at 154, Fleet Street, not later than Thurs., February 2nd.

3. All the applicants for results at the Palace must write RESULT on top left-hand corner of the envelope in which the postcard or telegraph form is sent to us.

NOTE.—We cannot undertake to deal with any results other than by postcard or telegram.

Excursions from the Country.

Mr. Ramsden has made arrangements with the various railway companies for the running of excursion trains to the Crystal Palace, a summary of which will be found below.

THE SHOWS.

GLASGOW.

Glasgow and Dis. C.B.A. Show, held Jan. 20 and 21 This society has been recently formed to still further popularise bird culture, and to extend the good work already being done by other Glasgow societies. A capital set of office-bearers have been appointed, viz., President, R. B. Jarvie; vice-presidents, W. Hutchison and R. Jeffrey: committee, A. K. Chalmers, H. Jamieson, S. F. Wood, A. Roulstone, W. Paling, R. Thompson, D. Graham, T. Godber, T. Forrest, G. Skinner, A. Sloan, A. Maxwell, F. Taylor, R. B. Gibb, H. Appleyard, C. Martin, J. Lawrie, J. Brown, J. Yates, and J. Kidd; auditors, A. Macfarlane and C. B. Whitelaw; treas. and assist. sec., R. Heggie; secretary, F. Bowman. These gentlemen managed the show in a thorough Scotch business manner. The Drill Hall, Taylor Street, the venue of the show, is a very spacious building, with abundance of top light, and is capable of holding 3,000 exhibits if required. The staging was in tiers round the hall and down the centre in two rows. These were nicely decorated, and the show presented a very pleasing appearance. The different sections were made up of Norwich, Crests, Borders, Yorkshires, Hybrids, British, and Foreign birds. A fine all-round entry of over 800 birds was obtained, which seemed to be only a fair entry, according to some of the officials, but the writer thinks it a very fine entry for a first attempt, and one which gives every encouragement for another year. Norwich were a very fine lot indeed, both in quality and quantity. Crests were not very great, but a few nice ones were on view. Borders were very good in quality, but not so numerous as the Norwich, or as they were expected up here; still there was a good average quantity on view. Hybrids were very good all through, and several noted cracks were present, taking leading honours. Messrs. Duncan and Logan's clear yellow Linnet-Canary coming back again to premier honours after his recent Bathgate disqualification as a Canary. It is a grand bird. A protest was lodged against a couple of birds in this section, but they stood the ordinary spirit test without yielding up any stain. Britishers were quite the main feature of the show, and there was a capital all-round display of high-class exhibits. Mr. McQuiston's Chough is about the finest ever benched, and it had quite a field day, capturing first in its class and no less than three valuable specials besides. The classes for British field-moulted birds and the hen classes were grand, and the Linnets and hen Bullfinches were real eye-openers. What a country Scotland is for special prizes! Here we find handsome challenge shield, cups, goblets, bowls, medals, all kinds of food stuffs, show cages, cash specials, and even a whole sheep, and others too numerous to mention. They ran into hundreds, and these besides five money prizes per class are indeed something to go for. The excellent band of stewards did their work well, and all judging was got through in fine time. A capital lunch was served up at noon, and later an excellent dinner was done full justice to by the workers and officials. Judges: Norwich and Crests, Mr. Allan Chalmers; Borders, Mr. A. Walker; Yorkshires, Mr. J. B. Paterson; Hybrids, British, and Foreign, Messrs. J. F. Dewar and Charles Houlton, alternate classes right through. On the whole, the decisions were well received. We think this open show, just at this time in January, has come to stay for Glasgow, as it does not clash seriously with any other. The show was under the patronage of the Scottish Plainbead Club, the Scottish British Bird and M.C., the Border Fancy Club, and the Yorkshire C.C. of Scotland. Yorkshires were indeed a splendid lot all through, although confined to residents in Scotland, and it is quite certain their owners need not fear English exhibitors sending their best if the classes were opened to the kingdom, as they ought to be. Borders were a some what poor entry for Glasgow. Messrs. Patterson won the B.F.C. medal, but as they have already secured their allotted numbers the next was Mr. Lambie's grand young yell. green, and the win was very popular.

HEMSWORTH.

First annual open show held Union Room, King's Head, January 21st. In the Canary section some fine birds were benched. Messrs. Ogden Bros. put down some fine Yorkshires, whilst in the Norwich Messrs. Hirst, Entwistle, Robinson, and Miss Flemons staged some grand birds. The British birds turned up well. Some fine Bullfinches and Goldfinches were benched. We would advise the committee to extend the classification here another year, as we are sure the Britishers are getting more numerous on the show bench every year. Mr. J. W. Gillings makes an ideal secretary, and he was ably backed up by a hard-working committee, as follows:—Thos. Tait, Esq. (president), Messrs. Taylor, Wyatt, Brooks, Fox, Lord, Crow, and last, but not least, our old friend, Harry Townley, looking as well and working as hard as ever amongst the birds. We wish the Hemsworth Society every success, and with a few more classes added to the present classification we feel sure they will get a bumping entry next season. Mr. W. Mundell (Bradford) placed the cards.

WARRINGTON C.B.S.

Second 10-mile radius show, held January 12. It was better supported than the first one, which speaks well for its future. With such well-known fanciers at the head of affairs, assisted by an energetic secretary, they cannot help but be supported. A nice list of specials was got together, some given for outside exhibitors. The placing of the awards was left to Mr. J. Thornton, who seemed to please everybody.

RAMSEY (I.O.M.)

Eleventh annual show held January 12, at the Palace. The show being the last of the Manxland shows, naturally there was a drop in entries, but quality was well to the fore. Yorkshire and British birds were well represented. Some "right 'uns" were staged. Norwich might have been better, but Yorkshires seem to be the popular variety. There was very keen competition for the Ballamor cup, which fell to Mr. Teare's ticked yellow, Douglas, etc., winner, Mr. Crellin's Norwich taking Spratts cup. The placing of the cards was left to Mr. Metcalfe (Liverpool), and we heard no grumbling.

YOU MUST ADMIT

that unless my Rollers were all that I claim for them publicity would do me harm instead of good. I have repeatedly said in this and other papers that my Leipzig Rollers are far better value than any other Rollers on the market, and I want every intending purchaser to test the truth of this by having one on a week's trial, and one from elsewhere on similar terms; test them side by side, and if mine is not better value at a lower price, return it and back comes all your money. I now have a tremendous stock of pure Leipzig Rollers, all in full song, day and gaslight, with long hollow rolls, sweet silvery trills, soft roulades, waterbubble runs, piccolo trill, bell, harp and gong notes, and jug-jug of Nightingale; price 7/6 and 8/6 each; special handmasters, which excel in the hollow bell, hollow and bass rolls, 10/- and 12/6 each. Leipzig Roller hens, 2/6 each, 4/6 couple. I also have a limited quantity of genuine glucke bred contest Rollers in full song, and guaranteed fit for immediate contest singing, price 15/- and 20/- each; hens, guaranteed same strain, 3/6 each. These contest Rollers are of purest blood Germany can boast of, and are "the thing" for connoisseurs. Roller singing cabinet cages, with loose fronts and folding doors, 2/6 and 3/6 each; ordinary singing box cages, 1/6, 1/9, 2/- each. Following letters are entirely unsolicited, and never before been published: "2, Ivy Cottages, Horace-st., Boston, January 28th.—Sir,—It affords me genuine pleasure to give you another order for birds. The Roller you sent few weeks ago continues to give entire satisfaction. Please send on following birds.—Yours, Chas. Long." "Patrick-st., Kilkenny, Jan. 28th.—Sir,—Received Canary safe. He is a beauty, and sang same day. I am very thankful to you for sending such a nice bird.—Yours, M. Corish." "81, Devoushire-st., Sunderland, Jan. 29th.—Sir,—Birds safely to hand. Please accept many thanks for straightforwardness and promptness. If others leave selection to you the same as I did I am sure they will get every satisfaction. I am really disgusted with some I have got (from elsewhere).—Yours, J. Dodd." "89, Adam-st., Abertillery, Jan. 27th.—Sir,—Received two Leipzig Rollers safe, and am quite satisfied with them.—Yours, A. Padfield." "489, Bolton-rd., Darwen, Jan. 27th.—Sir,—Roller arrived safe, and after week's trial I am quite satisfied with him. Thanking you for prompt attention, yours, R. Shillitoe." "Healey, Stocksfield, Jan. 26th.—Sir.—Received both birds all right, and am very pleased with them. This is second lot I have had from you, and you have given every satisfaction.—Yours, Alex. Findley." "66, Nevill-st., Llanelly., Jan. 26th.—Sir,—Please send following. The Roller you sent in November gives every satisfaction, and is equal to those in town at three times the price.—Yours, J. Moremon." "62, Walves, Toulington, near Bury, Jan. 24th.—Sir,—Bandmaster I received last week is doing nicely, and am thoroughly satisfied. Thanking you for fair transaction, yours, W. Chadwick." "Upper Princes-st., Baillymena, Jan. 24th.—Sir,—I must thank you for Canary; he is a stormer, and no mistake. I am more than pleased with him. He sang five minutes after being put in cage. He is best I ever had, and I have had some good ones in my time, but he beats them all.—Yours, A. McLean." "215, Monkswood, Newtongrange, Scotland, Jan. 23rd.—Sir,—Received birds safe. The cock is a lovely singer, and well worth money. I have two others I bought this year, but they are no class beside yours.—Yours, Jas. Hutchinson." "122, Church-st., Colbourne, Jan. 20th.—Sir,—Received Roller with thanks, and am very pleased with it. He was well packed. I have had a friend or two in to listen to him, and they say he is a storming singer.—Yours, David Hayes." "Flitchin, Jan. 20th.—Sir,—Received Roller safe, and am quite satisfied. He started singing soon as unpacked.—Yours, C. Counnion." Please note—Every Canary is safely and warmly packed (no matter how cold the weather) in special travelling cages, with food and water, and sent on full week's approval at my risk, either on receipt of cash or deposit system of "Cage Birds," and unless bird gives every satisfaction and realises your every expectation it has only to be returned and the whole of your money is promptly refunded. Every genuine Leipzig Roller is stamped on wing "Hans Weber, Leipzig," and as I am the only importer of this strain, no other man can sell them, unless he first purchases from me. All are guaranteed to sing twenty hours in each twenty-four, day or gaslight, so send to the importer if you want best value obtainable.

JUST YOU COME

Come and see for yourself who has the largest and best collection of Canaries in England. I use no bluff. I have the rooms and the birds. In fact, I occupy the largest business premises in the town. My Roller Canaries are trained and kept in rooms to themselves, far away from all other birds, thus hearing and knowing nothing but the pure Roller song. I can show you absolutely the best collection of Yorkshires, Norwich, Borders, and Rollers it has ever been your privilege to see, and my prices are within the reach of all. I have no fancy prices; every bird sent out guaranteed the best possible value for money, and you have the birds seven days on approval at my risk, for my one desire is that every customer shall be fully satisfied. If you cannot come and select birds for yourself, allow me to send your requirements, carriage paid to your door. I will give your order every personal attention. Here are a few of the letters received this week (not a lot of old, trumped-up rubbish); the originals, with thousands of others, all open for your inspection. Note the dates:—"28/1/11. Malpas-st., Cwmbran,—Received bird safe, and he is a lovely songster. I have given him a fair trial, and will most certainly recommend you to my friends. Thanking you for your straightforward dealing, W. Haywood." "27/1/11. Jamaica Cottage, Malvern,—Received Roller; he is a beauty; started to sing half-hour after arrival. I am quite satisfied.—G. Brown." 22/1/11. Norton-rd., Retsall.—I acknowledge safe arrival in good condition of two Rollers. I am well satisfied with them.—J. Newton." "28/1/11. 64, Kennedy Villas, Dublin.—Received Roller; am very pleased with him; he commenced singing next day. Thanks for your straightforward dealings.—S. Donnlly." 27/1/11. 30, Lime-rd., Bedminster.—Received Rollers in pink of condition, and find I have got good value for money.—S. Dodden." 28/1/11. 10, Upper Lime-st., Gorscinon.—Received Roller safe and sound; am very pleased with it; commenced singing as soon as unpacked. Thanking you for the straightforward manner in which you dealt with me. I will recommend you to all my friends.—W. Phillbeye." I could fill this page with such letters as above received this month.
